Shouldn't have made any stupid fucking promises in the first place. It was clear that since the barrier incident at Siberia, that the relationship with Midori was going to develop much further.

Not everyone gives a fuck about write-ups. If they are not in Decultures posts, they might as well not exist. The fact that some of you are using Wendy's background for one argument or another is retarded.

Actually, here's a life tip in general. Do not make promises if you can help it. Especially when no one asks you to.

The thing to remember about our recent interactions with Wendy is that some of us assumed we were dreaming, or talking to a ghost.
We assumed that she wasn't real and that our actions would have no reprecussions; you know how when you lucid dream you get to fuck around doing stuff you normally wouldn't? Exactly.

When we kissed her and promised to get it right this time, we were making a promise to someone we assumed was no longer in this world, and the promise to get it right was about getting it right without her.

Were some people operating on assumptions or metaknowledge that Wendy was alive? Yes. Was it the entire voting base? Absolutely not. Is it a problem?
Of course, but its not so wildly far flung as some people would have us believe.

There's a pretty solid basis for feeling like this is either due to slowly going off the deep end, or at the very least some sort of Pinky shenanigans.

For one thing, we only started seeing Wendy-dreams after the procedure in Siberia, and the one time we met "in person" since was while we were missing the overwhelming majority of our blood, and our squadmates on overwatch didn't see anyone with us.

You guys, it doesn't really matter if Chiaki thought Wendy was real or not. What we need to keep in mind here is what Wendy interprets: regardless of how we interpreted the promise, she thinks that was pertaining to rekindling the relationship they once had.

It doesn't matter if we/Chiaki thought she was a hallucination or anything. She won't care about culpability or plausible denial. That's a terrible thing to say to her face when she feeling betrayed and is hurting in a bad way, anyway! We can't just say "but we didn't know" or "we didn't think our promise to you was real or that we were really accountable for it". The latter answer is a really really REALLY douchey attitude in general.

We're going to need to handle it carefully, tactfully and with a whole lot of empathy, when Wendy has the Fucking Talk with Chiaki.

Fucking this.

By all means keep writing them, but for fucks sake, don't bring them anywhere near the story and the characters in the quest, or if you must, leave it in the past.

Otherwise you just get endless shitstorms like we have ever since the Wendy writeups started getting close enough to the story to set off anons paranoia.

I'd hate to see something so entertaining become diminished because its spin-offs can't keep their distance.

Going through the archives, Yuu picked up Wendy being nearby.
We can piece together that it's Wendy because, while Yuu couldn't remember her name, she remembered that the presence she detected had a checkered scarf, fought with a kitchen knife, and was from the American Officio.
So, there's in-character information that Wendy is around and she was observing.

You nod your head as you continue to work on your pancakes. Yeah, it could be bad, you agree. The picture of the both of you getting out this early complicates things a bit, seeing as it paints a pretty big target on Midori's back. Everyone who's gunning for you would probably be gunning for her now, too.

Midori pales at this, while Kyoko blanches. "O-oi, aren't you blowing things out of proportion here, Murderface? I mean, yeah, there's that crazy Prophet chick to worry about, but they're not really gonna target Midori, right...? No one does that kind of underhanded thing--"

You cut off Kyoko with a glare. This Prophet killed a civilian, made her look like Tomoe Mami and mailed her severed head to you. Not only that, but her lackeys tried to attack you during a mission - and used the civilian audience as a collective hostage. So yeah, you're not exactly confident that this Prophet would take the high road, here. She wants to get to you, and it's a given that she'll target the people close to you to do it.

"..." Kyoko looks down sullenly at her food, as if she'd lost her appetite.

That said, you continue, it's not really something that could've been helped. It'd have been inevitable - if NECO didn't leak it, then regular Officio gossip definitely would've, and easily. It's just the fact that it's out NOW, and released by an unpredictable source like NECO, that irritates you.

And you're hoping to do something about that when you finally get face-to-face with NECO.

"A-ah. I...I see." Midori manages to compose herself now, at least. "I'm...I'm sorry, sempai. I didn't mean to complicate things, I just wanted--"

"Not your fault, Midorin, this is my screwup." The red-haired Eversor cuts in here, sighing. "I should've caught NECO before she got that shot off." She shakes her head, here.

"I really meant that, y'know, Murderface? When I said sorry. I really thought we were clear, and I wanted to focus on making sure you guys had a good time, and..."

You swallow the mouthful of pancake you'd been chewing, before shaking your head. You don't blame either of them, not even Kyoko. This all comes down to NECO, and you're going to deal with her as soon as you get to the Office.

"...Yeah, well, I'm still sorry. But I'm gonna make sure no one lays a hand on Midorin." It's here that she nods towards the Callidus. "I'll...I'll just go get stuff ready now, alright, Midorin? And sorry again, for lettin' the cat photograph you an' Murderface and everything."

"I-it's fine, Miss Kyoko." Midori hurriedly nods. "And yes, if it's not too much. I'd really appreciate it."

Kyoko gives you one last look before leaving the kitchen, heading directly outside. Kumatora looks back at the Eversor's retreating form, then at you, before getting up herself, a worried smile on her lips.

"I'd...I'd better make sure Kyoko-sempai gets it right." She clasps her gloved hands together. "Thank you for the food, and thank you for allowing me the honor of having breakfast with you, Warmaster."

She leaves the same way, but in a half-walk, half-run, intent on catching up with Kyoko. You could hear her calling out to the Eversor as soon as she leaves the cottage's premises. Leaving both you and Midori to finish your breakfast alone.

...Well. You didn't mean to do that, but...

"Is...is this Prophet as dangerous as you say she is, Chiaki?" Midori asks you, making you look up from your pancakes. "I mean, I know what she did to that poor girl, and from what we saw in the broadcast..."

It seems like Midori wants to know more about the Prophet. No wonder - you've only shared what you found out with Kyuubey.

How do you respond?

Yes, we need to do this.

And we might as well drag Kumatora back so we can task her and Midori with the records recovery we badly need done on our history.

Chiaki believes that Wendy knows a lot about her that she doesn't know herself, and while she wants to believe that Wendy's a hallucination, she knows stranger things has happened. There's also the bit about Wendles saying that she was brought back by Pinky, which pushes it over the edge.

So yes, Chiaki thinks Wendy is real, but a part of her is kind of doubting it. That's why she hesitated just before the kiss happened.

Something about this whole line of questioning rubs me the wrong way, but I can't put a finger on what it is, exactly. Just feels sort of whisper-down-the-lane-y to me, even if it is ultimately Decu's interpretation of things that affects how the storyline progresses.

It just feels weird to have a situation where what is ostensibly the inner monologue of a character driving them to make the choices that they do is divided on how to interpret a situation, only to suddenly learn that half of your internal monologue is incontrovertibly wrong.

But maybe that's just because I'm on this >>28879312 end of the spectrum.

Welcome to Thread 130, where we realized that some votes were being made on faulty assumptions and misremembered events, and that we've been doing it enough for characters in the story to notice.
And the worst part, is that it wasn't because that was the character we were playing, but simply due to peoples' own faulty memory causing a character to appear like that.

I dunno I think it is more Mami knows how much of an accomplishment getting Murderface able to not bite everything like a wild dog was so she thinks that baby steps are what are needed to build her up to someone really worth being

So she breaks down her expectations into small groups, once we stopped shooting kyoobs that was one level, being able to function on a basic human level is another. Remembering to bathe was another

We are slowly surpassing different levels of expectations and becoming more like a proper person to her

The first few Cooldown writeups were requests from Deculture deliberately pertaining to current events. Archival set out to write a separate story in-universe ~~that will tie in later~~, whereas the Wendy stuff was intended to be somewhat integrated into the story more or less from the start.

It's good to know there are people that do prefer the writeups be relevant, though, as the last couple of threads have had angry comments about keeping them the hell out of the main story.

NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/16/13(Mon)06:45 No.28897088

You tell Midori what you know about the Prophet. In low, hushed tones, you tell her everything you know about Mikuni Oriko and why you think she wants to kill you.

She takes it well enough. She keeps her questions short and concise, asking about details that you may have missed or glossed over instead of asking you to repeat things.

For a moment, you don't see the awkward, blushing girl you just had a date with - you see the Magical Girl in her, the Callidus trained from day one to be able to operate behind enemy lines. It's easy to forget about that kind of thing, you suppose, when all you see is her being nervous and shy around you.

Or you being rescued by her.

The things you miss when you're too busy having your ass saved.

You'll make it up to her. You're definitely going to.

>> ☐ Deculture 12/16/13(Mon)06:47 No.28897095

In any case, you also tell her about the Golden Weapon in Oriko's possession, about how you, Kharn and Malal had fought its original wielder once. And how it very nearly killed all three of you, had it not been for the Betrayer suddenly being bestowed a Golden Weapon of her own.

As you finish giving her the summary of what happened in the idol mission - about what Lucius told you - Midori is silent for a while, looking down at the remains of her breakfast. To her credit, she doesn't look frightened, or cowed - simply alert and attentive, turning what she'd learned over and over her head.

"I...should we tell Kyoko-san about this, sempai?" She says here, finally. "She talked to me about Oriko during our mission, and from what I remember she...well, she really likes her. As a friend, I think..."

How do you respond?

No. This is a stupid idea. Remember Kirika and how involving people didnt really work out.

>2) Get Kirika's help with talking Oriko down. Maybe get Sayaka's advice for dealing with Kirika.
I dont think that will work without handing the sword over to Oriko and then it will just add Kirika`s crazy to Oriko`s crazy so lets not do that.

>3) Try to find out who the other person with Oriko is. Could be another golden wielder or worse.
Let Midori handle that. Let her question the girls we captured, in the Barrier-Incident she prove more than once that she can be savvy about what people say and what to say to people. And she is our Aide, let her handle some stuff.

>4) Ask Mami why everyone is freakin targeting her. can we steer this into finding out about her golden weapon?
This is stupid. We already now that Oriko is targetting Mami because she knew that is the closest person to Murderface. That may change now since the kiss went viral.

And we already know that Mami has some secrets of her own, the last Phone-Entry spelled that out even for the slow ones.

>5) Talk to Pinky, maybe bring Kyoko or Sayaka. I'm worried about not time-stopping for so long.
Yes about talking to her. No about dragging Kyoko or Sayaka into it. If anything, Midori, but that only after we ask Midori`s Opinion on this.

Really, the whole thing hinges on how Kirika will react to learning that Ahriman is using Oriko as a puppet. Remember, Kirika and Oriko were really close.

If Kirika takes exception to this, then we'll probably have her help out with stopping the Prophet of her own free will.

Which is why we want Sayaka's read on the situation. Because we're shit at this, and Sayaka knows her better than anyone else and more than anyone else she doesn't want to see her dead or witched.

Can we really trust Kirika-Swords word on that? Of course she will say that we totally should hand her over Oriko so she "talk" to her or something.

There is only a miniscule chance that she will help us and she ends up with both weapons either way. Is it really worth the risk?

I would also like to point out our adventures with golden weapons so far:

- Ahriman mopped up the floor with Us, Kharn and Malal and she JUST had the staff at that time.
- Kirika mopped up the floor with us. We were extremly lucky and Misaka.
- Whatshisname wasnt even a meguca and went full Demonhost due to bangles. Again we had Kyoko and Tiny Pete.
- Kharn also mopped up the floor with us even though we had a golden weapon and Kharn wasnt even serious.

I dont you should take the prospect of battling Oriko using staff and sword, lightly.

Kilgore was his name.

And you bring up a good point; yes, Oriko is unContracted, but she has a Golden Weapon. We've seen firsthand that just because the wielded is mundane, that they're going to be anything that can be handled by regular MG means.
And unlike with Kilgore and Yuu, where the soul of the Golden Weapon didn't like the wielder, both Ahriman and Oriko are working together towards a common goal. So they may be more than we initially think.

You nod, here. Yes, you definitely have to tell Kyoko about Oriko being the Prophet. Even you know that Kyoko was rather enamored with the soft-spoken girl. You're just...well, you're not sure how to broach the subject with the Eversor without screwing it up somehow, without Kyoko going off to confront Oriko by herself. You could see that happening all too easily.

One thing's for sure, though - you're planning on asking Sayaka for help there. If there's anyone who could stop Kyoko from acting too rashly, it'd be your Equerry. She knows what makes Kyoko tick, after all, and would get her to see sense much more easily than you could.

Midori nods here, as well. "That sounds like it'd be for the best, sempai. Miss Sayaka telling her would blunt the shock some."

That's the idea. So, if she could make sure Kyoko doesn't hear about it until then--

"My lips are sealed, Sempai." She gives you a smile. "Thank you for telling me. About...about everything."

You shake your head. It's...well. You're surprised that she isn't freaking out about this. You did just confirm that she'll be in danger because of her association with you.

The green-haired Callidus smiles a bit wider, here, before carefully reaching forward and placing her hand over yours. Giving your fingers a squeeze.

"I'm not worried, Sempai. Well, maybe a bit." Midori nods here. "But I know Sempai, along with everyone else, will do their best. And, well, I don't mean to play down how dangerous the Prophet is, but after Siberia...I think I can manage." She smiles at you again, a shy but confident smile.

Ah. Siberia.

...About that. She never really told you about everything that happened there. Just...bits and pieces. You don't remember most of it yourself.

"I...I was told by Souji that I should be careful telling you about Siberia, Sempai. He says I should take it slow, to...not overwhelm you with it. And myself, too." It's here that she lets out a sigh. "I'm...I'm not sure of what happened myself, but I'll tell you what I know soon enough. Is that alright?"

You nod. Whenever she wants to, and whenever she's ready. You'll make time for it.

"Miss Midori!" It's here that Kumatora calls from outside. "Everything's set up! We're ready whenever you are!"

"We'll be right out!" Midori calls back, and she squeezes your hand again as she stands up. You blink here, and do the same. What's going on?

"W-well, just a little something, about...well, Sempai, about what happened in Siberia." The green-haired girl giggles softly. "Just a way to remember a friend."

You had more questions then, but you stay quiet instead as you let her lead you outside. To the cottage's backyard, facing the lake.

It's a bonfire. A small one, already lit and burning quite readily, the faint smell of lighter fluid evident from the smoke, along with the acrid stink of burning paper. A few ways from it, you see Kumatora cutting open boxes and throwing their contents into the bonfire - sheafs of white paper, some of them bound together, and all of them sporting writing and drawings on them.

"We were supposed to do this last night. Bonfire an' everything." Kyoko says from behind you as she carries what looks to be a huge bouquet of flowers, with a teddy bear nestled among the roses. "But, uh, well, that happened. So we're doing it this morning." She offers you an apologetic grin. "Sorry."

But a bonfire? What for? And what's the bouquet for?

"It's...well, it's for Wakaba Mirai, Sempai." Midori smiles. "Do you remember her?"

How do you react?

Which is why Midori is going to inevitably betray us after Chiaki confirms that there's nobody else she wants to date. Mami was in on it the whole time. That's why she encouraged our relationship in the first place.

so, i just finished watching the last episode, and before i go find a (hopefully) decent camrip of rebellion, i have three questions. when madoka rewrote the universe, did she change the incubators somehow? because kyuubey seemed less of an arse at the end. or was that just that he had less incentive to be a bastard?

secondly, just what the fuck was walpurgis?

Thirdly, what were the reality-breaks around homura's back in that last scene post-credits? was that madoka fluffing around, or just general magic?

Haven't seen Rebellion yet, but from the series itself and interview/extras stuff I've read:
>he had less incentive to be a bastard
Pretty much. The new system gave the Incubators zero reason to be manipulative and deceitful; the enemies that Magical Girls fought were created by normal people's emotional entropy, and there was no Witching.

>just what the fuck was walpurgis?
Implied to be an amalgamation event of the accumulated despair of Magical Girls throughout time; past, present, and future.

I'd say Kyuubey seems less of a bastard just because he has less incentive to, yeah. That and it just seems that way because he just gets that one scene post-reset.

Walpurgis night is simply an amalgamation of witches. I think they explained it as originally a single witch that combined and assimilated other witches through the ages. Might be due to a trait it originally had.

If you mean those wings, they're just some special magic she gains apparently, if going by the PSP game as it's her final skill there. I'd like to think that as being result of her memory of the previous timeline. When she uses it in the game Homura's lines are always about how she remembers (despite the entire game being pre-reset).

>> ☐ Anonymous 12/16/13(Mon)09:05 No.28898379

>>28898317
That's pretty much how I took it, only that it doesn't seem to be limited by current-time MGs - which is why it's always too damn powerful for anyone short of Madokami cheating the system; if Homura and co. become more powerful to defeat it, it retroactively gains the power of their witch potential. And the more Homura tries, the more she despairs about it, compounding the problem.

You blink, here. Yeah, you...you remember her. Not all that well, though - probably a side effect of the procedure you had. Wakaba Mirai...the girl you encountered with her and Kharn, during a bear hunt in Siberia. She wanted to take Midori back. You and Kharn stopped her. And she witched out just as you were interrogating her...

"She did, Sempai." Midori nods. And...she helped me, in the nightmare, while I was trying to rescue you. She helped me get you out of there, and..." It's here that her voice starts to falter. "She sacrificed herself to get me out of there, too."

"I met her once, actually," Kyoko cuts in as she hands Midori the bouquet. "Before the shit with the Third started. Brutal with her sword, and you had to watch out in case she summons a bear on you. But really very nice, and she never really went for the kill. Just enough that you'd back off, and she'd salute like it was a kendo match or something."

Midori smiles. "That's...that was Mirai-chan, all right. She wanted to be a Knight more than anything else. She wanted to...to join the Second Officio. But Jyuubey wouldn't let her transfer. She finally did manage to convince him once, though, and she left to take their trials." She shakes her head. "She didn't pass. We both cried about it for a week."

Another giggle escapes her lips, one breathy and weak, bordering on a sob. "I...I was sad that she didn't get in, but I was also secretly happy that she didn't. B-because that would've meant my losing the one friend I had in the Tenth. I...I never got to tell her about that, though. I never got to tell her so many things."

The green-haired Callidus exhales in a tremulous, shuddering sigh. "And I never...I never got to properly say goodbye to her like this. Everything happened so quickly, and...all I knew was that I was supposed to be the one saying goodbye to her. I was supposed to be the one who died. But she saved me, and...and.."

You watch as Midori reaches up to cover her mouth with a hand, her head bowed, and it's here that her shoulders start to shake. The plastic wrapping of the bouquet crinkling as she holds it together against her. Kyoko nudges you gently to go to her, cocking her head towards the Callidus in a pointed gesture - but before you could, Midori seems to compose herself, despite her now reddened, glistening eyes and flushed cheeks.

"I'm...I'm okay, sempai. I'm fine." She smiles at you again. "I promised her - and Miss Malal - that I wouldn't bother with the waterworks too much." She turns to Kyoko and nods. "Um, Miss Kyoko, if you please...?"

Kyoko nods in return, pulling out what looks like a worn prayer book from behind her. "Er, well, my dad was a practicing priest, so...I know how this goes. Sorta." She gives you a small smile, here, before flipping open to a bookmarked page. "Sorry if I get some parts wrong. I...I'm not really asked to do this kind of thing much, but I'll try my best."

"It's fine, Miss Kyoko." Midori shakes her head, working up a smile even you could tell she didn't really feel. "That much is enough."

And so it began. A short ceremony to pray for Wakaba Mirai's soul.

You've never been for things like these, but you get how important they are. How they not only gave respect to the departed, but also offered a note of finality, of closure, for those still mourning. For those still grieving.

You wonder idly, as you listen to Kyoko fervently lead all four of you in prayer - your hand firmly holding Midori's own - what yours will be like.

Who would stand here to pray for you? Who would mourn? Who would even bother turning up?

Probably no one, but...you hope at least even one would. So it wouldn't be the world's most pathetic posthumous ceremony.

But hoping for one to turn up is probably one too many, though. More than you would ever deserve.

The ceremony ends with Midori throwing the bouquet onto the bonfire. All four of you watch in silence as the flowers start to immediately wilt at the searing heat before finally catching flame. The teddy bear is the last to actually go up, its stubby little arms remaining open the entire time, for the hug that will never come.

"Hey, Murderface." Kyoko whispers as she steps up beside you, her gaze still on the bonfire. "I know what you're thinking, you know."

...Really? Does she read minds now, or something?

"Nah. But, you know. The occasion and everything." She nods towards the bonfire. "Um. Are...are you still angry with me over thing with NECO? Can we start planning for the eventual fuckup that will happen when we meet Wendy? the wifu wars are about to start having in game casualties if we don't get our shit together. the way i see it we have a few options

1. The wendy route: basically we tell her that midori was just a bed warmer till she showed up. while this would probably smooth things over with Wendy, im sure everyone else will hate us. Forever. Also this kills the Midori

2. The midori route: tell wendy that it was a stupid promise to make. that part of you loved her once, and that is still does, but murderface or kong or whoever it was is gone. the lingering feeling we have made us say that but the way we are now it wont work.

3. we tell them both that we are a terrible person and try to drown ourselves in alcohol and self loathing while shunning all social contact. i think this option is the most in character and may be the only way to unlock the harem route. the way i see it Midori and Wendy may bond over trying to save the only thing they have in common, chiaki.

tell me these suck or whatever but we need to get this conversation going

Fourth route: we currently love Midori. We did love Wendy, and might still do so. We have absolutely no idea how to reconcile these two things, and want to ask for their forgiveness and patience while we try to figure out how not to fuck this up. Well, how not to fuck it up worse.

It is possible to be in love with more than one person at once, you know.

Ever seen a manga or anime were the "couple" would kiss and the next day one of them would be like: "does that mean s/he likes me?". Read a few things here and there saying that a relationship isn't seen as formal and exclusive in Japanese culture until a confession has been given. As such, one could claim cultural differences for that particular scene in question.

Personally, I think that's just crass and goes completely against Chiaki's character.

Chiaki makes a lot of mistakes, yes, but she takes responsibility for her actions and doesn't try to brush them off in some of the appalling manners suggested in the previous thread. In reality, the intent behind her words doesn't matter (because anon will never agree), but rather how Wendy took them.

A straightforward apology is, in my opinion, the only way to move forward here.

And now, I go back to work.

Problem is that we probably are still in love with Wendy in addition to being in love with Midori. Normally, you don't stop being in love with a partner who dies, you just eventually fall in love again with someone else. This isn't generally a problem, because dead partners don't usually come back.

In other words, Wendy isn't really an "ex" in the usual sense of the term. This is what's causing a lot of the problems, I think.

Try to talk her down while on the defense, if she's still aggressive, we shoot off non-fatal parts

First, it's at least valid in the sense that a) memories you've otherwise forgotten can be tied to stuff you still remember and b) absent memories of a nasty breakup, the things that made you get together the first time are likely to make you do so again.

Second, in a world where magic and miracles are real it's possible that some Hollywood logic applies. Like it does with explosions.

I just really like the dynamic between both pairings. Sure, I back Chidori mainly because their relationship as it stands makes the most sense for Chiaki right now (and I honestly interpreted that "Get things right" promise as "Don't fuck up with Midori like you did with me").

But I love Wendy's characterisation, and how she and Chiaki interact with each other, just as much as I love Midori and her interactions with Chiaki.

~~From an OOC standpoint, I also really like NECO, even if IC she's a shitty cat that needs to be taught a lesson.~~

Personally, I really like Wendy as a character, but I can't see a relationship working there. She and Chiaki are just too similar and she's still treating us like Kong, not as Chiaki. That aside, a relationship with her, as Mami implied, would be a step back in Chiaki's development. Basically, a relationship is give and take, but there isn't that here and their "chemistry" just doesn't click right for me.

But, and this is something I have brought up with others before, Wendy does add something to the plot as a whole that I've considered missing from the start: a close relation that cannot be remembered due to amnesia.

You blink at Kyoko. Concern is written all over her face, and it looks like she's bracing herself for the worst-case scenario. ...It's almost a little cute, to see the usually-easygoing Eversor distressed like this. And it's definitely more than a little surprising that she's actually worried that you're pissed at her, instead of simply not giving a shit like she always does.

But seriously, you? Angry at her? You've repeatedly said earlier during the breakfast that you weren't. NECO turned out to be a freaking ninja! She sneaked past an entire security detail, Squad Hiryu and even Enishi! There's also the fact that Kyoko actually managed to catch her - yes, she let NECO take the picture, but now where is the damn cat? And who put her there?

"I...uh...is that a trick question, Murderface?" Her brow furrowing. "Because, uh, I'm not really good with them, and--

No. No, it wasn't a trick question.

"Oh! Well, uh, then Kuma-chan and I did it, of course! And she's in Silent Room 3A, just like you said you wanted!"

...Yes. So. You can't be angry at her, since she managed to catch NECO in the first place.

"Ohh, I get it!" The red-haired Eversor nods, her one good eye wide. "Yeah, so, you weren't really mad at me after all? We're still cool?"

Always have been, never stopped. It's here that you punch her in the arm, a mock punch, and immediately regret it. It's like punching fucking concrete. Freakin' Eversor musculature, how the fuck do they get into shape like that?

You force yourself not to cry out or show pain, though. That's just not done, not right now.

In any case, uh. You're angry about a lot of things, but not at her. As long as she's more careful next time, then things between you won't be changing for a very long time.

"A-ah. Yeah." Kyoko finally grins at your reassurance, wide and beaming and genuine, with no trace of the reluctance or hesitation earlier. A sincere joy radiating from the Eversor, as if she was honestly relieved that things were back to the way they were between the both of you.

"Thanks, Murderface. It's...yeah, I'm glad." She returns your mock punch - and you force yourself not to drop to your knees and cry at the stab of crushing pain. "And if you bite it, I'll stay until they're lowering you to the ground, or flinging your dusty ass from a cliff or something."

Likewise, you manage to murmur in the most deadpan voice you could achieve under the circumstances. Finding yourself returning her grin.

Kyoko. Also another puzzle, about how she came to be your friend.

But you're not that much of a hurry to find out just how, or why.

Whatever it was, you're glad it happened.

With the ceremony over and done with, all four of you make ready to leave Mami's cottage. Kyoko and Kumatora will have to come back later for most of the stuff they used for the date, but for now, they'll be driving both you and Midori back to Headquarters.

Overall it was...a success of a date, you feel. Sure, it kind of ended on a sour note, with NECO mucking up the proceedings, but you feel that you and Midori have definitely gotten closer because of it.

There's just one thing you'd like to ask, though. About the bonfire.

What was that Kumatora was throwing into the fire? They looked like manuscripts for something.

"Oh, those were my manuscripts for Miracle Midori x Murder Mayumi, Sempai. Around thirty future volumes' worth." Midori replies beside you, as the both of you share the back seat of the company car Kyoko's driving you back into the city with.

"I...I've decided to take the story in a different direction than I originally planned, Sempai, and what I had already drawn didn't really fit. So I had them burned to start over."

Thirty volumes? But isn't that a bit drastic? Couldn't she have kept some for filler, or something?

Midori shakes her head. "No, sempai. It wouldn't really work. But I'll be fine - I can do it on my weekends, and I have an assistant to work with, now." It's here that Kumatora turns to wave at the both of you from the passenger seat.

Huh. Well. Whatever works for her, then.

The trip back to Headquarters is short and uneventful, and soon you're at the lobby, alone. Midori wanted to be by herself for a bit longer, and thus you had Kyoko and Kumatora take her to your shared apartment instead. The younger of the two Eversors had volunteered to keep Midori company until you returned, and you agreed - they'd be able to talk about the comic AND keep the Callidus safe.

...Anyway. Looking around, you notice that even without the Warmaster Cap on, people are already taking pause and saluting you as they pass, both Magical Girl and simple run-of-the-mill employee alike. You're not entirely sure how to return their greetings, so you make do with a cold stare and a nod, which seems to work.

You make to put the hat on, anyways. Just to show you mean business.

In any case, what do you do now? You have a few options.

Really though, Hat-chan, part of the point of us taking the Soul Gems rather than destroying them on the spot is that we were proving ourselves above what the crazy bitch thought of us. Look, quite frankly

I reckon the best approach with NECO is to just

>Walk in
>Place The Golden Deagle on the desk, firmly, then start stroking it lovingly
>Stare meaningfully at her kneecaps until she starts talking

And if we get nowhere

>"I'm not going to hurt you, NECO. No, I've got a much worse punishment in store for you..."

>Hand her our phone with her chirpee page up, with Filthy Assistants promise to make Idol Porn is Real
>"I'm going to keep you here for the next month."

On the subject of the Midori pairing, I think she and Chiaki go together extremely well. Yeah, it started off as hero worship, but Midori has already been disabused of those notions several times over. Not only because of how she was treated when she was first recruited, what happened when they got to the Siberian Base, AND getting a firsthand view of all of Chiaki's neuroses in the barrier. Midori already knows Chiaki better than anyone, with the possible exception of Mami. And she still dove into the Barrier, not to save Murder Mayumi, but to save the sempai that she loved.

That aside, they showed some really interesting chemistry early on and even now, with Midori being aggressive and then shy, and Chiaki doing the same. Seeing how the two act around each other is basically seeing two people falling in love.

It’s adorable

We're a board full of autistic neckbeards. The closest we've ever gotten to knowing what that looks like IRL is awkward obsessive crushes that are firmly rejected should the object of our lusts ever find out about them.

Well they are certainly in love and adorable together. I would give their relationship at max two years before that love has cold down and they break up because of their differences. Love like that does not last and the thing that has to keep the relationship going after that are common interests. Something they do not have.

I would say Midori makes a great friend who can offset Chiaki's temperament and such. But outside of Hollywood that does not work in a relationship.

Differences can make a relationship grow but there has to be more similarities than differences. Otherwise you just end up in each others throats to often once the initial love has died down. It is better to have a friend to fill that purpose. The more time you spend with a person the less patience you going to have with that person.

Midori should have had contact with her parents as soon as she got back and was able to. And Officios handle family very well - insurance, health benefits, accident/death benefits in case the Magical Girl kicks it. At least, for Kyuubey.

High-profile contractees...I'm guessing like movie stars or really important people as contractees? Definitely! You wouldn't really know, though, because they keep that under wraps.

Also, definitely there are. Some of them actually ally with the more mercenary of Officios, like the Sixteenth.

We've been warned not to carry all of our Golden Weapons on us at once.
GM-warning through an in-character feeling that doing so would be a really bad idea.
So carry only 2 Golden Weapons, 3 max, at a time.

Well, yeah. Kirika and Gorefather.

I feel Kirika will go along with this one if it means seeing Oriko and getting another shot at our head.

Justice, I'm sure, will find us when and if we need it.

There's no hard limit. Just a feeling that we shouldn't.

I trust Chiaki's gut on this, though.

We'll just have to see if she feels any different.

From a purely practical standpoint, carrying all the golden weapons at once is a great way for them all to fall into someone else's hands just by taking us out.

I'd like to take a moment to address you directly, Dr. Strauss. Yes. I'm talking to you, the once-might Director. I have a question for you. How could you have thrown it all away? It staggers the mind. A woman of science, with the ability to sway reactionary and fearful minds toward the truth, choosing instead to embark on a path of ignorance and decay. Make no mistake, Dr. Strauss. This is not a scientific revolution you have sparked... this is death and finality. You have plunged Meguca-kind into freefall. Even if you offered your surrender now, I cannot guarantee that our Incubators would accept it. At the moment, I fear they have begun to look upon even me with suspicion. So much for serving as Meguca-kind's representative. Help me win back their trust, Dr. Strauss. Surrender while you still can. Help ensure that Meguca-kind's trust in you is not misguided. Do what is right, Dr. Strauss. Serve Magical Girls everywhere.

"Yo, everyone who's staying at home watching! This is the second recap thread for Magical Girl Noir Quest, where we do all sorts of stuff that the intro just described. Basically it's just summarizin' what's happened during the last eighty threads or so, along with character interviews that everyone seemed to have fun with the last time."

"Uh, the writer apologises for any future delays on replies because he'll be cookin' Christmas Eve dinner for an entire horde in the middle of posts, so there's that. But otherwise, let's have fun, yeah? We're gonna be as Maximum as reasonably possible!"

"So who you guys wanna interview first? Or we can go start the summaries, that's cool too."

"Alright, so where were we? Right, so after the mess in Siberia, Murderface gets back to Mitakihara via plane, but not after opening up the package Malal left her an' a visit from none other than Pinky herself. It's at this time that Murderface found out about the Prophet, an' how Mami is gonna bite it if she doesn't off the Prophet first. Other than that, things seem okay then, an' the idiot and her pancakes are brought back together in a tearful reunion (which I helped a lot in, okay)."

"Around this time Murderface starts takin' care of business as the Warmaster with her big fancy hat. She checks on the weird golden shit she's been collecting, asks Iori out on a date (stupid), and clears me being her aide by Sayaka-chan. She also checks up on Midorin, see how she's doing in sick bay since I think being in the barrier fucked her up good an' proper."

"So after some shenanigans with the hat, Murderface gets on with her first day on the job as Warmaster, an' picks out the assignment she wants to do personally for the week. She picks two - the idol mission, which is weird as shit, an' the smash and grab mission, which is way cool and awesome. She also delegates me and Midorin on a finder mission, some girl who's missing (which we totally aced, natch)."

"Some more boring bureaucratic stuff, an' Murderface breaking Iori's heart by breaking up with her in public, and it's here that the poop hits the rotating blades: she gets a suspicious box delivered to her while boozin' it up in Charles' bar. Box turns out to have some nasty shit inside, nasty enough that she goes directly to Kyuubey to ask what the fuck is up. Pinky ain't sayin' shit who it was, but there's already the suspicion that it was the Prophet, so...yeah."

"Anyway, the two get to talking, and then more shit happens - a miscount causing Murderface to make a really bad decision, showin' Kyuubey just what Pinky really was. That was retconned after a recount, though, and instead Murderface spills just enough details for Kyuubey to take seriously."

"More stuff happens after that, and then there's the housewarming party, where everyone gets drunk an' Murderface gets a ponytail!"

She's a clear and present danger to pretty much EVERY person Chiaki gives more than half a shit about.

Chiaki can feel lousy about it afterwards, but Murderface gotta murder.

While not the biggest relationships for all the characters, you could make 2 chains quite easily already.

Midori -> Chiaki -> Wendy -> Pinky -> Midori (all kind of weak except M->C)
Pinky -> Wendy -> Chiaki -> Midori -> Pinky (P->W and M->P aren't exactly romantic, but hey)
The real problem is Wendy and Midori only like Chiaki. Makes it impossible to make a proper chain with those two.
Pinky may not LIKE Wendy, but at least she dotes on her for manipulation, and she totally gets along with Midori.

Yes, I'm calling Pinky as the smallest obstacle to watermelon end here, what are you gonna do about it?

Every time Wendy is brought up I forget to mention this but she and Chiaki are different because Chiaki had her stabilising element (Mami)

If you read the write ups the most stabilising element Wendy ever had was Murderface, they !ight not have been great but compared to the rabbits and all of Santa Destroy she may as well have been then Mami directly stops her from going to her which can't have helped and in the end what will help her more than anything I think is Chiaki spending time with her. Whether she is there as a friend, a lover or just someone she can obey it will help bring her back from batshit crazy cultist to somewhat lucid knife fetishist

She spends more time with her hallucinations than she does real people so she is getting 90% crazy with that tiny bit of real interaction with cultists (also crazy) amber (crazier) and occasionally Mami (disturbingly sociopathic and manipulative, probably so insane she came put the other side at sane)

Regular old anti social and fragmented is a hall of a step up from that

Then you're romanticising BOTH of them.

Even on her best day, Chiaki is an amoral murder-machine.

Wendy is, by your own admission, an UNSTABLE amoral murder machine. Who's intricately linked with a psychotic goddess who has a murder-boner for us.

"Alright! So after gettin' a new hairstyle, Murderface goes and starts her very first mission as Warmaster, which is to give Ruri Kirishima, super idol and probably a big deal (I don't listen to idol trash) a 'good time'. She took along Sayaka-chan for the op, for backup and stuff, since it's a huge client an' everything."

"As it turns out, Sayaka-chan was into the idol trash, and was basically a super fan of Ruri! Then shenanigans happen during the start of it, when the idol rigs her own contest so that Murderface gets to be the winner an' spend four days with her as the most super of super fans. Murderface ain't havin' none of that railroading shit and gives her ticket to Sayaka, who gladly takes it to be Ruri's bosom buddy for the duration."

"It's here that Chiaki also meets someone she identifies with, a sweaty little kid by the name of Deepthroat! Check it, Wendy, she's got bigger eyebags than you! Hahaha!"

"So Deepthroat, as it turns out, ain't really named Deepthroat at all but Noriko. And she's set up in a gig as Ruri's gopher or something. Anyway she helps Murderface get into the hotel where Ruri's staying. Getting there, Murderface discovers that things are getting shitty just like it always does: Iori's in the gig too, as a voice actress for that MM x MM thing that Ruri's voice acting for. So it's like all the spaghetti at once. A freakin' spaghetti singularity!"

"Introductions happen, boring talky stuff, and then the first curve ball comes in the form of yakuza dudes storming the place. One slick bastard, who's supposed to be the big shot in some yakuza group, introduces himself as Yoshitaka Mine, and wants Ruri to sign on to his recording group. Ruri ain't having none of it, and Chiaki throws his ass out by looking mean. The security detail gets interrogated, and it's found out that the yaks got past due to Magical Girl interference. Cue the fucking shadowruns, right?"

"We also meet Kamijou Kyousuke here, who is like Sayaka's former classmate or something, I dunno. Anyway, Murderface calls in more girls to beef up the security, and it's here that Callidus Rank Leader Enishi makes the scene. We find out she's the older sister of Noriko, and they ain't really got the best sibling relationship."

"More stuff happens, but one that really needs mentioning is Squad Hiryu finding a trace of an intruder in one of the Hotel Rooms. NECO."

She chewed it in a hurry, though, and swallowed. “I mean, I’m not sure yet. It’s probably easier to get Matsuda angry first, if you want to make her do something. That’s what Mari-chan’s working on right now…”

I wasn't in that thread, but I was damn disappointed when I read it. The promise, while romantic and beautiful, was obviously a dumb choice that would only lead to more tears and suffering. Though, I can say the same thing about kissing Midori, because /tg/ trying to make a commitment to a girl in a quest is NEVER A FUCKING GOOD IDEA. Mainly because the "cute and cute waifu" archetype is chosen, that later has to suffer because she has to go with the most emotional trauma due to the plot.
~~This is why I only ever vote for pairings that include mindbroken/crazy girl or possible antagonists, as those somehow tend make for some fun drama and less NTR-esque scenarios.~~

"Right, now where were we? Ah, yeah, NECO. Anyway, so finding out about NECO an' getting angry about it, Murderface takes it in stride and continues with the op. More things happen, an' then the day of the concert finally comes along."

"So there's lots of shadowruns goin' around, but the concert goes on pretty smoothly, except for the fact that Chiaki gets another nasty gift en route, AND Squad Hiryu spots the yakuza hangin' about the concert area."

"They're done away with easily enough, until BAM! Some chick by the name of Lucius jacks into the frequency people are using to communicate and starts talkin' shit. Turns out the gifts were from her all along, and she's working for the Prophet. She even gloats about guttin' one of Squad Hiryu."

"Murderface around this time is pissed, so she takes up Lucius' challenge to meet her in the baseball diamond for a duel. And that's when things start getting hairy."

"Naturally Murderface throws down with Lucius, even when the latter tries to start things off with a dirty trick or two. But Murderface knows all the tricks too, an' opens with those huge punching things she's always got with her or something. Starts punching Lucius all over the fucking field, until she calls in help, tryin' to play the numbers game."

"Murderface doesn't even flinch and starts just murderin' them, one by one. Yeah, they get some hits in, but it doesn't even look like she feels 'em. If anything she gets even angrier. She fucks one up with her gunfingers, and then pounds the other one into the dirt just like that. Lucius NEARLY gets the kill, but Murderface finishes things off by turning her face an' most of her upper body into swiss fucking cheese."

"I should probably mention that before this, Mami arranged to have dinner with Murderface for the night after the concert. Just the two of them. So you know Murderface's motivation, an' such."

"After that, when everyone's dead an' all, Murderface gets helped back to the dugouts by a mysterious girl. She's too confused with blood loss to care, an' it's up to Sayaka to patch her up. It's here that I give Murderface a call to tell her how awesome she was, and that Midori wants to ask her out on a date for the night after, too. Murderface accepts, and reschedule Mami's dinner with her."

"The op ends a bit prematurely there - it turns out Ruri's production agency wants to fly her away somewhere safer, so they cut the contract duration in half. No problem there - the client's safe, the Prophet's girls are captured (including Lucius), so everything's hunky-dory."

My strongest opponent? Gosh, there's so many of them...ah, I did fight someone who said she was from the First! She had this very revealing costume that left too little to the imagination! She fought with a sword that looked vaguely like half a giant red scissor, and she very nearly took my head off!

I...I would definitely support it, if she'll allow it!

>>29060258

I, isn't this obvious?! N-next question, please!

>>29060262

They're...they're huge! I don't know how she can fight with those! I definitely wouldn't be able to!

>>29060265

Um, I suppose? The Eighth Golden Weapon is sociable enough when she's in a good mood, the Fifteenth's really hyper, like a kid on a sugar rush...but the Twentieth...I couldn't even go near her. She's really, really angry about something, and all of it is centered on Matsuda-san.

>>29060266

It's...sometimes, when Matsuda-san comes along, we take energy from her to wake up and be aware. But most of the time we're sleeping, left to our own dreams. ...Sometimes we're not sleeping at all, but in the dark, left to our own thoughts and memories.

I've been with Matsuda-san for quite a while, though, so I've always been awake! It's been really fun!

>>29060272

I would say no, unless you count the Blood God's Daughter, Miss Valnikov!

>>29060277

I, I will! That was my own failing, and I will correct it! Matsuda-san should never have been hurt if I didn't get carried away!

>>29060285

I...I don't think I'm cute...

Ah, um, from what I gleaned from Matsuda-san, things are beginning to get more and more complicated for her...but I'll always be there for her when she needs me!

Well, um, as long as we have energy from our users, we can mold it so it's not that boring. It usually takes shape from our memories, and yes, it does get lonely a bit...

Ah, um...n-next question!

I remember wanting to challenge everyone to a match, to pound their faces in, to prove that I'm the best, even if I had to do it on top of a mountain of corpses...

"Alright! Enough questions for the little runt! Let's wrap this up before we 404!"

"Now, after seein' Ruri off the next day, Murderface proves that she's become a watch-wearin' dildo by immediately goin' to be debriefed by Kyuubey. She meets the Tenth during the debriefing, and after callin' him dickbutt a coupla times she learns about one of the Ninth's last prognosticators, who was formerly of the Third (the officio that got wrecked by the original dirty trio). Naturally Murderface wants to talk to her right then and there, an' Yuma helps her - but not after getting into an altercation with the Culexus herself."

"Soon enough Murderface meets the prognosticator. Her name is Amane Haruka, and she's kinda pretty, I guess. Very high-class too. She's a bit skittish and all, and always goes on about how Murderface is gonna off her and how it's IN THE STARS or somethin'. They do this kind of thing with mirrors to see just who the Prophet really is, and it turns out to be someone...uh...well. Just someone."

"Anyway, after that, Chiaki leaves for the date. Mami helps her get dressed, yadda yadda, the date happens at Mami's vacation house in the mountains an' I spoil it by not findin' out about NECO before they did the kissing thing. Thankfully Kuma-tan was good enough to detect NECO and we caught her. Now she's just waitin' to be interrogated at Headquarters."

That would be my general understanding. Ostensibly she'd still report to the Callidus leader, while being seconded to the Warmaster's office.

I imagine they wouldn't take it too bad, what with her being soulgem being personally bound to Murderface.

MAGICAL GIRL
DO NOT CROSS A MAGICAL GIRL WITH NOTHING TO LOSE
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/28/13(Sat)08:12 No.29127188

You are a Magical Girl, and you're about to interrogate an amateur journalist that's been hounding you for quite some time now. Yes, you had an inkling that being Warmaster was going to put you in the limelight, as well as under a few crosshairs - but you never thought it'd be this irritating. This annoying.

She ruined your date with Midori. Well, granted, it was going well enough until she passed out after suddenly getting inebriated behind your back, but...you couldn't help but feel like it would've gone down better had it not been for the amateur journalist suddenly sticking her nose into where it didn't fucking belong. Christ, You were willing to let the thing with Kirishima Ruri slide, but this time...this time...

No. No. This won't do. You're not Murderface anymore.

Calm down, you tell yourself. Deep, slow breaths. No need to get into this angry. It doesn't do a damn thing to help. You're dealing with a civilian here. A very annoying, very connected, and very dangerous civilian - but a civilian nonetheless.

You just hope that's enough to help you keep your temper in case your guest proves to be too much of a handful.

Probably a good thing you're going into this interrogation without any of Pinky's golden shit, eh?

Otherwise this interrogation would be cut off.

Anyway. You reach the Silent Room where NECO's been placed into - and funnily enough, it's the same Silent Room that Midori was placed in, a couple of lifetimes ago. Before all this insanity started - or probably just after it began.

And of course, there's someone in front of the door leading to the Silent Room itself. Someone looking very, very irritated herself, as she adjusts how the mechanical beast of a sword is strapped around her waist. Her narrowed eyes swivelling towards you the moment you step closer.

"Murderface." Not a 'Good morning', or 'morning', or even her customary 'fuck off and DIE'. Just your old name, said without a trace of venom. Or anything else. ...You're not sure how to take that, so you simply nod in return. "How'd the date go?"

It went...alright enough. Besides, well, NECO, you suppose.

"I heard." Miki Sayaka lets out a sigh, and it's here that you finally see just how...tired she looks.As if she didn't get any sleep last night.

"I know I'm wasting my time here, but is there any way I can ask you to let her off this one time? I know, you asked me to get her off your back, but you know her type. She'll keep testing until she gets more than just a slap on the wrist, and then she behaves. Just like a cat."

She rakes a gloved hand through her hair, glancing at the door behind her, before turning back to you again. "I'll...I'll take it as a big personal favor if you let me take care of this one, Murderface." The Eversor adds quietly, her voice strained. As if it physically hurt her to say so.

How do you respond?

Look, quite frankly

I reckon the best approach with NECO is to just

>Walk in
>Place The Golden Deagle on the desk, firmly, then start stroking it lovingly
>Stare meaningfully at her kneecaps until she starts talking

And if we get nowhere

>"I'm not going to hurt you, NECO. No, I've got a much worse punishment in store for you..."
>Hand her our phone with her chirpee page up, with Filthy Assistants promise to make Idol Porn is Real
>"I'm going to keep you here for the next month."

Lel, u wot? Don't tie the Wendy thing up into this. I'm a Wendyfag myself but that's just hilarious.

Chiaki has for example not kicked off a massive inter-officio war like Murderface / Kharn has. Chiaki managed to get the situation in the stadium defused which could have cost tens of thousands their lives which she didn't even have to do, who the fuck cares if civs die? She's not the police or the national guard, as long as her client survives that would have been the end of the job. But she even put a nice massive meguca fight on top to sweeten the deal. I feel like in many ways we are demonstrably worse at Warmastering than Kharn. One thousand underlings and we can never fucking delegate, for one. We really shouldn't even be doing this ourselves – if we're down here at all we should be behind the two-way mirror feeding questions into the ears of someone else whose job it actually is to interrogate the prisoners down here. Not only because we're paying this hypothetical girl grief seeds for a reason, but because we're The Boss, and The Boss should never be seen handling the riff-raff.

Go look at some of the writeups painting the universe some more. Most warmasters out there are deranged at least to some degree and power hungry / murderous to a fault. Abbaddon is a warmonger pulling insanity in the middle east, Miss Marigold is basically the USC, Alice regularily summons her special ability which is a fucking witch barrier, Ahriman was Ahriman, Strauss is Strauss. Chiaki is a paragon of virtue next to all of them, she'd basically fit perfectly into the old romanticised image of Yakuza as a gentleman organiation that keeps order in a more underground manner. The only one vaguely measuring up is Madaraki Fran or whatever her name was again.

Nah. We're still settling in. But we're already better at delegating. Four aides, rather than Kharn's approach of "let Malal deal with pretty much everything".

Though admittedly, we don't currently have anyone as hyper efficient to delegate to AS Malal was.

HOMU RUNNER

Thinking about it, we should try to get NECO on our side rather then trying to get her to stop.

She is committed to free journalism about magical girls and stuff. Yelling at her to back off would only get her more interested in Chiaki. Like those reporters in Noir who are determined to get 'the truth'

Instead we should either try to get her as a contact (as someone who we can feed juicy news on other offico's) or say that she owes us a favour in exchange for her life.

You stare at her for a few minutes, before shaking your head. No, you're taking care of this one personally. If she'd heard from Kyoko just what really happened, then you don't need to explain yourself to her why it needs to be you. Hell, you're Warmaster, aren't you? You're still not up to snuff on everything that being a Warmaster entails, but you're sure it doesn't involve explaining your decisions to your Equerry.

"I..." You see her swallowing hard, here, most probably a scathing retort to you pulling rank. It's admirable how she can just do that, though. "Yes, I get where you're coming from, and I'd feel the same way. But Murderface, you just can't--"

Can't what? Shoot her kneecaps off and call it a day? Because that wasn't really what you were planning to do - but seeing as Sayaka's all but assumed it'd be your first course of action, then maybe you should give it a second fucking thought, then!

It's here, then, that the blue-haired Eversor, normally all too pleased and eager to verbally rip into you - seems to go silent, pale. Contrite.

...Fucking hell. Did she really think that, then? After the shit that happened back at the Ruri Mission? After the both of you came to an agreement, she still doesn't trust you?

"It's...I'm just trying to be sure," Sayaka manages after a moment. "I don't know if and when your amnesia'd wipe everything out again. The important bits. The bits that I actually..." The Eversor breathes out from between clenched teeth, turning away.

"Look, I'm just trying to make sure you don't fuck things up, alright, Murderface? I'm not getting into your face because I want to, or because I like ruining your day. I just want you to be someone...better."

She turns back to look at you. "I want you to be the person Mami believes you could be. If it makes me look like a bitch, or more than I already am, fine. I don't give a shit."

How do you react?

I think Magical Girls are just a bit less Magical in this setting than PMMM – when he was justifying turning little girls into rocks to Sayaka, Kyuubey seemed to think it would be no big deal for a meguca to recover on her own from catastrophic trauma like having every bone in her body broken or complete exsanguination so long as she still had some magic left (Mami was just unlucky that her Soul Gem happened to sit on the top of her head). Homura turned herself from a sickly, bedridden, nearsighted girl into an athletic badass with perfect vision just like that with magic during her later trips.

I think Deculture might be scrambling due to accidentally provoking all the grimderp noir fans too much into thinking that we really can solve every problem with bullets, when actually pulling a Murderface and shooting everyone over minor slights isn't actually going to be a very good way to play the game. It might be less over NECO and more over "Randomly murdering NPCs will fuck us over and he's trying to tell us in a gentle way".

I don't think that's the problem. While murder-hobos are restless, that's probably just because anons go for the less kill-y option all the time, even Lucius we went maximum capture rather than just wasting her gem. Sure there's a good reason for that, but you know, murderhobo. Then there's the second group that just dislikes NECO, whether as a character or a plot-device (the 'nosy reporter' schtick) and are pissed that there's no apparent way of getting rid of her.

Because the Murderhobo is full of retards who apparently cant be even arsed to understand the character they are playing as.

Just in case it wasnt apparent enough from the plot:

Murderface is not a good thing.
Being Murderface was not a good thing.
Chiaki Matsuda tries hard to not be Murderface because it fucked up more than it helped.
If you havent figured out, only the batshit insane crazy ones arent happy that we are not Murderface anymore.

And also noir isnt about leaving a trail od dead bodies behind you, but about trying to do the right thing in a crapsack world full of grey morality where everyone has something he is willing to sell his principles himself for. And Lucious wasnt evil per se, she is mainly misguided and so were her girls. She believes will be resonsible for the second coming of the Antichrist and sure, we could have gone full Last Action Hero on her ass and splattered her and her girls without a thought.

But thank good we didnt, because that wouldnt have been the right thing to do.

You blink at Sayaka in surprise. That's...well. That explains some about her being such a massive bitch to you. Not all of it, but probably 20% of it. The rest is probably just pure, ingrained, 100% natural bitch.

"Alright, don't let it get to your head, Murderface," Sayaka growls in warning, crossing her arms over her chest.

You shake your head. No, it's...well. You appreciate her telling you. But the thing she's doing now? It's exactly why you chose her to be your Equerry. So she stops you from fucking up. So you don't disappoint Mami too, and you don't want that happening. As much as she does.

"Yeah, well." Either Sayaka's found something very interesting to look at on the floor by your feet, or she's trying to avoid looking at you. The faintest pink tinge staining her cheeks. "I'm just...I'm just trying to do the right thing."

Well, the right thing right now, as you believe it, is for her to be the good cop to your bad cop. And if she hadn't figured it out yet, you won't be doing anything violent to NECO. You just want to make sure this shit doesn't happen again - and maybe even gain an asset while doing so.

"Ah." Sayaka blinks at this, eyes widening. "That's...that sounds good, Murderface. I mean, well...she probably won't go for it, but it's always worth a shot." She nods. "Alright. I'll be your good cop." She lets out what sounds like a relieved sigh. "Kinda weird, actually. I've always been the bad one."

Really? To whose good cop?

"Kyoko. You wouldn't believe how they just latch onto her after ten minutes with me." Sayaka allows herself a small smile.

Well, you can believe it. She's practically the biggest bitch you know.

Anyway, is she ready?

"I'll try to sweep that under the rug of our fragile friendship, Murderface." The blue-haired Eversor quips dryly, before taking out what appears to be a clear ziplock bag full of...stuff from the depths of her cape.

She holds the entire thing to you, and you take it with both hands. "And no, we didn't crack open her things yet. If you want, we can do that, but it'd probably be easier to just ask her."

Ah. Right. Maybe you'll do just that, then.

...Setting aside NECO for a moment, though. After this, you want to talk to her about the Prophet.

"Yeah? Did you find out who she was, then?"

You nod. You tell her the Prophet's real identity, what you learned from Haruka about her, and what you need her help with.

"...Shit. Oriko? I didn't..." Sayaka frowns, here. "Christ. I should've known she'd get mixed up in this, too. And Kyoko..." She shakes her head. "Right, okay. Let's talk about that later. Maybe during training, yeah?"

Training? ...Is that what she brought that Blackberry Croissant Brulee thing for?

"Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie," The Eversor corrects. "And of course, what'd you think? That I was going to gut you with this if I saw you shooting off NECO's kneecaps?"

...Pretty much.

"I'd ask you to give me some credit, but I never gave you any in the first place either. So...yeah, I guess." Sayaka shrugs. "Anyway, let's get this over with."

The door to NECO's Silent Room slides open with a metallic hiss, the thick six-inch plate door shoving itself out of the way to allow you passage. You step in along with Sayaka - and note that the anti-magic engine isn't at all turned on, from how both your costumes didn't even so much as fizzle when you crossed the threshold. Standard operating procedure, in any case - if a prisoner's confirmed to be non-contracted, the Silent Room just becomes a regular holding cell, which is more than enough to hold anyone mundane.

It's here, then, that you finally set eyes on NECO.

She's...well, she's just as Sayaka described to you, back in the Ruri mission. Blonde. High school. Rather filled out, in the same way that Midori and Mami are. Just a bit more athletic, though, someone used to being on the run. Her clothes deceptively simple - a long-sleeved white jacket, a short purple miniskirt, black stockings, leather boots. Something stylish, yet short enough for activity - the kind that involves stalking and dodging Magical Girls, no doubt.

Cute, though. Really cute. Just...the kind of cute you should watch out for.

"Oh, geez, you should have called ahead. I didn't get a chance to clean this place up." NECO remarks as you step forward, Sayaka right behind you. She gestures to the metal-frame bed she's perched on - her right wrist handcuffed to one of its posts. "Are you mad? You look mad, nya." She has a calm, even expression, and her crimson eyes meet yours. Altogether too composed. Like a challenge.

...Hah. This cat. This fucking cat.

How do you react?

Pretty sure we can't force anyone to sign a contract. However, there's no reason we need to be completely candid about all of the unpleasant aspects of being turned into a magical mineral. You meet NECO stare for stare, as you take one of the rusting folding chairs propped up beside the Silent Room wall and unfold it for use. You plant this right in front of NECO, just three feet exactly from her - and it's here that you plant your own ass, placing yourself directly in her line of sight, right in her face. The staring contest between the both of you unbroken, unrelenting.

A harsh racking of your Shield, and you place a particularly heavy-looking handcannon on your lap. It's not your Golden Desert Eagle, that's for sure - the metal cold, almost freezing to the touch - but it'll do. Even without looking down on it, you know it's a man-stopper, each of the bronze shells slotted into its chambers easily capable of carving a fist-sized hole into a cat's face.

To her credit, NECO doesn't even flinch at the sight of the firearm. Only a brief widening of the eyes, nothing more. ...Well, that and she looked at the hat you're currently wearing for just a split second.

Sayaka clears her throat here. "Um, well, I think you know why we're here, Izumi." Your Equerry begins, her voice sedate, calm, collected. Amost kind. "I talked to you about...about giving Warmaster Matsuda here a break. You've been good with that during the Kirishima affair, but you've crossed the line this time."

She shakes her head. "Honestly, couldn't you have had given Warmaster Matsuda just a bit more privacy last night? Did you really need to take that picture?"

She purrs out the words when she finally speaks and leans back when she's done, as though satisfied with something.

"It's probably good PR if people see you having human cares and emotions after the whole turning-some-people-into-bloodstains-on-national-TV thing, too. And I just wasn't ready to send you kittens until you forgot to shoot one. It'd be a waste of kittens."

Even Kyubey included new clauses when we hijacked Midori, like being able to take over her body, find out her location at all times, and being able to remotely kill her.

Incubtaors in MGNQ are much more versatile when contracting magical girls than in regular PMMM

"Are you seriously that new?" NECO narrows her eyes at you, the smug grin on her lips smoothening out into a straight-lipped frown. "You do get I'm not, like, your only intel concern, right? Every Officio's got their eyes on every other Officio, and right now, all their eyes are on the new Warmaster whose big magical girl debut was starting a war for no good reason that wiped one of the Officios out completely."

She shakes her head at you. "So nyo. You don't get to do that and pretend it's my fault if someone finds out. Being a magical girl is a tough life, nya. There are risks."

It's here that the smug, shit-eating grin comes to the fore once more.

"...That thing with Mami Tomoe-nyan is pretty interesting, though. Can I get more details about that, meow?" It's here that she pats her skirt's pockets. "A-ah, I forgot, Sayaka-nyan took all of my stuff." She shrugs. "Oh, well. I'll just have to try and remember! Good thing I've got really good memory, nya!"

Okay. So it was cute the first couple of times, but now it's just getting annoying. Does she really have to make cat noises every other fucking sentence?

"Nya? What cat noises, nya?"

"Izumi." Sayaka says in warning, withering tones. NECO manages to look abashed at that, before nodding.

"Alright, alright. I'll try to cut down. Nya." She shakes her head. "But you get me, right? If someone like me could snap a photo of you and Green Green, what about Magical Girls? Did you ever think about that?"

Grh. She's got a point there, but...

...Wait. Izumi? That's...that's a bit familiar.

Tetsuo Izumi? Is that her name?

"That's me-ow!" NECO, or Izumi, replies with a big catty grin. "I'd give you my card, but you've got all my stuff! Master Journalist, Chief Editor and Head Writer of Magical Girls Are Real Dot Com, at your service!" She winks at you, in a motion eerily similar to a certain green-haired idol's.

...Something's not right, here. Yes, you're angry, and yes, NECO can see that. And from her being obsessed about Magical Girls, she knows just how one can be deadly, even without a gun in her hands. WHy, then, is she so self-assured? What's her fucking deal, here?

She's got something up her sleeve, and most likely...most likely it involves Malal. Otherwise the Culexus wouldn't have mentioned her in your journal. Otherwise she wouldn't be this fucking confident that she'd step out of here in one piece.

Fine. Fine, you'll play along for now. But only because you want to find out what this amateur journalist has that lets her be smug when hardened yakuza that love to murder kids on weekends would already be crying and pissing all over themselves.

"...I was in love with her." The catty journalist says, her voice suddenly sullen, suddenly cold. "And then she had to go and save the world. Some people, right? I bet Midorinyan's the same way."

She fidgets again on the bed, here, her eyes looking down at her empty hands, fingers curling around what may be a camera that isn't there. A moment later, Izumi glances up at Sayaka, and you see in her eyes just the tiniest hint of something very familiar - of someone that has lost something and has yet to accept that she'd never get it back.

"What do you wannya know about her, then?" It's here that Izumi brightens up once more, as if that revelation had never taken place. "Her three sizes? Favorite food? Puroresu pick for the year?"

You glance at Sayaka too, who merely shrugs. "I...I don't really know, Murderface. I mean, back then Miss Malal met with a lot of people, so..." She shakes her head. "Izumi. You never told me."

"You never asked, nya."

I don't consider beating down someone smart enough to talk herself out of trouble with a golf club a "dealing" in the proper meaning. If we actually played the proper roll of a bad cop, keeping quiet and glaring while Sayaka nervously chided her, we could've dealt with this by actually outsmarting her. Not really. A bit annoying to have someone prying into your personal life when you aren't used to all the attention, which is probably exactly what Chiaki is feeling, but still.

NECO would make a much better friend than a corpse any day though, she's good at her job but most everyone seems to just want to sit there and tell her all kinds of things we shouldn't tell her or just shoot someone trying to make a living even if they are being real smug about all this.

Still think we could turn this stuff around, say we'll tell her even more if she helps out with a little problem. Give her a nice interview in exchange for maybe helping out some of our own intel girls in their efforts to hunt down Oriko. Chiaki will have to change some names if it's something that could get someone hurt of course though, but even still a positive approach is going to get her much further with NECO than threatening her, and it'll probably throw her off too since it's about the last thing she'd expect from Chiaki to begin with.

Why do you think she's acting like this, she knows Chiaki can't scare her so she's acting like a cunt to make us do something stupid knowing Sayaka's going to stop us before we can actually hurt her most likely.

You dimwit, look at the bigger picture.

In PMMM, Homura was a dark puppetmaster that ahd her own plans and pulled them off in oder to save her best friend. Nobody could see through her methods and get her angle, and even if they would have it wouldn't have helped her much.

Madoka in the original series was a memory-damaged pawn that kept stumbling through the loops she was thrown for, the literal center of this universe that everyone's fate is spun around but neither in control nor informed well enough to do much of anything about it.

That's Malal and Chiaki in a nutshell, except Malal didn't have Homura's luxury of winding back time to do it all over again. She paid the price of her plans in full, for Chiaki.

Oh, I didn't mean that it was cold and calculating. When I said Ekatarina and Neko were victims of a master planner, I meant that they were victims in tragedy, trapped in Malal's necessities and hurting for it.

The only way Neco will talk to us about it is on the basis of being in that situation as well, I'm afraid, and I don't think she'd like that Malal singled us out as much as she has. I think Malal know Neco was in love. but Malal couldn't afford to let that stop her. Hence the Junko comparison.

Right. It's here that you turn to Sayaka, and hand over your gun to her. Grip first.

"Eh?" The Eversor blinks at you as she takes your handcannon. "What's going on, Murderface?"

You'll take it from here, you tell here. You know what needs to be done. And for it to work, you need to be alone with Izumi.

"But, I thought we were going to--" Sayaka tries, and you shake your head briefly at her. No, that thing with the bad cop and good cop is done. It's over. It didn't work very well. Journalists who have something up their sleeve isn't as susceptible to that routine as yaks are.

But you reassure her that you won't do any murdering once she's left. Or any kneecapping. You just want need to ask NECO something that you need to hear first before anyone else.

You've given her your gun anyway, so that should be enough, right?

"Bullshit! You've still got...that thing that vomits guns! Murderface, come on, do you think I'd fall for that kind of...." Sayaka's voice trails off as you hold her gaze, and she blushes again. "Y-yeah. Alright. I trust you, Murderface. Just...just don't break it again, okay?"

The moment she leaves - the sliding door of the Silent Room once more slamming into place - it's then that you turn back towards NECO, the young woman all but smirking as she watches the proceedings. "Sayapyon's tough to get along with, I knyow. But she's a hero, and there's no one else you'd want watching your back other than a hero."

You'll see about that. Now. She can start from the beginning about Malal, then.

You've got time, so she can spill what she knows.

Izumi nods. She takes a moment, as if to gather her thoughts, before starting.

It's...an interesting story. One you're not sure you can believe, but it's...too crazy not to be true.

woah, no need for ad hominims

Malal is more focused on saving the world, and Madoka didn't exactly have amnesia but I get what you're saying about them being similar.

Still, so what? What does it mean if they play these parts? None of that proves anything. We can try to theorize and predict, but there's no cause to go all high and mighty and discount all other possibilities.

>> ☐ Deculture 12/28/13(Sat)13:10 No.29129909

Apparently, Izumi and Malal had known each other before the latter contracted. A yakuza enforcer, just like her journal entry said, Malal earned her keep by killing sparklies and being good at it. It wasn't something she liked doing, or at least Izumi didn't think so, but Malal always acted like it was something she HAD to do.

Then again, Malal seemed to treat everything as something she had to do. Like she had everything figured out from day one. But she always found the time to do stupid shit with Izumi - watch movies, hitting the game centers, and eating really weird food. "Like, she'd try and make the most horrible ice cream sundae or something and she'd call me and go 'Hey, Izumi! You gotta try this, I think it's the worst thing I ever tasted!' And it would be!"

Izumi's voice, as animated as it was, falls sombre at the latter half of her tale, as she recounted how Malal disappeared when she contracted. Izumi herself didn't figure it out for years, even though she was positive that Malal was looking out for her in the shadows. At first she just wanted to be a political muckraker - get the dirt on politicians, really gritty journalism that'd make a difference. And Malal would watch her back whenever she'd get in it really deep, like with another gang, another yakuza, or a bunch of sparklies.

"I guess that's not what you wanna knyow, though, right? She left a lot of stuff behind for a lot of people, as much as she could split it up. Some of it was nicer than others, and some people have parts to play, or something, so that everything works out. So things are as easy as they can be for you."

"That's what the diary's for, nya. Bits and pieces of the important things, stuff you'll have to know eventually. Enough to keep you going if things get too grim, or if you have to forget again."

How do you react?

I would consider it, but time efficiency. Every day or so we NECO in there Sayaka's chances of going full fool on our ass increases, and letting her out is a bad idea with her anything but devoted to/in total fear of us. And if she really is a sold mouth like I suspect, the former ain't gonna happen.
So it'd be better to get the information, make her fear us in the short term, giving us enough time to locate and cut the strings around her, letting the puppet collapse on itself.

Have one of our lesser known agents offer her a quick way out of the meguca game forever, maybe free tickets out of town and somewhere to stay while she sets herself up.

You know that one DMPC that is far too untouchable for It's own good?

That's NECO.
We were expicitibly forbidden to touch her and we don't even have a good reason to restrain ourselves. Which is kind of bullshit, considering the ongoing themes and a main character whose entire shtick is to be a hard-boiled war veteran with brain problems.
And character development is hardly an excuse when we're still fucking brutal in any given encounter and NECO is far more infuriating than any crazy bitch we've encountered so far.

You cannot intimidate someone who doesnt take you seriously in the first place. Get that through that thick skull of yours. It doesnt work. Then suddenly shifting back to violence or the threat of violence without having anything to back that up, will not suddenly make her shit her pants, it will show her the she got a rise out of us.

She's used to doing that where magical girls are concerned. We cannot intimidate her with violence. It won't work on her any more than it works in real life. All it does in real life is force you to bury the body somewhere without what you really wanted, which is someone who does your work for you. You can't have your body and face getting destroyed and still thinking "oh man, that's exactly how I planned this".

The best course of action is either locking her in a cell for fucking ever or forcing her to think how to stop the pain and what amount of info would grant her that.

Consequences be damned. As far as we know, all we'll going to get is stern talking from coobs and Sayaka bitch points.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/29/13(Sun)08:18 No.29146467

Have to forget again? Is she saying that your amnesia will come around to fuck you in the ass again, but this time deliberately triggered by something or somebody? Or is this shit cyclical - like something out of those stupid Western movies that use amnesia as some sort of shitty plot device to throw the viewer in the thick of things and skip much-needed backstory and world-building?

"..." NECO seems to grow silent here, her expression suddenly wary. As if she wasn't expecting you to pick up on that. "I don't know, exactly," the young girl finally murmurs. "There's...Malal left me enough information about stuff I should know, but about you, specifically? About your amnesia?" She shakes her head.

"I don't think even she knew anything about it, besides the fact that it's there, and it could relapse at any time. She just made sure that if it did relapse, then you'd have something to remind you, nya."

Hnh. Alright. You're not convinced she's telling everything, but that's fine. You'll get back to that later.

You then ask her about the passwords the app keeps asking you for. You're still missing a few, here. If she's as buddy-buddy with Malal as she says she is, then she could probably give you the remaining two passwords to unlock the rest, right?

NECO blinks at this. "Well, er...I guess I could, nya...I know some, but obviously not everything. You know how Malal's like." It's here that she holds out a hand. "Here, lemme see your smartphone for a minute, I'll enter it for you, nya."

What do you do?

[]Hand over your smartphone.
[]...No. Just tell me and I'll enter it myself.

There's a bunch of people saying to show her the Chirpee feed, and I was one of them. But now I think it's better if we don't. We let her find out on her own. After taking certain measures.

After hearing her sob story, we should convene with Sayaka and discuss The Plan. Which is to give the filthy assistant's takeover as much ground as it can possibly get. We're warmaster, we can have the entire fucking building subscribe to the feed and clamoring for MOAR IDOL GOSSIP and other such vapid nonsense. Keep this up all day. Have her go out and spread the word since us leaving would raise all kinds of alarms.

In the meantime, we go back and give NECO everything she wants except access to her Chirpee feed (say we're sanitizing her phone or something and that we don't give ours out for reasons). Give her the interview with Chiaki. Give her the interview with Midori. Hell, introduce her to Kumatora, the MG we trained. Keep her busy while giving the filthy assistant a swelled head.

But eventually we'll have to say goodbye. Maybe give her a job offer. NECO will likely decline unless the hat does its magic. And so we part... and NECO discovers her Chirpee feed hijacked. No biggie, just shoo out the rabble and everything goes back to normal right?

Wroooooooooong! The office rallies for MOAR IDOL GOSSIP and wonders who this skank reporter is, flooding her with demands to do more idol stuff and put filthy assistant back in charge. She could, you know, make another Chirpee, but by then the damage to her ego and reputation should be done. And we'll have her crawling back to us, begging for a means to put her journalistic integrity to use other than... IDOL GOSSIP!

...Yeah, now that I type it all out, it actually sounds kind of dumb. Let's just go with the hat and save the revenge for later.

[x]No, just tell me.

Handing her phone is a BAD, BAD idea because a) she could send a text to a contact and cause all kinds of trouble or generally contact someone (such as Sayaka) and cause all kinds of trouble, b) we don't know if pinky knows of our progress on the phone, c)she might try and break it, which admittedly is a minor convenience but still, and d)After last time's proceeding we need to get some kind of grip on the situation.

The other thing to note is that if she lists off all the passwords she knows, we get to see what info Malal thought to trust her with. It's a good way to gauge what she may or may not know.

>> ☐ Anonymous 12/29/13(Sun)08:28 No.29146571

By the way, a couple of conclusions that were reached from last night's threads:
-As a journalist, she's been through some shit in terms of physical torture and threats in general. Violence at this stage may not prove useful, at least until she's been worn down some.
-Magical tactics may work - although it will make her an enemy, suggestions such as cutting her off from stimuli for some time or threatening to wipe her memories of Mala were thrown around. Chances our she's seen all the regular torture techiques we know of.
-Sayaka is just outside the room, so doing anything which may cause any major sounds won't work in our favour in case she tries to justice our ass - she knows and is very invested in Izumi/NECO.
-The plan, IIRC, was "listen to her story in her entirety, then dismiss it and try to found out whatever we really want before deciding what to do about her".

"For real?" NECO frowns, before shrugging. "It wasn't, like, I was gonna use up your minutes or break it or something, nya. But that's okay, I can just tell you." It's here that she toys with her handcuffs, tugging at it absently. "Hnn. Let me try and remember...you're missing two more, right? If that's the case, then you're probably still at the first set..."

The first set? There's OTHER sets, besides the one you're currently trying to unlock?

"I'm...I guess? Look, I keep telling you, Malal didn't tell me everything, nya!" The blonde girl snaps at you, before holding her free hand up to her forehead, her brow furrowing. "Urrr...first set, first set...AH!" Her eyes go wide, before pointing towards you. "GREEN! You haven't tried that one yet, right? Right?"

You narrow your eyes at NECO, before pulling out your smartphone from your inventory. ...No, you haven't tried that yet. How did she know that?

"You keep getting hung up on the details, nya." NECO shakes her head here, looking all smug again. "Just try it out and see!"

Well, even if you wanted to try it out, you can't. The journal app locks itself after every entry unlock, didn't she know that? And you just unlocked two of them last night, so it's probably going to be a few days before...uh...

You blink at your smartphone screen.

And there, right in the middle of the display, is the journal app. Unlocked and asking for a password.

You look up at NECO, the girl only looking more and more self-satisfied by the second.

How did she know that--

"Magic! Or, more honestly, I don't really know, nya!" NECO grins, seemingly content enough to take credit for it. "Go ahead and enter it anyway, see what we get!"

Right. Whatever.

You glare down at your phone and tap out the five-letter password carefully.

"What?! At least give me a few juicy details, nya! I'm the one who gave you the password in the first place, you could at least share!"

Yes, and you're the one who decides if she gets to walk out of her with her kneecaps intact, you return easily, leaning back on your folding chair. So what's the second password?

"Urrr...fine, if you're going to be that way." NECO pouts here, rather cutely at that - reminding you of a certain brown-haired arms dealer that you should probably visit sometime soon, or at least give a call. "Second one's sort of a nasty word, but you always use it, so that's kind of moot, I suppose, nya..."

A nasty word? Well, which one is it, then? Because you know plenty.

"Well, I don't like to use it myself," NECO shakes her head here, and you catch her glancing at your hat again. "But you use it a lot to refer to Sayaka-chan, I guess? Something about her attitude?"

...Huh. That's...that's oddly specific. And rather mean of Malal, actually. You had an idea that she had a coarse attitude, what with the whole juvenile delinquent thing, but...

You shake your head, and tap out Sayaka's nickname on the dialog.

Supressing a grin as you do so.

B I T C H

...Yeah. Very mature, Murderface.

It's true, though - you're not the only one that talks about Legendary Bitch Blueberry-chan. She's got a pretty nasty reputation all around the world, that way. I'd say there's a certain sort of woman that likes that, though - she attracts redheads from all over, the kinds Miss Sakura doesn't even know about. That's just gossip, though.]

[You two don't really get along - or haven't in the past - but she's still probably the one person you'll always be able to rely on. That's just how she is. Miki Sayaka is a hero. That's all there is to it. She may be an idiot, but she'll always do what she believes is right, no matter what the cost is. Just try to keep her from paying too much. Sakura

Kyouko can't handle everything alone.]

It's here, then, that a dialog appears - one notifying you that 10 out of 10 entries had been unlocked, and SET I had been completed. Another dialog opens after a few seconds - this time telling you that SET II was now available for unlocking.

...Fucking hell.

"Alright, now you gotta let me see, nya. I know that unlocked something, you were grinning!" NECO points at you accusingly, her brow furrowing. "Come on, at least read out a paragraph or two!"

You glance at NECO before tapping your phone against the heel of your hand. ...Well, for a pain in the ass that you'd been itching to pump a few bullets into, she has been cooperating, so why not. Throwing her a bone wouldn't be remiss right now.

You make a show of looking at your screen and paraphrasing the journal entries she'd just helped unlocked. Something about Sayaka being a massive bitch, one that is known as such around the whole world - as well as the bit about banana ramen being the tastiest thing NECO could ever hope to taste. That should be enough for her, right?

"Eh? She said that, really?" NECO's brow furrows in puzzlement. "Well, I guess the first one's more like her, but the second...I thought she hated that crap? Then again, she really likes weird stuff, so..." The blonde young woman shakes her head. "Yeah, okay, sure. Why not? She's always been like that, nya."

Hnh. Well. You weren't expecting her to fall for that, but she seems satisfied, at least.

"Well, I don't think you've got any reason to lie to me, Chiaki-nyan. Can I call you Chiaki-nyan?" NECO smiles - not a smug one, but one that at least smacks SOME sincerity. "I mean, of course there's the possibility that you are, but it's not the first time I was lied to. Not the first time this happened, either." She shakes her handcuffed wrist, making the chains jingle. "But I've been able to manage so far, nya."

Well, she has, you'll give her that. Until Kyoko and Kumatora caught up with her. Until she made the mistake of spying on your date with Midorin.

"You're still sore about that?" NECO makes a face, here. "Alright, alright, I can tell, nya. And I know I was kinda, like, really mean earlier? But my point stands, you know. A lot of people are looking at you and wondering when the next time you'll freak out during a joint op and wipe them out. They're looking at you and the Ninth, Chiaki-nyan. Looking really, really hard and close."

"So hey, I got a really cool idea." Her face brightens up as she leans forward again, both hands on her knees. "I know you don't trust me, and I'm pretty sure you're itching to shoot my kneecaps off, and all. Or maybe in the face or something."

She shakes her head. "But maybe, just maybe, Chiaki-nyan, we can all set that aside and help each other. After all, I've been totally helpful, right? I even told you my tragic backstory, so we're cool now, riiiight? "

So, something that I've been wondering: How many inter-Officio wars were started because the respective Incubators disagreed with each other, and how many were started by their Warmasters?

Because this is the important part: the war between the 3rd and the 9th was started by Murderface and Kharn, not because of an argument between the Incubators. How many times has that happened, and is that the reason why Warmaster Murderface is generating so much interest?
Because a Warmaster that can initiate a war by going crazy during a joint op (since the details of why Murderface killed all those Magical Girls didn't really get out), without the prior authorization of her Incubator, is like a rabid dog, even moreso than even the other crazy Warmasters. As crazy as they were, they didn't initiate a war that resulted in an entire Officio being wiped out (regardless of the exact details).

In that context, believing that NECO got past our defenses while the other Officios haven't gotten their own Callidus agents in, is ludicrous.

"No, no tricks, Chiaki-nyan." NECO's grin goes wider. "Here's how it goes. I want to work with you, so if you grant me interviews from time to time, an'nya couple of favors here and theeere - I'll be a little more judicious with what goes out about the Ninth, nya."

You shake your head, here. Deal's off. Who the hell does she think she's dealing with? If you wanted news censorship about the Ninth, then you can do it right here, right now - either by leaving her to rot here or just shooting her, period. You're not about to become her fucking errand girl just for that--

"I know, I know! Jeez, let me finish, Chiaki-nyan!" The blonde young woman snaps. "AS I was saying, I'll be looking the other way, alright? But not all the time, I'm not gonna lie for you, so maybe don't start punching out babies, nya. But the thing is, I'll also tell you who's listening in, who's paying attention, and who's going around askin' questions." It's here that NECO leans back, arms crossed confidently underneath her chest.

"I may not be one of your sparklies, Chiaki-nyan, but I've got enough connections of my own that I may as well be, nya!"

Hnh. Well. You ignore the little boast. Supposing you say yes. What kind of favors is she talking about, here? Because if she wants someone killed, then she has to take it up with Kyuubey--

"No, no! Nothing like that!" Izumi shakes her head furiously. "Just...stuff! Favors! Information, I guess! Promise, it's not gonna be like, Kyuubey's credit card number or something. It's just stuff that you'd probably be offering already if I didn't ask them for you first. Nothing incriminating, just things and information that only Chiaki-nyan will only be able to get. That's all."

That's pretty vague, but...well, she is saying that it wouldn't be anything too out of the way, or too important to the Officio.

Accepting this deal is a bad idea. These are unspecified favors. We don't know who her contacts are or who she works for. She's sneaky enough to fool us and some of our rank leaders, she could be planning this just to get closer to us to get that scoop she's been looking for.

Before we take anything, we need to do a full background check, find out what she's into that she doesn't have on her chirpee. Also, we need to raid this filthy assistants computer and confiscate any...inappropriate material. Only then once we know what we're getting into should we agree. Besides, let NECO sweat down here a little before agreeing, it might make her change the terms.

Some of the crazier Warmasters have attempted to, and there has been squad-against-squad action from time to time (the Eighth is very guilty of this). But they've never escalated to the point that the 3rd and the 9th had gone into. What's more, the 3rd and the 9th had a generally good working relationship with each other, with two of the most business-minded of Incubators, so it came to a surprise, too. It's also when the rumors of Kyuubey being insane really started to circulate.

".... Do you take me for a fucking IDIOT?! Do you think I do not know that? Do you think I do not realize that if some amateur journalist without MAGICAL POWERS can spy on, that TRAINED professionals with special POWERS can do the same and much better?!
That's why Kyoko and [whatshername] were there. NOT because I want them around during my PRIVATE DATE!

The thing I said to you earlier? It was simply to see if you realize that to."

Then we get our face closer to hers.

"What matter is that you RUINED. MY. FUCKING. DATE!
That was the one day. ONE FUCKING DAY. That I put aside for myself in MONTHS. no. AS LONG AS I CAN REMEMBER.
It was supposed to be one night when I felt like a normal fucking human being. No missions, no assassins, no crazy goddesses. Just me and my date.
Do you know that I put aside my dinner with Mami just to go on that date? ~~Not sure if we actually should say this~~ Huh? DO YOU!? Do you realize how important that was for me?

And then you had to come butt in and ruin everything with your stupid shit!
Do you know that Midori passed out just after that due to stress that was in no small amount thanks to you!? ~~Not entirely true but she doesn't have to know~~"

"THAT is why I'm pissed off!
THAT is why I'm holding back each and every muscle back from shooting you in the face!"

Maybe not that long but you get the gist.
We could've saved our face from that retarded bit of dialogue. Tell her we know that others spy too (Didn't we make that observation already during Ruri's mission?)

Not that I can remember; that was more about the things we were worried about were publicly available on the Internet.

Most times that I can remember us letting our shadowruns concerning the secrecy of Magical Girls get the better of us (not shadowruns about prepping for missions), we've usually been humiliated by people telling us that what we've been worrying about is common knowledge.

In fact, I think Deculture should stop taking player's dialogue options as is and instead rephrase them to fit the narrative better.
I really don't like it when he simply links to the post and gives us the reaction. It really breaks the flow.

>>29150650
While maybe not in the actual Deculture's plot posts, I'm sure some anons made that observation.

It's not that far-fetched really. After all the defenses and screening we set up, some normie journalists gets through all that means that others can spy on us just the same. I mean, you'd have to be really dense to not understand that.

Even, lets say, if we have 100% full-proof scanner to detect magical girls that doesn't stop our enemies from hiring normal professionals.

In an event that she would have passed out anyway. We wouldn't have been that pissed off. In fact, we might have thought it was endearing and cute. We wouldn't have gone to sleep thinking how mad we are at Neko.

The entire date got soured because of Neko's meddling. And this is how we are going to remember it. Our first date with Midori which got ruined by that fucking cat.

The entire rant hangs on the fact that the players stop being fucking doormats for one second.
If she still mocks us, then we can at very least bash her fucking face on the wall hard enough to break her nose and few teeth.

But we all know that wont really happen.
Sometimes, we should stop being so meta and detached from the character and act irrational and spontaneous. I know that we are trying to stop the Murderface experience but being extreme in any direction is bad. We cannot be nice ALL the time nor can we murderboner all the time.
Not saying to kill her or even handicap her for life but show her that we are willing to do that if she pushes us AND THEN ACTUALLY going through the threat.
Because we are threatening, not bluffing.

Why is it that a Yakuza, who compared to Neko was a damn gentleman and paragon of politeness, didn't get the time of the day but when a some DMNPC shows up who is also a hot girl we need to be so careful.

I feel Chiaki became too much of a goodie-two-shoes compared to the start of the story. She is all bark no bite lately. I know that is what we want, and i wanted it too, but not to this extend. Shooting kneecaps was literally her being merciful, and now look at where we are...

I hope we build it in Deculture's backyard.

Let me elaborate.

She has been imprisoned before meaning that the same opportunity has arisen for the filthy assistant before (assuming she's didn't hire her recently). Which means that Neko already lived through the same shit before. And since the filthy assistant is still assistant and not dead in a ditch somewhere means that Neko wasn't bothered by this ~~or it is in fact a contingency to notify her friends, allies and employers. Remember that she said that she has a lot of connections? How do you know she doesn't have somebody in our Officio which we don't know of?~~

Of course this is just a lot of speculation and assumptions. We might never know how bothered Neko actually. As I said, she can act very good.

>Shooting kneecaps was literally her being merciful

Oh God, this.
With all the NPC talk about our knee-capping tendencies I forgot that it is Chiaki just being nice. Normally she just kills you with no question. Remember how we almost shot Sayaka, how she almost pissed her pants because our intent on killing her at the moment was so pure that she knew it wouldn't take us much to pull the trigger.
And now some normie journalist is openly mocking us.

Something we could have done for good/bad cop routine:

After we sit down in front of her with our big gun in our lap. At some point we go like this:

"[...] You know, Neco, I promised Sayaka here that I will not blow your knees off.
But you know what? I'm feeling really generous right now and I will let you in on a small secret. Just between you and me."
Lean in and say loud enough for Sayaka to hear:
"I do not keep my promises."

Kinda cheesy and seems like from an action movie script. But it is absolutely true. We don't always keep promises.
If Neko is as good at reading people as I think she is, she will sense the truth.

Which is true. We broke a pretty big promise just recently. Chiaki may think it was or was not real but she DID remember the promise. We even got a suggestion prompt to avoid breaking it and we did it anyway.

I'm just saying that if we did this, it would be true and we wouldn't need to try to bluff or whatever.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/31/13(Tue)08:00 No.29190493

You narrow your eyes at NECO's outstretched hand. You went into this interrogation angry, angry enough to shoot someone in the face, or in their kneecaps - and you still are, in fact. But even you think that getting rid of the annoying amateur journalist in this way, at this point in time, would only be one hell of a waste.

Never mind that she fucked up your date with Midori, she helped you unlock two of your journal app's entries, revealing the second set. She'd also offered you a deal - in exchange for an interview and some favors here and there, she'll be serving as your undercover snitch of sorts, notifying you just who's looking at your direction and trying to suss you out. Like a Callidus of your own, except without a contract to trace her back to you.

...Gh. You hate this. Yeah, sure, you understand how it's important, but...you never did like the cloak-and-dagger aspect of being a Magical Girl contracted to an Officio. It's...sneaky. Underhanded. Dishonest.

Politics. That's what it is, it's politics. Something you never had to worry about as a Vindicare - you only worried about the fact that whoever you aimed your gun at became dead and stayed dead. No such luck for you now, being Warmaster and shit.

You let out a sigh, before reaching out and shaking NECO's hand.

This must be what making a deal with the Devil feels like.

Well, no. That's silly. She's all the way up in Siberia, probably worrying about baby clothes or something.

>> ☐ Deculture 12/31/13(Tue)08:02 No.29190504

>>29190493

She's got a deal, you murmur quietly, trying your best not to succumb to the temptation of crushing her fingers in your grasp.

"Awesome, nya!" NECO giggles, giving your fingers a squeeze. "And as a signing bonus, I'll rummage around the stuff that Malal left me for other passwords! Those'd help, right?"

Yeah. Yeah, they'd help a lot.

...Just a little pressure. Not a lot, just enough...

"Ahahaha, al-alright, Chiaki-nyan, I get it, I get it," NECO manages as you watch her smug, carefree smile slowly change into a nervous grin, and then into a wince. "Okay, okay, you're really strong, that's cool, but you're crushing my hand. You're crushing my hand now and it's my good hand and I can't really type with just one hand so please let go ow ow ow OW OW!"

You finally let go aftr the fifth 'ow', the blonde girl pulling away and shaking her hand furiously. A hurt look on her face. ...Yeah, fine, that was a bit mean, but it also felt good. Unnaturally good.

"...Alright, I guess I deserved that," Izumi grumbles. "So, everything's settled, then? Can I get my stuff and go? I've got an interview scheduled today, and I don't really want to leave things to my assistant for too long, nya..." She shakes her head, here.

How do you react?

[]Give her back her things, let her go.
[]Give her back her things, but tell her that she won't be leaving just yet.
[]Other.

She needs to meet Midori. For... reasons.

Several good reasons, actually. Not least of which is that she'll be the one in the Warmaster's Office most of the time, with a direct line to you. She's the information specialist, which means that she's probably Neco's best contact, Kyubey is watching her, so he'll keep her from anything TOO dangerous.

And when we eventually fuck up so bad that we're dead, or not Warmaster anymore, Neco still has another in at the ninth.

I'm still not sure why she'd need an in with us directly, though, given that she seems to have Kyubey's favour.

Sure, we've technically got the power to take the Officio to war, and probably do any number of other things, but in practical terms, the Officio is, and has been, set up to tick along very well without an actual Warmaster for some time.

Mumi doesn't have all the facts, she's working on normal puella logic and comon sense. Which is frankly just not fucking enough; on the other side of the equation is Malal which, in possession of ALL the facts, spent her entire life as some sort oof heat-seeking missile annihilating everything in her path to pave the way for survival, even surrendering her life for that. And she still wasn't sure if that was enough.

Mami doesn't have those facts. She's basically doing an excellent job of keeping a city mostly in order and prospering- which, unknown to her, is sitting ona volcano about to erupt. Her judgement will be the end of Chiaki if you rely on her as soon as shit really stats to go down.

You give her back her things. Yes, she's free to go - Sayaka will see her out of the building.

"Ahaha, Sayaka-nyan, huh? She'll scold me the entire way out. Not looking forward to THAT." NECO shakes her head as she takes her effects from you. "...You didn't try to break into my phone, did you, Chiaki-nyan? Because it has a failsafe that makes it delete everything inside after three attempts!" She pulls out her phone and checks it, before breathing a sigh of relief. "Oh, good, you didn't. Not that there was anything important in here, it's just that it's SUCH a bitch to get all my contacts back, since it's a permanent wipe and everything."

Huh. Well. You didn't really mess with it, no. Although you were pretty tempted to just toss everything into the incinerator, to be completely honest.

"Then I guess I'm lucky you didn't, Chiaki-nyan!" Izumi grins at you. "And don't look so glum! I know you still don't trust me, but I NEVER break my promises. Like we agreed on - no operational details or anything like that, or at least nothing that's going to bite you in the ass security-wise, nya. Just the really juicy bits."

...Right. Well. You'll try to uphold your own end of the deal. But if she tries to fuck with you again...

"Geez, I already told you I wouldn't, right?" The blonde frowns at you. "You're really intense, and yeah, that's pretty cool, but you lose a few cool points being all broody and stubborn like that."

Whatever. Just so long as she understands what she agreed to.

"Yes, yes, of course, perfectly clear, Chiaki-nyan~" NECO replies in a sing-song sigh. "Ahh, everything seems to be here! I'm all set! Just this handcuff to take off and--"

You absently reach forward and pull the pair of handcuffs apart with your bare hands, the tempered metal easily giving way with sharp, pinging snaps. NECO blinks at this, before audibly swallowing as you toss the broken, twisted remains of the civilian restraints onto the bed.

"...Whoa. I...I keep forgetting you girls can do that kind of stuff." The blonde giggles, sounding rather forced. "Anyway, uh...anything else before I go, Chiaki-nyan? It kinda looks like you want something else from me."

Hnh. Well, you'd like to say 'Your skull', here, but then again, you're not Kharn. So you ask her for her smartphone number instead. It'd make things easier for the both of you if you had a direct line to each other. Cuts through the red tape and everything.

"Ahh, I almost forgot about that! Silly me!"

You also give her Midori's number, something that she looks at you strangely about.

"Are...are you sure, Chiaki-nyan? This is Midorin-nyan's number, right? What are you giving this to me for?"

You explain that you're just simply thinking of the future - if there came a time that you yourself were compromised, then she'd still have another in to the Ninth. Add to that, Midori's your own personal Callidus, so she'll be taking care of intel matters for you.

"I get the bit about her being your info officer, but..." It's the second time in this interrogation that NECO looks hesitant. Scared, almost. "...You're not planning on self-destructing or something, are you, Chiaki-nyan?"

How do you react?

You take the time to light a cigarette and suck it down to almost its filter before replying - breathing out the smoke through your nostrils as you do so. Didn't she just imply earlier that your amnesia could strike again, at any time? That's what you're doing, here. Planning for that eventuality. As much as you'd want for it to not happen, there's still that chance that it could, and you want to make sure that loose ends are tied up nice and tight in case it does.

Where's this concern coming from, anyway? Yeah, you get it that Malal's left all this shit for you to do something with, and NECO's involved somehow...but what's she suddenly concerned about you for? Only moments earlier she was treating you like some piece of meat, nothing more than a juicy scoop.

"...YOu know, sometimes I tell Sayaka-nyan to tone it down a bit, her always being mad, never letting go of stuff? That she was the worst at keeping it cool. Turns out someone else is worse at it than her." Izumi shakes her head, before stepping past you, making for the door. "Don't worry, Chiaki-nyan. I'll keep my promise, whatever happens. Just that...well..."

Well, what?

"...Malal really believed in you. I think she still does, wherever she is." The blonde turns slightly to look at you from the corner of her eye. "Please try not to prove her wrong."

You turn away, biting into the filter of your spent cigarette as she calls out for Sayaka, telling her that she's about to leave. The door to the Silent Room clatters open, revealing a very surprised blue-haired Eversor. You give her a nod, one she returns with wide eyes, and you watch as she escorts NECO out of the Silent Room, the amateur journalist free to pester the Magical Girl world with her own brand of journalism once more.

The door slides shut again, leaving you alone with your thoughts, and a whole lot of unreleased anger.

"Time will tell if You sit back down on the bed, wondering if you'd made the right decision, here. It...it feels like you do, but at the same time...

...Kyuubey. Just what you needed.

Wait. Where's the little mutant bastard cat? You didn't see him come in--

"Right here, Matsuda." You blink as the furry white creature slips out from underneath the bed, his tail brushing against your stockinged legs. "Nobody really looks under there, so I thought I'd sneak in and see how my Warmaster would deal with her latest prisoner."

He clears the space between the bed and the floor with ease, perching on the bed beside you. A moment later, he's looking at you with those piercing red eyes of his again, his tail flicking from side to side.

"Well! Getting someone like her under your own employ, AND letting her go with both her kneecaps intact. Today is a day of many surprises, Matsuda. And to think I was just about to call in the cleanup crew to get her brain matter out of the sheets!"

You light another cigarette with the still-burning stub of your last one, inhaling deeply before replying. You're Warmaster now, right? You can't just go around killing people simply because you don't like them. It wouldn't have solved anything, anyway.

You're more surprised, though, that he didn't offer her a contract right then and there. She'd make for a really effective and dangerous Callidus, wouldn't she? Someone who can get around like that?

"You may have a point there, and I will confess, the possibility did cross my mind." Kyuubey glances downward to examine a paw, before licking the back of it. Ugh, he's grooming himself again. "But she seems to be doing well enough as a civilian, I think. Her being unaffiliated with any Officio shields her from suspicion and distrust. It's an effective cover as any, and giving her a contract would just compromise it to the point of uselessness." He looks up, here. "I daresay that's your logic to employing her as well, yes?"

...Sort of. Yeah. You suppose so.

"Then we are in consensus, Matsuda. Another surprise." He nods. "And if you're going to ask, our counter-intelligence efforts have reported no significant findings, in regard to enemy Callidus activity. That said, I have been getting calls from other Warmasters to ask about you. It seems that your performance in the Kirishima Operation has caught their attention."

Yeah? Well. That's...that's a good thing, you think. Shows them that the Warmaster of the Ninth isn't to be fucked with.

"As you say, Matsuda, as you say." Kyuubey says lightly. "Ah, before I forget. I've had Tomoe Mami process the interrogation of your other prisoners - the ones you captured from the stadium. So far, they've been spouting the Primer by memory, page by page, paragraph by paragraph. Nothing really of note as to where Mikuni Oriko or her cohorts may be hiding. Then again, we've only tried rigorous questioning, so perhaps a more robust approach is needed."

A more 'robust' approach. Why can't he just call it like it is? Torture?

"Because..." Kyuubey starts, before blinking. He seems like he can't quite process your question. "...Well, I suppose that's a more succinct way of putting it, but it feels a bit brazen to do so." He blinks, again. "Yes. It sounds like something my younger brother would say."

Ah. Jyuubey.

"Right. Yes." Another blink. "Well, unless there's anything else, that was all I needed to convey to you at this time, Matsuda. Again, I'm pleasantly surprised at how you're gelling into the role that I've given you. Keep it up."

You tell him to wait. He was saying something about the Primer? When can you get another copy for yourself? Just so that you're not so ignorant of Officio policy this time around.

"The Primer? Ah, easily done." Kyuubey darts underneath the bed once more, before crawling back out, this time with a slim, hardbound volume held by his teeth. He places this beside you on the bed. "There. If you ever need to refer to anything regarding Officio Policy, use that, or ask Tomoe Mami."

You take the Primer with a nod, before leafing through it. ...The small type makes it a bit hard to read, but this should do.

"Is there anything else, then, Matsuda? Oh, and I'd like to remind you that you have that offshore mission in a few days. I hear that Miki Sayaka's blocked off the entire training hall for your Eversor training, so you may want to get started on that."

Ah. Right.

Is there anything else you'd like to ask Kyuubey?

It's supposed to be a simple smash-and-grab on an offshore oil rig.
We currently don't know the target, no map or plans of the rig, no information on opposition, no ingress or egress routes, no contingencies.

The only plan we have right now is that we go in with Kyouko and Sayaka, and blow stuff up.

Or 3 and 4, depending on if you think that getting Kirika's view on things, and if she'll help us against Ahriman's control of Oriko, will help to sway Kyouko; or if Kyouko being stabilized and not about to go gallivanting off to 'save' Oriko will force Kirika to accept working with us to stop Ahriman.

Though I think that Oriko is working with Ahriman of her own free will, and once Kirika realizes that, will try to backstab us with psionic static as hard as she can if we bring her along.

And the Staff may be usable by Oriko remotely; she did have it fly into her hands even though she's not Contracted. That would mean that she could use both the Katana and the Staff at the same time.

To put it differently, we have to put Oriko in Mayuri's position.

See that Divergence number? It's wrong. In the universe where it's over 1.0 Mayuri lives. Below that, and no matter what they tried to do about it, she died. Let's turn our Divergence number to below 1 so that Oriko cannot possibly escape.

You shove the Primer into your inventory as you ask Kyuubey about the other Warmasters. What have they been asking, specifically? Anything you'd need to know?

"A lot of things, mostly trivial. The Fourteenth, for example, asked if you had the same appetites as Kharn. The Thirteenth gave her usual appeal for blood and tissue samples, one I've once again put on hold. The others wanted to know if you were truly a Vindicare as your public profile displayed, and not an Eversor. Most of all, though, they wanted to know if you were actually fit for the role of Warmaster, if I hadn't actually gone insane by appointing you."

...And what did he say to that, then?

"That Incubators, insane or no, generally retain their wits and common sense about them, and are able to make sound decisions even when compromised in such a manner. As such, my being insane does not factor into my bestowing upon you the rank of Warmaster, Matsuda." A smirk. "I wouldn't worry about it, though, it all boils down to posturing, and trying to poke holes at the newcomer's armor. Just do your best, Matsuda, and everything will fall into place then."

Right. Well...you don't have anything else besides that, then.

Oh, wait, no. The recon team for the offshore mission. What about that? Did they find anything?

"Ah, yes, about that." Kyuubey nods. "I had the recon team make an overhead sweep of the entire facility that you'll be raiding, and from how it appears it seems to be relatively normal. Nothing out of the ordinary." A moment. "Of course, they did report that it seemed too normal, and they suspect some sort of sensor-dampening technology being used inside the facility. That, or Callidus Illusion - although I would say that the first is likelier."

Ah. Right. But there's still a chance of Magical Girl opposition, isn't there?

"That would certainly be the worst-case scenario here, but I wouldn't worry about it. Just focus on the mission objective and getting past any obstacles you may encounter. If any of my brothers whine and complain, I will take care of them personally." He sniffs.

...Still. It sounds a bit reckless, even for him. Isn't he afraid his brothers would carry grudges, things like that?

"Impossible." Kyuubey blinks. "Well...no, not impossible. But we are a logical sort, Matsuda, and we do not let our emotions get the better of us that easily."

Hnh. Well. If he's that confident, then sure. But he shouldn't blame you if one of his bros suddenly come screeching because you killed three of his Eversor squads, or something.

"That would certainly be ironic, wouldn't it?" The smirk again. "I'll leave you to your training, Matsuda. Have a good one, and try not to embarrass yourself too much. You are Warmaster, after all." And with that, the Incubator leaves, the door immediately shoving itself out of the way as soon as he approached. Leaving you alone once more in the Silent Room.

...Hnh. Well. At least you have that mission to look forward to.

It has all the makings of a horrible disaster in the making, but at least you'll be able to shoot your way out of it this time.

You leave the Silent Room a few moments later, a fresh cigarette held between your lips. A message from Miki Sayaka having beeped its way into your smartphone only moments later.

~~The entire series is about trying to get the seed above 1.0 to stop that happening. The protagonist jumps through so many timelines trying to do that before eventually joining forces with his future self and his best friend's future daughter via a videophone and pulling off some magnificent bullshit to reach a timeline where the Divergence number is above 1.0 ('Steins Gate')~~

It's pretty good. Worth watching, I'd say.

You decide to take the XV Golden Weapon - the chainaxes, Gorefather and Gorechild - for training today. You remember that Yuu did take a beating the last time you used the gauntlets, and she'd meekly asked to be given a few days' rest. You were more than happy to give her all the time she needed to recover, seeing as without her you'd have probably gotten off worse during the stadium fight.

On your way to the chainaxes, you brush your fingertips across the smooth, polished surface of the bangles lying in their custom foam insets - and you feel them growing warm immediately at your touch. What sounds like Yuu sighing contentedly blossoming in your mind, like a child would during a particularly happy and restful dream.

You make a note to visit her again as soon as you can. Probably after the training, or something, when you have to put the chainaxes back. See if you can talk to her face-to-face again, just like you did during the stadium.

As you walk towards the chainaxes, however, it's here that you notice something strange about the Muramasa. There's...there's no killing intent coming from it, no heavy sense of foreboding or anger. Not even the barest hint of malice. As if it had suddenly been scrubbed away, leaving behind a simple katana with a golden blade and an overtly-elaborate sheathe.

You're still leery of it, of course. The last time you used it, you very nearly hacked Midori into pieces, and probably would've done the same to Kharn if you hadn't broken out in time, and then only barely. Not surprising, considering that the previous owner was a bigger bitch than Sayaka would ever be, and you killed her in the most humiliating way possible.

And every time you'd been in here, you felt it. You felt its hate, its anger, its frustration. It'd quake inside its frame, rattling against the restraints, the blade inside the sheath clacking against the sides in an attempt to shake itself loose. It had so much hate in it that you sincerely felt that you'd need to have it exorcised or something, before using it.

Now, however...it's peaceful. Placid. As if it had already surrendered, had already given up being an asshole of a sword.

What do you do?

[]Touch it. See if you can actually use it this time.
[]Leave it alone, don't fuck around. Head straight for the chainaxes and then leave for the training hall.

You let out the breath you've been holding - ignoring how it misted the air in front of you - and make for the XX Golden Weapon, Muramasa. ...Nope, even this close to it, you don't feel all the bad juju it usually greets you with. Not even the barest hint of it. Which could either be a good or bad thing, but if you take the former owner into consideration...

Pulling out your smartphone, you send Sayaka one brief reply to her message earlier. You take your time to make sure it's properly spelled, though, none of that abbreviated, clunky bullshit she sent.

>Doing something stupid with Kirika's sword. Just so you know.

You wait for it to be sent - and for the phone to confirm that it HAS been sent - before stuffing your phone back into your inventory and then reaching for Muramasa with both your hands - one on the tail end of the sheath, the other at the handle. ...This close, you should definitely feel something, look, you're almost touching the fucking thing already--

The sword gives a dull clunk as both your hands clamp around it at the same exact time - but nothing else besides that. Just silence, and the slightest chill of the airconditioned room you're standing in.

...It's not even trying to struggle in your grasp. It's...it's actually behaving. None of that The Exorcist bullshit where it tries to possess you and make your head spin around or something. It's not even making you WANT to kill people, it's just...there. In your hands. One of the most well-balanced and sharpest swords you've ever used, or anyone has used.

Well, it doesn't make you WANT to kill people, but it does make you want to train with it. To use it, to spar with it. And a golden sword isn't really all too shabby, considering that it does look like a work of art, too...

There's one way you can tell if it's actually the real thing, but you'll have to unsheathe it.

You decide to unsheathe it. You have to find out. If it turns out that this is a fake Muramasa, then that means the original's out there, somewhere, and that's not good.

With one hand grasping the sheath and the other the handle, you slowly, carefully, pull them in opposite directions - revealing the brilliant, luminous blade encased in the gilded ebony. For a moment the gold light seems to fill the entire room, overwhelming even the harsh lighting of the overhead fluorescent lamps above. Flooding your vision with a warm, divine golden glow.

The soft hiss of a finely-forged blade being slowly snuck out of its sheath tickles your ears - and finally, the entirety of Muramasa is bared, revealed to you in all of its glory. The sword itself actually seeming to sing as it cut through the air, even when held by your own inexperienced hands. The XX emblem at the base of the blade, where metal met guard, all but glowing.

...Yep, this is the real thing, alright. Superbly balanced, with a comfortable heft that made you feel like you could hack away with it for hours, even days on end without getting tired. The grip natural in your hand, warm, easy. The perfect killing weapon.

And nothing's happening to you. Nothing...bad.

You look down at yourself, then at the Golden Weapon in your grip.

Huh. So it looks like the procedure actually worked. It actually worked.

Still no Kirika, either. That's strange, but...does this mean you can finally use this thing without worrying about going berserk, or something? Because you hope it does - not being able to use Muramasa as it's meant to be used feels a bit depressing, somehow.

File: 1388517517441.jpg-(81 KB, 300x300, christmas a shit.jpg)

Christmas at the Eighth was always a pain in the ass, but this year was worse than most. Everyone but me was determined to make up for every Christmas the witches might cost us this time; it meant weeks of catching Mary and Sab snuggling and drinking chocolate or, fuck me, loitering under the mistletoe. Weeks of Annie, Lily, and Dorothy singing the same six Christmas carols door to door, even though we had our own dorm and we could hear them perfectly goddamn well from anywhere in the building. Weeks of pretending a giant, cackling shitstorm wasn't coming in a month and change.

Nico hung around whenever she didn't have anything better to do, which was always, and Nakajima pranced around in her doofy reindeer costume for the whole month. She dragged her sister into it, too, and managed to con V and the new girl, Everett, into playing along. Turned the whole thing into one big, autistic sleighride.

…Everyone else always seemed to have so much fun, but it just left me feeling lonely, I guess. She probably didn't need to put up with this crap. Probably didn't even realize Christmas was coming up. Hell, she was in Japan, she probably didn't care either.

Wasn't much better once the actual day rolled around. Went to mass with my dad – we'd been trying to patch things up, then. I never hated the guy, he still loved me…family crap, I guess. Not many magical girls still got to have that. That's what Miss Tomoe said, and I could never say no to Miss Tomoe. It didn't really make sitting in a church for a thousand fucking hours any less painful, though.

After I got away from him, I ended up sitting and sulking at the Wonderland Corps' Christmas party. Did my best to ignore the Christmas cheer, but between the little puffed-up marshmallows in my hot chocolate and the fluffy red sweater Dorothy'd thrown at my face when I came through the door…well, it was hard.

…It had a cute little snowman on it, one that looked like he didn't give a fuck about anybody. Probably one of the better gifts I've gotten – I like sweaters, I guess. I usually wear one when it isn't too hot, which is basically never in Cali.

Mary was most of the way to trashed by the time I got there, with Sab acting as her leather-covered pillow and occasional tongue-warmer. It'd probably piss me off on any other day, watching them grope each other like that, but I could let it slide for once. They looked happy, and with Blackburn, that was kinda rare.

Amber and her sister were flitting around in their outfits serving drinks and snacks, handing out gifts, and dodging everyone's best attempts at grabbing their asses. Nico started it, and Annie joined in pretty quick, something about maids and an impossible ideal, some weird anime crap. I could swear I saw Dorothy swat at them a few times, too, in between leading carols. She might have been the only one out of the three that could tell them apart, though.

…Shit, I couldn't either, not without a good look at their eyes. Didn't even realize they looked so much alike until they-

BANG.

"WENDY!" The door flew open and just about put a crack in the wall next to it, and a voice I…seriously didn't expect to hear today croaked out my name. One choked by way too much liquor and cigarettes for a…sixteen-year-old? Fifteen? Shit, I didn't know. What I did know was that seven highly-trained Eversors, a Vindicare, an assassin, and a maid all snapped to attention at once, all of them reaching for a weapon. Kong had a pistol out a millisecond later.

…Crazy assholes. All of them were crazy assholes. They all stared at each other for a second as I pushed myself up out of my seat and made my way toward the door, then pulled that stupid, stupid asshole into a hug. A tight one.

…I wanted to see her. I'd kinda given up on it, though – the Ninth was doing more prep than anybody for Walmart Night, it sounded like. I could hear Nico start to say something, then stop. I'd have to explain this later, I guess, but it was worth it, to feel her bury her face in my awesome snowman.

"…Got you something," she mumbled into my chest. …She really didn't wanna let go. I glanced awkwardly back toward the others just in time to take something soft and green to the side of my head. Managed to catch it in one hand before it hit the ground, though.

"I made one for her too~" Dorothy chirped.

We excused ourselves from the party pretty quickly, hurrying away from a chorus of catcalls and Nakajima's squeaky reminder to use a condom and a dental dam. They'd all made it pretty awkward, and Kong seemed like she was trying to bury her face in the collar of her new sweater. …Pretty cute. Maybe cuter if that was all she-no. …Maybe later. Maybe.

She awkwardly took my hand as we got closer to my room, and she hurried forward, tugging me along. Probably figured we were still being watched, she'd always been somebody that jumped at shadows. Maybe I was, too. Don't think anyone could blame either of us, though. Even I'd admit, there was a real feeling of relief once I locked the door behind us.

…My room felt really crappy, all of a sudden. Didn't make my bed or wash my sheets or anything, and I barely kept anything in here – a bunch of shitty paintings of bad dreams and an old famicom hooked up to a piece of crap TV. And the manga in the closet. Shit. Couldn't let her see that. She was pretty dense, but not retarded, it was going to look pretty crazy if she knew how much Murder Mayumi stuff I had.

Least she went for the paintings first.

"You do these?" she grunted out after a minute or two. "…They're weird." I caught her eye, which was a relief. Hell of a lot easier to read her expression that way than listening to her voice. Or looking at her face. She was confused, I…think. I mumbled out something about dreams, parroting the contents of some session or another with Mister Masada, way back when. Other outlets for the subconscious.

“Oh. So you paint the shit you see in your head. And it helps get it out.”

…Yeah. Something like that.

“Why are there body parts everywhere. ...What do those numbers mean. What the hell is this even supposed to be, a vagina?” She cocked her head to the side and leaned in toward one of them. …I didn’t want to spend Christmas answering questions like this, so I just hugged her from behind instead, and rested my chin on her head.

“You had something for me?” I kinda…wanted to see what she even came up with, too. Didn’t usually bother with the gift thing, and I didn’t think she did either. She nodded a little as she leaned back into me. We stood there for a minute or two, just kind of enjoying it while I played with an uncharacteristically pleasant tree on her sweater a little. I started to guide her back toward the bed…

…No. Too, ah…too suggestive. I cheated a little instead, and kind of…forced a couch to exist, I guess. A weirdly-shaped one that I came across in my dreams sometimes. She looked up at me as if to ask if I was fucking kidding her, but we settled in pretty quickly. It was…really something. I didn’t think I’d see her again before Walmart Night at all, and she…

Shit, she came to visit me all by herself and everything. Love this girl, she always…as much as she fucks it up, when she does things right, it’s just…

Man.

We cuddled up together in my winter scarf for a second before she messed with her shield, pulling a box out of her inventory…thing. Probably a box. It was hard to tell, it was more like a little bundle of paper and tape. I reached over to take it, but she just made that little noise she liked to make and hugged it to herself.

“…Too hot.” …Yeah. Between the sweaters and the scarf. No problem. Didn’t even have to get up.

Kong gave me the weirdest look as I cuddled in and closed my eyes, focused on draining the heat in my body away. Started to doze off a little, too, but that was good. Made it easier, when I could nail that sweet spot between awake and asleep. My blood felt like it had begun to slow, and most of my body started to numb…

“H…hey. Are you…?” I nuzzled into her neck to reassure her a little bit. My skin was snow white by now, I was sure. She jumped a little, and I felt her looking up at the ceiling. “…Is it snowing? You can make it snow?”

I nodded. It was one of my many awesome, useless powers.

“…You’re really cold.” I nodded again. That was what she wanted, right?

“…Homu.” She looked away, as she shoved the ball of paper and tape into my stomach, jolting me out of half-sleep. Eh. I could hold it either way, and watching the soft, fluffy flakes tumble from the ceiling was sort of fun. Should have tried this earlier, shit.

It was harder than I expected to tear the paper off with my hands as numb as they were, but I managed after a minute, and inside the box…

Four orange bottles of pills. …Prescription sleeping pills. How did she even…?

“…I looked it up,” she mumbled, almost inaudibly. “You have trouble sometimes, so… …use them.” After a second, she perked up. “I brought whiskey, too. For us. To share. …Merry…”

“Merry Christmas!” She belted it out all at once, loud and awkward. I laughed, and I threw my arms around her, probably freezing the hell out of her in the process. Too cute. She was way too cute. And I loved her for it. Next year. Next year I’d do something this nice for her. But for now, we still had all night…

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/02/14(Thu)08:32 No.29230052

You glance down at the Muramasa in your hands. ...You really weren't expecting this development, for it to be silent like this. It's almost a little disturbing. Is this what happened, then, when you ignore a Golden Weapon and leave it alone and unattended for a while?

Does the spirit inhabiting it go into hibernation, or something? You remember Yuu talking about how she drew energy from you to physically manifest - and you have been wearing the bangles for the entirety of the Kirishima operation. Maybe that was it, then? Deprived of any contact, Kirika's spirit just goes to sleep, inactive?

...Well, either way, you've got no time to speculate. You don't want to keep Sayaka waiting, and you don't really want to play around with a Golden Weapon that had more or less tried to fuck you over each time you've held it in your hands.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/02/14(Thu)08:34 No.29230068

That said, the chainaxes aren't much better, are they? They're huge, they're mean-looking, and...well, as awesome as they actually look, it seems that they were really tailor-made for someone like Kharn. Someone who had no issue looking like...well, a Devil. One with a fuckoff chainaxe in each hand and a foot-long tongue slithering from her mouth.

You let out a sigh, before placing Muramasa back on its rack, and then lifting Gorefather and Gorechild free from theirs.

...Christ, these things are heavy. Gorefather in particular, seeing as it's the bigger one of the two. How Kharn managed to wield them as she did, you'll never know. You doubt you'll be able to use them with even a quarter of the artistry the former Warmaster did, no matter how much Sayaka trains you.

Still, you may as well learn how to use them. They were given to you, after all, and there may come a time that your life would depend on the damn things.

You just wish they didn't look so...fucking bloodthirsty. Even in their inactive state, the toothed killing edges of both chainaxes remind you of a grinning Pinky, her own teeth stained red with blood.

It's here that you glance back at the Muramasa, before shoving both chainaxes into your inventory. ...Maybe you'll check it out again later, after training. Wake up Yuu for a bit, ask her how to communicate with a Golden Weapon, see if you can rile up Kirika if she's still in Muramasa.

With that in mind, you set off for the training room that Sayaka directed you to. Nodding at the Magical Girls who salute you on the way there, and ignoring everyone else. And after what seemed like the fiftieth time that you nodded in greeting, you ignored them too.

...Jesus, it feels like the entire Officio's trying to get in your way today. Is there really that many Magical Girls in Kyuubey's employ? You feel like you've nodded your head off. Yes, you know there's almost two thousand contractees in the Ninth, but for fuck's sake, it feels like the entire female population of Mitakihara went ahead and fucked themselves over by asking the mutant cat for a wish.

You find the 8B training room after a bit of looking around. You've never really had reason to go to it until now - training rooms like this one were usually reserved for Eversors, and those undergoing training to qualify for the rank.

The training room is...well, just what you expected, although cleaner. Unlike Kharn's training room of cold metal and dented steel, this one looks more like some sort of dojo hall, with polished wooden floors, lacquered nameplates and everything. There's even one of those racks full of training swords, the sort that really hurt when they hit. The center of the room itself is covered with a bright blue rubber mat. Most likely where all the sparring takes place.

And in the middle of that stands Sayaka herself, one hand already on the grip of that weird sword-gun sheathe of hers.

"You're late." She snaps at you, all business. "Well? What happened? Did you actually fuck around with Kirika's sword, or what?"

How do you respond?

Pretending to be possessed won't work nearly as well without Muramasa. If we had the sword, we could draw it without saying a word as we stare at Sayaka the entire time. Maybe throw in something that Kirika used to say (I can't remember her lines. Been too long.)

And it's been said before that they give off a "playful" vibe; it's just Kharn's brand of playful that involves murdeing people for fun.

Ekaterina was killed by Strauss. Kharn was created by Malal from her ashes, as an extremely crude continuation. From the one image we got of her (and the info that she was raised in a gulag, by her father who was the gulag's manager and entirely too torture-happy, even in presence of his daughter) the guess follows that she used to be a pretty haunted individual (a Vindicare to boot) and not exactly a sexual tyrannosaurus like Kharn is right now.

You know it's hilarious in hindsight how Kharn's phone entry said "she could be trusted with our life, but not more than that". It ended up not being because she was untrustworthy really, but more because she's a berserker who's as smart as a bag of hammers and wouldn't have really succeeded at anything other than helping us fight.

Just a little, you reply as you step over the threshold of the training room. Kirika wasn't up for fucking around, which was weird, considering that she'd always been a bit of a bitch whenever you tried to use the sword in any capacity. ...Wait, you don't need to take your shoes off for this, do you? Because it feels like you should, here.

"...What? With Kirika? But you retired her, didn't you? What the hell are you talking about? Oh, and yeah, take 'em off. You'll need proper traction here, anyway." Sayaka points towards the shoe rack off to the side, her own footwear already deposited in the uppermost tier, and very neatly. You smirk at this for a moment, before taking off yours and shoving them at the bottom tier, ignoring how they ended up askew.

"Cute. Now can you kindly explain what the fuck are you talking about? What's Kirika herself got to do with this, huh? Or did those things actually drive you crazy already?"

Oh, yeah. You didn't exactly explain to her that bit about the Golden Weapons, right? The bit about them retaining the soul of their user upon their deaths, and how you can actually talk to them, and have them help you out whenever you need it?

...Christ, how do you explain something like that? It sounds crazy even to you, and you normally don't give a shit.

Still, you try your best to explain, choosing your words carefully. At the very end of it, Sayaka's frown had gone from a grumpy disapproval to one of...well, grumpier disbelief.

"Are you FUCKING with me now, Murderface? Now I'm convinced, those things are actually driving you crazy. How is that possible? Someone gets their Soul Gem shattered, boom, they die, they don't exist anymore, end of story. They don't start inhabiting weapons just because they're gold, that's insane--"

She's calling something like that insane, when you're both Magical Girls created by mutant cats from outer space?

"That's different! I'm not--"

What about you being able to stop time? Or having an inventory that allows you to store shit like giant fuckoff chainaxes, even when your costume doesn't even have pockets? How about the fact that said mutant cats can actually compress the entire human soul into some shiny rock no bigger than an egg?

Sayaka glowers at you, here. "...You know, I kind of liked you as Girl A. Yeah, you always hung around Mami and generally made life shit for everyone, but at least you weren't this much of an annoying smartass." She shakes her head, before beckoning you forward onto the mat. "Fine, whatever. You did bring one of your golden weapons, right? Which one is it, then?"

You show her, drawing both Gorefather and Gorechild out from your inventory. Both of them falling on the training mat with dull, loud thuds.

"...Seriously? These things?" Sayaka shakes her head in disbelief. "You want to train using these? Why not use Kirika's sword instead, or those gauntlets you used back in the concert?"

Well, that's easy. You didn't want to risk it with Kirika's sword, not until you can figure out what's really going on with it. As for the gauntlets, well, Yuu needed to rest, so--

"Yuu? Who's Yuu?"

You open your mouth to explain, before Sayaka raises a hand. "Wait, no, I actually don't want to know. You're going to say that she's the ghost living in the gauntlets, right? And she talks to you or something?"

Well--

"Right. Okay. Let's...let's just keep it at that. It's way too early in the morning for crazy." It's here that she points towards the chainaxes. "Do you actually know how to use those things? And if they've really got ghosts in them or something, who's in there?"

How do you respond?

Nah. Honestly I think the issue is people think we will go full murderface if we act like it in interrogation. Chaki is a lot smarter about these things but people are going to reserved if she needs to create a bang then Chaki needs to make a bang and not monologue or the likes.

In other words I kind of think she is too reserved in it.

You shake your head.

"So you don't know how to use them. At all. Right." Sayaka lets out a breath through her teeth. "What about whoever's haunting them? No idea about that too?"

Yeah, no idea about that either. Statistically speaking, though, whoever they are, they're probably less crazy than Kirika.

"She wasn't really all that crazy, you know. Not like Kharn was." Sayaka shakes her head as she steps forward, leaning down on one knee to examine the chainaxes. You note here that she isn't making any attempt to touch them at all, seemingly comfortable with just looking at them at a closer distance. "She was just an asshole who really liked messing with people. And making them see what color their intestines were."

...Sounds like Kirika, alright.

"Right, we'll start you off with just one of them for now, it'll be easier to teach you the basics with that. I'll let you graduate to dual-wielding when I think you've learned enough." She points at Gorechild - the smaller of the two.

"Jesus, I thought they were huge when Kharn used them, but they look even bigger up close. How the hell did she even use them like she did?"

You were wondering about that yourself. Maybe she was just that kind of crazy, you guess.

"Eh, maybe." You pick up Gorefather and place it back in your inventory, before hefting Gorechild off the floor and clutching the haft with both hands - while Sayaka herself steps off of the mat, placing Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie on the training weapon rack and taking up a wooden sword in its place.

"From what I remember, Kharn's style was more of a full-out assault one. She doesn't really do defense, just got right in your face and hacked away until she won. Worked alright for her, but it probably won't for you, so we'll have to work on a different style." She pats your thighs with the sword.

"Spread those legs a bit more. Get a wider stance, so you don't get off-balance when you swing and miss. Grip's wrong, too - you're holding it like a baseball bat. Dominant hand should be higher up."

She fusses with your stance and grip for about five annoying minutes, tapping and poking you with the tip of her sword whenever you make a mistake in your adjustments. Just when you feel like Sayaka's just fucking with you here, she finally nods, making a satisfied noise.

"Not bad. Alright, that'll do. Now, holding it just like that, make a swing. You've chopped wood before, right?" You shake your head, and she grunts in disapproval. "Egh. Right. Then swing from your shoulders like you're chopping down a tree in front of you. So it should be like this--" She mimes a sideways hacking motion with her own sword. "Get it? Do it for me now."

You do so, and she grunts again.

"That'll do. Do that for me one hundred times, Murderface."

...One hundred times? Really?

"Who's training who, here? Get to it."

Christ. Fine. One hundred, then. Is she going to keep count for you, or...?

"You are. Go." You don't even need to look at her to hear the smirk in her voice. She's enjoying this, being able to order you around.

"Want me to make it two hundred? No whining when Sayaka-sensei's teaching. And put your back into it!"

...Bitch. You start your hundred, feeling your entire body protest at the sudden...exercise.

Jesus, is that it? Are you this out of shape? For a Magical Girl, are you really this noodly?

You growl at this, forcing yourself to ignore the various aches and pains suddenly rising up with every movement, every swing. You're not going to give Sayaka the satisfaction.

You continue swinging, trying your best to keep count while maintaining the rhythm you've established. Sayaka's watching you like a hawk, here, the Eversor clapping her hands every so often to help you regain cadence. ...She's really taking this seriously, isn't she?

+ Your form is shite, your swing is shite, and I'm not even turned on, here. What kind of bloody pikey are ya, anyway? Cripes, look at yer arms, they're like a pair of wet noodles blowin' in the wind--+

You're not a...pikey, or whatever the fuck that is, you shoot back in an irritated pulse. Your name is Chiaki Matsuda, Warmaster of the Ninth. You're the boss, here, and your arms are not noodly. They're just out of practice, that's all.

Who the hell is this, anyway?

+ Warmaster of the Ninth? + The voice seems to ignore everything else you've said. + Bollocks to that, I know who bloody well is the Warmaster of the Ninth. Where's that bird with the metal crud on her arms and legs? She's got really huge tits too, that was always nice. You don't even got any. + The voice laughs here - or rather, you hope that was laughing, as it sounded like someone snoring through their nose while trying to snort cocaine. + Look, alright, you've had your laugh, now give me back to Kharn. She'll probably let you off easy, maybe just take off yer arm, or maybe a leg, for stealin' me.+

"Keep in time, Murderface!" Sayaka shouts at you again, clapping once more. "One, two! One, two!"

+ And would you please tell that blue bitch to shut up? She's givin' me a right headache, here--+

Forty. Forty-one. Forty-two. Forty-three...

You reply just as you hit fifty strokes. You're not giving the chainaxes back to Kharn, you pulse back. You didn't steal them - Kharn herself gave them to you in the first place. And now you're training to learn how to use them properly.

Silence, and it's here that the voice seems to choke, here.

+ Y-you're joking, right? That's...she promised! We had an agreement! I don't believe this! Bloody hell, we were supposed to get the fucking high score together! That crazy bint! +

That's tough. You really, really do feel for her. But she's stuck with you now, so is she just going to complain or is she going to help you out, here?

+ Shut your gab, I'm tryin' to reconcile some deep, deep personal issues here! + The voice snaps, petulant. + It really hurts something fierce, ya know that? And we were really gettin' close, too... +

"Getting distracted, Murderface! Plus fifty strokes!" Sayaka yells, and you bite back a scathing retort.

+ Nope, I can't move on. Gots to get some closure. + It's here, then, that you see a silhouette materialize beside Sayaka - one just as tall as her, but with what looks like wolf ears sticking out from a shock of long, scraggly hair. And in that silhouette, you can barely make out a pair of glowing yellow eyes, and the grin of a bleached skull from where the lower half of its face should be.

+ Can you tell me what happened to Kharn, at least? Did she at least die fightin' or what? Don't tell me she retired, now, that'd be shameful. +

[]Tell the truth.

This is how it is supposed to look like, even though its still not perfect. Scars have a certain texture and depth to them, in that pic it looks like the guy is wearing some sort of bodysuit with painted on scars.

"Watch your form! Avoid overextending! Plus twenty strokes!"

You grit your teeth and continue swinging. ...Jesus, what happened to the adrenalin rush you used to get just touching these damn things? All you feel now is how heavy this thing is, and it's getting heavier by each stroke. You're up to seventy now. Just...what, seventy more or so to go? Fuck your life.

+ Well? + The voice's impatient pulse stabs at your mind. + What happened to Kharn? How'd she die? +

She's still alive, you snap back. Kharn, die fighting? Nothing could've beaten her, not even at her worst. Even without the chainaxes, she as a killing machine, period.

+ Then where in the bloody hells is she? If she's still alive like you're saying she is, she wouldn't have handed me off like...like underwear she's not using anymore! +

She gave the chainaxes to you, like you said. And yes, she could, because expecting mothers aren't supposed to be carrying on with huge fuckoff chainaxes anymore.

+ Ex...expecting mothers? Kharn? She's...don't tell me she got preggers-- +

She did, you grin at your hundred-and-tenth axe stroke. You sentenced her to live out the rest of her days as a housewife.

+ You....you cruel, ungodly BITCH! That's...that's cruel and unusual punishment! Do you realize what you've done, here? + The voice is stammering in its incredulity. + You've...you've just killed Picasso, here! You've taken away God's gift to murder and bloodshed! This is a crime, it is! She was an artist, and she was bloody good at what she did! +

It was time for her to retire. Everyone should be so lucky.

You should be so lucky.

+ Bah! Retirement's for dildos and old people! + The voice turns grating, here. + Ugh, and I've got to make do with you, I suppose, if I actually want to get the high score before the world ends and everything, yeah? + The shadow shakes its head in derision, before throwing up its hands in disgust.

+ Fine, I'll cooperate for now. You were honest, at least, for someone so bloody noodly. +

It's then that you feel the chainaxe become...lighter. Less clumsy. Feeling more like an extension of your arms rather than a heavy thing to hit other things with. Your movements feel more fluid, too, your arms less noodly.

+ Consider that a little gift. If ye help me get the top score, then maybe I'll consider makin' you half the Goddess of War that Kharn was. +

The shadow nods again.

+ And the name's Risa. No need for my last name - no offense, but you Japs always make it sound like a bloody venereal disease whenever ya try to pronounce it. +

How do you respond? It seems like you can ask her questions, now.

"Thirty strokes left, Murderface! Stop grumbling and keep swinging!" Bitch-sensei calls, clapping again. "One, two, one two!"

You don't even need to keep count anymore. You just keep swinging - whatever this Risa's done, it's pretty much made this training session a cakewalk for you. Sayaka could ask you to swing the axes a thousand times and you wouldn't even blink.

You focus instead on talking to Risa, her silhouette now sitting down on the mat beside Sayaka and scratching her ass through what looks like pajamas. Funny she should mention the end of the world - apparently, that's all going to be your fault.

+ Yeah? Well, at least I got saddled with someone just as interesting this time, then. + She nods towards Sayaka. + This bitch always this uptight, or did she have to work on it? Seems like she's got a stick up her chute the size of a really big stick. +

What? Oh, that's...that's how she really is. Nothing can be done about that. At your one hundred and seventieth swing, you step out of stance and look down at the chainaxe in your hands. You're barely even breathing hard.

What's the top score, anyway? You ask, turning back to the shadow. And how did she end up with the chainaxes?

+ One million, + Risa replies promptly. + Kharn's got it up to around 500K. And no, that origin story's something I'll share only after a few more scenes together. Can't just give away the game early, you know! +

You'll give her that, but...one million? As in, one million kills? You have to kill one million people to get the high score?

+ Oh, don't be daft, the score ain't about genocide or collectin' skulls, that was all Kharn. + Risa shakes her head. + No, it's all about points, y'see. Everythin' we kill has a point value attached to it. Humans, bog-standard ones, get ya one point. Sparklies, dependin' on rank, can getcha anywhere from a hundred to ten thousand, easy. Same goes for Witches, too. Dogs get ya negative points, an' so do cats and cute things. +

Huh. That's...that sounds more reasonable, yeah. Sounds more manageable.

+ And seein' as Kharn didn't actually bite it, an I'm still whole...I think it's in the rules if ya picked up where she left off. +

And that makes it easier. But what happens when you get the top score?

+ We-ell, you get it? An' my undyin' love? + Risa's silhouette scratches her head. + Not sure what you want from me, here. Oh, also, I think you get a certificate, an' a vanguard of Bloodthirsters called the Cruor Praetoria? Nice lot, by the way, just a bit too intense for me liking. +

It's here, then that Sayaka calls your attention again.

+ Hey, wanna do something fun? + You notice that Risa's silhouette is standing up again, and bouncing on the balls of her feet. + Let's give this blue-haired bint a scare, yeah? Whaddaya say? +

How do you respond?

I'd even rate her as a liability with the degree of influence she can push out. At least Kirika has an angle in the game against Oriko. Dogmaticists like her can be easily manipulated when you have the thing they value at the tip of your fingers.

Also, this Rika chick is obviously a shit character. She's good for nothing and got connections to nobody, as well as no drive to change that.

While I admit that Risa is definitely a bad influence (Just look at Kharn. Suddenly, all her quirks make a hell of a lot more sense), she's also ridiculously powerful. Dunno how this will translate to MGNQ, but I assume the golden chainaxes are going to have some pretty damn hardcore powerlevels if Risa let's loose.

But we can only let that happen when excessive collateral damage is a non-issue.

Like the smash and grab mission, for example. That one is perfect for a field test of the chainaxes.

Gotta balance these golden weapon relationships.

>> ☐ Anonymous 01/02/14(Thu)13:37 No.29234087

>>29233981
That's beside the point. Jokes that scare Sayaka, as MGNQ-Risa specifically said she wanted to do, only erode Sayaka's trust in us, even if we say that it was a joke, because it wasn't a joke to Sayaka when Murderface actually did it the last time, and as far as Sayaka knows, Chiaki could be erased in the next 5 seconds and suddenly start going Murderface on everyone.
Not only that, but we're waving around a Golden Weapon, that she saw drove Kirika insane and that we nearly killed her with the Desert Eagle before the Procedure.

So the two Risa's being the same has absolutely nothing to do with whether pulling a joke on Sayaka to scare her is a good idea or not. Especially after the two talks that Sayaka has given Chiaki about her fears of Chiaki becoming Murderface again.

Yeah no, that murderhobo isn't bros with anyone but herself and she'll gladly get Chiaki killed over something that will add to her amusement. Not like she can die, the slaughter will just continue when the next person picks her up. Kharn just lasted so long because she's basically invincible one way or the other.

I'd rather rely on Kirika. At least that one is still relatively grounded in morality and can be reasoned with, especially when we make clear that Chiaki wants to save Oriko from the horrfic fate that awaits her.

Yeah, but that insanity should be gone by now. From the sound of her own description of the events Yuu went totally kill-crazy at the end of her Golden Weapon career too and died as a result of that, just like Kirika. That seems to be a modus operandi for Golden Weapons because they want to obtain spirits inside them. This is probably the reason for the sword being so calm now, Kirika's mental clogging flushed itself and she's back to the more-or-less levelheaded dick that Sayaka described.

So

Actual befriending of Kirika, while being the hardest thing imaginable in this quest, would have been the best course of action.

Since we're dealing with a pretty op, omniscient ~~Is that the word?~~ angry teenager, we're destined to meet in a gritty, losing battle.
The kind of battle that's impossible to win without watching your friends and family die first.

And Kirika might be the only person in the world who could convince Oriko that she should stop.

I think right now it's better for us to build rapport with our weapon than our equerry. This is our chance to make a good first impression with the psycho girl living inside our axes, upon whom we depend to wield them despite our noodly arms. I doubt we'd be able to do any lasting harm on Sayaka, but if we do manage to mangle her up pretty bad on the first day, then I guess we pass Eversor training. We'll make it up to her later.

And don't count on being able to cut loose on the smash-and-grab. You just KNOW that we're going to get there and find out that it was actually an off-shore kitten orphanage the whole time.

From what I remember of the fight, Kharn wouldn't have won at all if not for Malal dispelling everything that Ahriman was throwing around, and there wasn't anything special that the chainaxes or Kharn did except use brute force.

I think the more feasible plan is to make death not inevitable, but preferable. Basically we need to figure out what she's willing to die for, theaten that, force her to fight us at a time of our choosing, then leave her an out where she can save that, but at the cost of her own life. MAGICAL GIRL

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/06/14(Mon)06:41 No.29317541

You look towards Risa's bouncing silhouette, before shrugging. Sure, why not? A little bit of fun, especially on the blueberry bitch's expense, is alright every now and then. What's she got in mind?

+ Well, seems to me that the both of ya has got some unresolved tension going on, yeah? +

Bit of an understatement there, but you agree.

+ Right! So, all we need is to resolve that, an' then maybe the stick in 'er arse would shimmy itself loose or something. + It's here that Risa's predatory grin seems to grow wider.

+ Now, let's see...how'd that cute-looking girl in pink say this corruption thing goes? Oh, I remember now! 'Ere we go-- +

Wait. Corruption thing? Wait, no, that sounds--

"Murderface? Murderface, hey! EARTH TO MURDERFACE!" Sayaka yells sharply, her voice echoing in the large, empty hall. "You're getting distracted! Plus two hundred swings, using only one hand this time! Come on! One, two! Don't slack off! THREE, FOUR!"

It's here that the world turns red - and you close your eyes as Gorechild roars in your hands.

Shit.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/06/14(Mon)06:42 No.29317549

>>29317541

The moment you open them again is the moment you see a very angry Sayaka mere inches in front of you - the wooden blade in her hands held against the screeching teeth of Gorechild in a rigid cruciform. The chainaxe eating through the reinforced, cured wood disturbingly quickly, disturbingly easily.

What. WHAT THE FUCK. WHAT THE FUCK IS GOING ON.

"This is a joke to you, Murderface? This is funny to you?" The blue-haired Eversor snarls, pure seething hate dripping from every word that you could almost taste it. "If you want to fucking go then just say so, but if you ever attack me like that, Warmaster or no, I'll fucking kill your shit--"

"...Are you scared?" You hear yourself saying, a cackle in your voice that wouldn't have been out of place coming from Kharn. "Loser does whatever the winner says. Or are you already shakin' in your boots?" You cackle again, right into her face. "What's with the loser-like attitude?"

It's here that you could almost see something in Sayaka snap - her eyes glazing over, pupils shrinking into mere dots, the grimace of effort and rage smoothing over into an expressionless mask.

Something happens, then - too quick for you to see, or even to counter - and you feel yourself suddenly crumpling to the ground, trying to catch a breath that had seemingly been smashed right out from your lungs. The chainaxe thudding to the ground beside you in a useless clatter as you try to cough up the searing fire burning your throat.

You look up, tears of pain clouding your vision, and you see Sayaka walking towards you - a long blur of bright red light in her hands.

"Get up, Murderface." You hear her snarl. "I've waited a long time for this. Let's get this shit done."

Yay, I caught the thread, time to make one post before I crash.

The photo of Chaiki kissing Midori is out there on the internet for everyone to see. Including Iori. And there's a very real chance that Iori might recognize Midori, correctly, as the Magical Girl who tried to get her kidnapped and raped. And that would be very bad for Chiaki. And we should do something about that.

In the meantime, have a shitty photoshop I first had the idea for several months ago.

So wait.

There are two axes.

That means two personalities, that can combine into one.

Risa is in this one...but she's got a notable lack of talking to herself.

Which means that the voices in her head are somewhere else.

Monologue is in the other axe. And now we know where Kharn's lewdness came from. Fully expecting the other axe to ask us to join its harem.

I think that's just a property of the katana. To be honest I think the KILLMAIMBURN HATEMURDERFUCK axes were the safer decision for us to use against Sayaka.
Just imagine if we were sword training and Kirika decided to show up, batfuck crazy, mad as hell, and looking to fuck everything up for us. Risa's a right cunt but at least she's just like that and not actively trying to get us and everyone we know and love killed.

You'll notice that, even when we went into berserker mode, we were neither going to kill, maim, or burn Sayaka? We instead made a poorly-considered wager to try to intimidate her into surrendering, and now she's calling our bluff. She's already angry, that damage has already been done, and trying to back out of it now is just going to piss her off further. Besides, despite appearances, this is still sparring. She doesn't need to win, just to "not die", and I feel confident that Sayaka in "hero" mode should be more than capable of whupping noodly little Chiaki when she's using a less than optimal golden weapon of a design she's totally unfamiliar with using.

As long as we can both stay away from the Soul Gems, this should be fine.

You get back on your feet, slowly, painfully, still coughing, using Gorechild to prop yourself up.

Your jokes suck, you pulse at the wolf-eared shadow beside you - and she flinches as if struck. Even with the bleached jawbone grin frozen on her face, you could tell that she wasn't expecting that.

+ Oi! That's a bit harsh, you know! I was just trying to lighten up the mood and everything! +

Really? You finally manage to stop coughing long enough to concentrate on the sight before you - Miki Sayaka, Eversor Rank Leader of the Ninth and your own personal Equerry, looking fully prepared for murder with a crimson katana in her hands as long as she's tall. The blade sparking every so often with killing lightning.

The mood's definitely lightened up now, then. It's totally light. Not heavy at all.

+ Well, er, let me...let me help out, then! I can still do the corruption thing, and-- wait, no I can't, the pink lass said something about not doing it too much, or you'll be resistant to it... +

No. No more corruption. For fuck's sake, she's just pissed off someone who'd been mere inches from making you eat two feet of tempered steel for as long as you can remember.

+ Yeah, yeah. Well, I can at least do this, though! + A surge of adrenalin suddenly floods your entire body, making you tingle from your toes to your fingertips. The pain in your chest disappearing, your thudding heartbeat receding to a silent murmur in your ears. + 'Sides, all ya gots ta do is krump her harder than she can krump you, right? Without krumping her too badly? And everything'll be alright again? +

That's...well, yeah, but--

+ That's it, then! + The wolf-eared shadow grins again, standing up and bouncing around once more. + Glad I thought about it! +

You shake your head here, before turning back to Sayaka and nodding. Fine. If she wants to, then You're not going to walk away from this one, and--

CRASH.

You didn't even see her move - one moment she was there, ten feet away from you. The next moment had her all up in your face, with you barely able to bring up the axe in a double-handed block, to receive the crimson blade edge on Gorechild's haft. The impact - a resounding, teeth-jarring, blinding clash of two killing weapons being smashed into each other - jars your grip hard enough that you feel both your hands slowly grow painfully numb, hearing something crack loudly in both your shoulders, and then your wrists.

+ No, no, push back! Don't let her clinch up! Get back at her, she's gonna-- +

CRACK.

You stumble back as the blue-haired Eversor cannons her forehead right into your nose, breaking it and the glasses perched haphazardly on it. The familiar taste of your own blood filling your mouth as you involuntarily try and breath in from your abused nostrils. Even here - as you try desperately to regain your footing on the training mat - Sayaka continues to press forward, coming at you swinging, Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's charged length turning into deadly crimson blurs in her hands.

You block the first swing, dodge the other, and then smash the third one away before it could take your head off of your shoulders. The fourth ends with another clinch, bringing the two of you close again, gritting your teeth at each other.

"Every single day watching you fuck around you own the place." Sayaka growls through clenched teeth, breathing out her hate at you. "Every single moment seeing you tail Mami around like a retarded puppy. And you get to be voted Warmaster, all on top of that." She tries to headbutt you again - but you're prepared, this time, and match her movement with yours. The result is a painful crack as your foreheads meet, but that only serves to anger her further.

We've got more meaty bits than Kharn and not enough raw strength and for that matter size.

If I were to consider Chiaki's fighting style, I'd wager on her using it like a halberd, and using the fact that the blade cuts without needing too much pressure in to work at it. Dancing around the pole itself, using her body as leverage to force the opponent into running a limb or two into the meatgrinder or shoving it against fleshy bits.

We're very much in this regard NOT KHARN and trying to imitate her, the same as in bed, will only be met in disappointment in not being able to pull off the same things as her.

Chiaki was the one who say yes to Risa playing a joke, she was in control, she is at fault.

I know this is meta information from a writeup and all, but remember the fight Sayaka almost got into in the lunchroom at the 8th? This is the exact same situation, except we picked up that gauntlet. Chiaki as multi-limbed goddess of death?

>Kālī is the Hindu goddess associated with empowerment, shakti. The name Kali comes from kāla, which means black, time, death, lord of death, Shiva. Since Shiva is called Kāla—the eternal time—Kālī, his consort, also means "Time" or "Death" (as in time has come). Hence, Kāli is the Goddess of Time and Change.

We need to take out the other axe. Before anyone says anything about not knowing how to duel wield, golden weapons don't work that way. I'm actually starting to get annoyed at people who haven't realized this yet. We channel the skill of the previous user.

Vs Sayaka, who is by far more skilled than us at melee fights, I don't think it matters if we were using two golden weapons or one. Without channeling the skill of the current spirit inside, the golden weapons might as well be a rock in Chiakis hands. A +5 master crafted rock, but still a rock.

Not entirely. I get the impression that it's more like a fusion.

I think the bracelets finger autocannons are a reflection of Chiak, not Yuu. Someone else wielding the bracelets would find the bracelets responding differently to them?

Yes. Apparently, the gauntles Chiaki had looked different from Killgore's version.

Clearly, what MGNQ needs is a Commissar Fuklaw equivalent.

Just some guy who accidentally stumbled into a Witch barrier then murdered the hell out of the Witch. He was promptly adopted by the Officio the stunned witnesses belonged to, and has been there for years.

Yes, Kilgore's version of the Gauntlets were more gaudy/bling than Chiaki's as a pair of tasteful bangles.

The autocannon fingers as well, or maybe Kilgore either didn't know or was too stunned to use them when Chiaki nearly went FoFA.

I'm not going to give Killgore credit. He was corrupted by a Golden Weapon for his "skill."

As for who is inside the DEagle... too much to speculate on, there might not even be anyone inside really. Yuu could just as well have been describing Chiaki as she is now technically.

She's been saving up a lot, hasn't she? You're not that stupid, you tell her, as she circles you like a jungle cat just waiting to pounce. All the glares, the verbal barbs, the barely-kept rage that you'd always gotten from her - you'd be a fucking idiot to say that you didn't exactly see this coming.

That said...well, she's angrier at yourself than you are. That's actually pretty impressive.

"NO! SHUT UP!" Sayaka roars at you. "No more talking. NO MORE TALKING, MURDERFACE! YOU CAN'T TALK YOUR WAY OUT OF THIS ONE!" She flings a free hand at your direction - and you barely manage to duck out of the way as three pinpoints of light dart past your face, each one solidifying into the Eversor's trademark blades as they thunk into the wall behind you. The turbulence of their flight enough to knock the Warmaster cap off of your head.

"TWO YEARS, MURDERFACE. TWO WHOLE FUCKING YEARS I'VE WAITED FOR THIS."

+ Blimey, you're gonna get bloody knackered. + Risa squeaks as she appears beside you, now. + Are you really pals with her and everything? Because from how she's sounding right now, it's like you fucked her boyfriend or something. +

Girlfriend, you pulse back. And no, you didn't. Kyoko's a friend, just one you don't really deserve.

+ Ah. Well, you're still fucked, I think. That's still a lot of issues there, more than I thought. + It's here that Risa seems to sound pensive. + Right. I guess I can do that thing I did earlier, but just enough that you're still in control the entire time, or...or, gah, this feels really off somehow...+

What? What is it? For fuck's sake, pulse faster or something, you snap as you watch Sayaka stalk forward again, cape billowing out behind her.

+ Yeah, yeah. I can up your defense just enough that you'd last here, maybe get into a stalemate or at least lose without getting hurt too much. The question here is, which one do you want? +

How do you respond?

Chiaki didn't need Yuu to take direct control to operate them. That's why it felt like she was in more control when she used them.

We can handle losing. We're probably pretty used to it by now. But we're not going to just roll over, either. Shit would be disrespectful.

But I'm pretty sure finally getting her chance to stand up and try and make Murderface answer for what she did with her own two hands, and having it turned on her via arbitrary magical weapon intervention would send Sayaka off the deep end.

Am I the only one not seeing the logic of 'we have to try to win or we're disrespecting her'/'this is training we have to do our best' arguments? This is all coming from the golden weapon, Chiaki herself will be trying no less and learning no less (maybe even more for both) by getting as little help as possible from Risa. There's no reason for Sayaka to appreciate Chiaki dipping further into the golden cool-aid - if anything, the restraint needed NOT to might impress her more.

Anything with golden weapons is a drop in the bucket. Sayaka said it herself, she has been waiting 2 years for this. We can't build a working relationship on 2 years worth of corrupted toxic ground.

As for training for melee fighting, that can't be done with a golden weapon. Because by default we are cheating the effort required to learn a weapon when we pick up a golden one. So even if we got good with the chain axes, we would just be shit again when Risa stops giving us her boost. If we seriously wnated Chiaki to get some serious time in with Sayaka, it needs to not have any golden interruptions.

The binary votes have always seen the biggest vote totals. I don't know whether that's because more people vote if they don't have to write anything, or if it's because those are easier to samefag, or some combination of both. Look back to the Axe vs. Katana vote from two threads ago.

I think the voting totals naturally increase as the thread goes longer, anyway, as more Americans wake up to enjoy the most exciting time of the day.

You want to win, you murmur, wiping away blood from your nose with the back of your free hand. You don't want to just survive here - you want to win.

Because as much as you want Sayaka to work out all her issues with you right here, right now - you know it'll just be another insult to her if you give her anything less than everything you can give.

+ Really? Heh, that's...actually, that's pretty fucking great. + Risa grins. + You're definitely just as exciting as Kharn, kyahahaha! +

It's here that your vision goes red, again, an arterial shade of crimson that covers everything - but unlike before, there's no sudden darkness, no black void to sink into. Just the red staining your sight - and a rage so powerful it left its taste on your tongue. More than your own blood ever did.

+ Alright! Now, with feeling, you gits! With emotion! With zazz! +

"SAYAKA!"

You hear yourself roar the Eversor's name just as you launched yourself at her - and you had one brief moment to savor the look of utter surprise on her face just as you swung not just one chainaxe into her, but TWO - Gorefather torn from your inventory, the motorized teeth in its oversized smile already whirring, already roaring with unchecked fury.

And for the first time in this engagement, Sayaka was the one to block. Both chainaxes roaring as they smashed into Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's length, spitting sparks and ozone and hate as they bite into the blade's edge.

"What the--" Sayaka had started to spit, her brow furrowing - but you'd already broken off from the clinch, both chainaxes whirling in your grasp as you step back before charging in again a second later. Trying to catch her off guard, to knock her off balance.

No such luck. It's with almost insulting ease that she parries Gorefather, before ducking under Gorechild's swing coming from the other direction - and it's here that you see her finally smile as she jumps back a handful of feet, giving the both of you breathing space.

...Well. Seems Risa was telling the truth. You're still in control.

You're breathing really fucking hard, though. In contrast, Sayaka looks like she's only started warming up.

"Good. That's really good, Murderface." She nods at you. "Make me break a sweat, at least, if you can't make this a fucking challenge."

She swings her crimson sword once, before shoving it into the weird rifle-sheath - before crouching forward. One gloved hand grasping the sheath itself, the other poised in front of the handle.

...You've seen this before. Back then. Back...during Kirika...

Shit.

What do you do now?

You charge her. If you're reading her right, then she's going to do that thing that Kirika very nearly tore you in half with. And to give her an opportunity to set that kind of thing up...no. That'd be suicide. And you're not even sure what kind of bullshit that crazy rifle sheath adds to that kind of attack.

As you cross the distance between you, both chainaxes roaring in your fists as you make to smash them into Sayaka - it's here that you see the Eversor tense, hunkering down even lower. As if bracing herself for impact, but making no move to defend herself from the oncoming chainteeth just begging to bite into Eversor flesh.

And then - at the very last moment - even above the deafening rumble of the chainaxes' engines, you hear a single metallic click. The press of a rifle's trigger, one preceded by Sayaka's murderous grin.

The sheath's explosive blast rings out impossibly loud, impossibly bright - the flash of it burning into your retinas in a smear of color, followed by the whip-quick blur of something red, long, and possibly on fire. It's here that you suddenly realize that she'd been waiting for you to charge all along - and you've stepped right into her kill zone.

You barely manage to cross both chainaxes in front of you just before it hit.

The first thing you remember about it, of course, and what you'll tell everyone else in the future - is the heat. The searing heat, akin to taking a flamethrower full in the face, or at least something close to it.

The second thing, of course, is how much it fucking HURT.

The chainaxes blocked the brunt of it well enough - but you still felt like a fucking tank just smashed right into you, the force enough to simultaneously numb both your hands up to your elbows AND rip your weapons from your now-nerveless fingers. Enough to knock you back, off center, your guard all but done with.

"Sayaka, staying by your side as we are would be forbidden love, so I talked coobs into granting me another wish and turned into a guy, now we can make our relationship official, and eventually even get married...."

"Umm, Kyouko, I kinda had... exactly the same idea."

You don't exactly know how Gorechild and Gorefather ended up embedded on the training hall's ceiling, but you did see Sayaka discard what looked like the smoking ruin of her sword to the side before launching herself at you, both bloodied hands wrapping around your neck.

You remember being knocked into the ground, Sayaka on top of you - and it's here that you feel her drive a clenched fist right across your face. Once, twice, the third flooding your right eye with even more crimson (she'd split your eyebrow open). Screaming something about you not being better than her, and how you'll never be able to be worth anything.

Both your hands are still numb at this point, but you see them reaching up, one grabbing a handful of her cape and pulling her back away from you - the other balling into a fist of your own.

+ A lot of issues. + Risa shakes her head, now squatting beside you, watching this entire encounter unfold. + I'm not even mad about her hitting me hard enough to ding me, but bugger. That's a lot of bad blood. +

What do you do?

You grab more fistfuls of Sayaka's cape, hooking and wrapping the white mass of cloth around your arm. But instead of pulling her back and out of your face - you pull her down closer to you instead, bringing her in range of your own punch. One aimed right at her fucking mouth.

There's a satisfying crunch as you connect, one that briefly makes her pause in her raving tirade - and you buck her off of you, kicking her away with a stockinged foot. She gets back up on her feet before you could even think it, and you hear her growl your name again - but you already have your shield up this time.

The jolt of an Eversor smashing her fist into your shield makes another jolt of pain rocket up your already abused arm, but the pain-laden epithet that leaves Sayaka's now-bleeding lips made it feel like it was worth it.

Your sight reduced to just one eye - the other's already bled and swollen shut - you stagger forward, before ducking underneath a kick of all things. You go for the leg she's standing on, trying for a takedown, but all you get for your effort is a knee right to the chin. Very nearly knocking you out but not quite.

...Jesus Christ, you thought she was just a fucking sword bitch. Where's all this fancy karate shit coming from?

"First lesson Eversors learn is unarmed combat, dumbass," Sayaka sneers, before turning her head to spit blood on the training mat. "Come on, you little shit. That all you got? Come on if you think you're hard enough."

She looks like she's going to charge, and everything just hurts.

What Mirai said then is what gave me the "chaste crush" vibe, actually. She seemed to have an unspoken crush on Midori, which she expressed as emotional support and manga encouragement. Midori gave no indication of noticing in her Barrier Arc narration and even during the recent Q&A she said she thought Mirai was really cute, but just as friend.

Actually, this is making Midori sound like an erogame protagonist with Mirai ad the secret best friend route...

I'm not so sure.

Yuu's pretty hardcore about her fighting. She thought a lot of being able to fight Kharn, IIRC

Probably wouldn't have been the same KIND of provocation, but I wouldn't rule it out entirely.

+ I think you'd better just stay down, yeah? + Risa looks almost concerned here. + Look, okay, you've pretty much just stood up to everything she threw at you. I'm impressed, and that's really bloody 'ard to do. But cripes, you're gonna get yourself killed here-- +

You ignore the shadow's attempt to make you see common sense - before stepping forward yourself, both fists clenched. ...Sayaka promised you a beating, you remind the Eversor in front of you. She calls THIS a beating? The bitches you wasted back at the concert put up more of a fight.

"Still running your mouth off, huh? Still got to have the last word? Fine. I'll shut you up for good this time." A rustle of bloodstained cape, and you watch as Sayaka rushes you, one clenched fist clearly ready to face-fuck you into unconsciousness.

Gritting your teeth behind a smile you didn't exactly feel, you lunge forward at the same time, to meet her charge - throwing your own punch one heartbeat after she threw hers.

You're running out of ways on how to describe being hit by an Eversor, but there's probably no other way to describe the punch - that broke your cheekbone as you soak it with the side of your face - as REALLY FUCKING PAINFUL.

But as much as that hurt, it didn't stop your own punch - your clenched fist cracking solidly against the side of Sayaka's jaw, the impact enough to whip her entire head to the side - from making you feel like a million dollars. Moreso when you finally behold the Eversor's eyes rolling up into the the back of her head, before crumpling on the floor in a boneless heap.

You blink your one good eye, here, before glancing at your bloodied fist, and then at the supine Sayaka bleeding all over the training mat.

+ Either that, or she's just taking a nap before gutting yer shit, + The shadow pulses, just as she crouches beside Sayaka. + Nope. She's out like a goddamn light, boss. That's that. You won. +

That's...wow. yeah.

You'd like to say something cool, here. Like...'the outcome was already decided before it even began', or something.

Then again, you were too busy joining Sayaka on the training mat, your own consciousness leaving you.

Oh, well.

I think I answered this before, but the Ninth offers quite a long life expectancy, up to three years. The Eighth has a very short one, probably six months to a year, while the Thirteenth is ten years up to retirement age.

Warmaster turnover is pretty rare, but not unheard of. Either they die or they retire, which happens every five to six years.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/11/14(Sat)07:41 No.29431539

You are a Magical Girl, and you're in the worst dream ever.

Charles' bar - your own personal hideaway and watering hole - is on fire.

It's burning, right in front of you, its door that had welcomed you every night with a creaky resignation locked and chained down, bulging as the inferno raged behind it. Tongues of flame licking up the walls, unfurling from the windows, clawing at the uncaring sky with fingers of choking black smoke. The crackle of timber burning along with the roar of the flames curiously muted, but no less painful to hear.

You'd cry if you could. Even if this was just a dream - or a nightmare, really - you have no doubt that you'd be bawling right about now, curling up into a ball.

No tears now, though. Only silence, as you watched one of your own personal apocalypses unfold right in front of your eyes.

>>29431539

You don't remember much, after your training with Sayaka. One moment you were standing victorious over the unconscious Eversor, the fist you've broken her jaw with split open and bleeding at the knuckles - and the next, the training mat underfoot was suddenly flying up to meet you.

The moment after that, well...here you are, in the all-too-real, all-too-lucid dreaming state that you've had a few times already, all of which had you encountering a brown-haired girl with sleepy eyes and a tired voice.

She wasn't around to greet you when you opened your eyes, however. Just this vision of the world gone horribly wrong, and only in your very specific and very narrow direction.

There doesn't seem to be anything else around, though, except for a few of those...beaked shadow creatures you've seen hang around inside the bar, during Wendy Time. One of them is kneeling in front of the bar, seemingly weeping from the hooting sounds it's making. It's clutching something in its fists.

What do you do?

[]Try and ask the crying beaked thing who did this.
[]Try and force your way into the burning bar.
[]Wake up. Dream or no, this is as horrifying as it gets.

You look down at the beaked shadow kneeling in front of the burning bar, before reaching down and grabbing it by the shoulder. It flinches at your touch, but doesn't recoil back - it just continues on crying, tar-black tears trickling down its avian snout to drip onto the asphalt between its knees.

Who did this? You ask it as firmly as you could. Who could do something like this? And where's Wendy?

The gibbering beaked shadow creature looks up at you, before pointing one slender-fingered hand towards the fiery inferno. Its beak opens wide, as if to snap at you, and you make to shrink away - but you're stopped as a voice warbles out from its depths. Scratchy and static-warped, as if it's being played from a broken-down radio, but familiar.

"...You promised..."

It's here, then, that the beaked shadow thrusts something into your hands, something that it'd been gripping tightly in its gnarled fingers. It's notepaper, torn out from a notebook or a diary of some sort, folded and then crumpled. You glare at the half-bird, half-thing as you unfold the paper, smoothening out the crinkles as best you could, but it's already started crying again.

Shaking your head, you glance down at the crumpled notepaper. The writing on it - and there seems to be a bit - seems to be made by someone who's usually slow and methodical about things, but for some reason was hurried at the time.

>s Tomoe's are better, but I'm getting there. Been making them for her every morning we get to spend together, and she did that dumb puppy thing she does where she just stares until someone figures out what she's trying to say. Usually it's 'more pancakes'. I fed them to her today, cut them up and crap. It feels really stupid now, but I mean...it seems okay with her. I was really happy, just leaning there and feeding her.

>She seemed really happy, too. We just kinda sat together after that, and she said she didn't wanna go home. She asked me to join the Ninth, and everything. I'm thinking about it. Like, really thinking about it. I want to be with her all the time. I want to spend every day like this. I think she really might be made for me. Especially for me.

>I'm not gonna fuck this up. She told me she loved me today, and everything. Almost. Close as I think she'll ever come, but it's not something that always needs to be said. I think I'm gonna retire or something. At least from Santa Destroy.

>Christmas. This Christmas I'm gonna ask her to come with me. We can join the Seventh with Miss Marigold and do mercenary work. Neither of us'll be happy just sitting around, and we might still die, but that's alright. We can go wherever we want that way. I talked to Miss Marigold about it a little, but she already knew. I guess the blue roses in her garden turned lavender, or some weird flower crap. We're already making plans. I'm gonna talk to Eightball later, too. He's not gonna be happy, but he'll suck it up if I give him enough notice.

Give it a name. I guess that'd be...Wendy Cooldown-Tomoe? Not Wendy Cooldown-Face, that'd be fucking stupid.

"...You promised," the shadowy creature warbles beside you again.

Wendy. That...explains things. Probably found out about you and Midori after NECO, but then again, you had an inkling she'd know about it even without the damn cat snooping around.

You promised. Yeah, you did promise, but...

Well, but what? Are you going to try and talk your way out of this one, too? You broke another promise you made. One you sealed with a fucking kiss, even.

You promised you were going to do things right this time.

You shake your head, letting out a sigh, before looking back at the bar.

It's no longer burning. Rather, the fire had left it a smoldering ruin, a charred skeleton of what had been its corpse. Completely and utterly gutted, like all burning buildings do after you let them burn themselves out.

Strangely enough, it looks even more heartbreaking like this, rather than when it had only a few moments ago.

What do you do now?

This is true, however it does not detract or change the fact that it was Chiaki Matsuda that made the promise, then promptly broke it two days later.

Yup, that's forbidden love

Okay guys. We can still salvage this, seriously.

If you'll remember, Wendy both enjoys the fuck out of MMxMM, and is open to threesomes if she's loved by both other parties equally, or something. And she probably doesn't know that Midorin is Green Green. She probably doesn't know who she is at all, in fact.

All we have to do is get Midorin and Wendy to fall in love or something, and things'll sort themselves out naturally.

Either we get our Watermelon, or they run off together without us and we can get Pinky all to ourselves. Either way we ultimately win.

You turn towards the beaked shadow-thing again. No, you're not completely sure if it'll actually work, but still you ask it if it could possibly give Wendy a message from you. Whenever she shows up, or something.

The creature looks up at you, still squawking its heart out, but nods after a few moments, as if finally understanding what you were trying to say. You nod in return, before taking a moment of your own to collect your thoughts. This isn't something you do all that often - and whenever you try, it usually ends up completely fucked - so you'd like to get it right this time, at least.

You close your eyes for a moment, before opening them as you start speaking. The half-bird, half-shadow creature falling silent as it listens to your every word. Granted, you can't see its face, but you feel reassured that whatever you're saying to it will reach Wendy's ears sooner or later.

When you finish, the creature nods again, before shakily getting up to its feet and staggering away. Leaving you alone with the burned-out husk of Charles' bar.

...It wasn't much of an apology. You doubt it'd make up for everything, or even start to make the girl feel better. But you tried your best, and that's all anyone can ask of you.

You're still trying to make it right. You're not finished with her yet, or everything else. Not by a long shot.

You give the bird creature one last look, before turning back and walking towards the destroyed bar.

Yes, and nine years of 4channing has taught me that the overwhelming majority of people who name/trip for its own sake are faggots. It takes two kicks to break your way in, the wooden door seemingly fused shut with its frame. You freeze for a second as the entire thing creaks, but thankfully the entire place doesn't seem to be in the mood to crash down around you just yet.

The bar is...well, it's just as burnt inside as it is outside. It's a charred, sooty mess, but surprisingly without the twisted, blackened corpses you were expecting. The only thing in the place that's not been roasted to a crisp is the bartop, with one specific spot on the teak that's practically untouched by the flames. And there's something sitting on that spot - some sort of book, hardbound in black leather, the size of a wallet or a playing card.

You step into the bar, making a beeline for the book. Each footstep making the floorboards underneath you creak and groan and crack. You ignore this as you pick up the book from the ruined bar top, examining it.

...It's got KONG embossed in golden print on the cover, in neat block script. You blink at this, before opening it and leafing through its pages.

Huh. Empty, except for a handwritten note at the very first page.

> 'Think of a journal as fuckup insurance. Even regular jackoffs forget things, sometimes. Don't beat yourself up too much for it, just try to fix whatever it is.'

It's signed by two initials - W.C.

That's...hnh. Well, this'd definitely be handy, and you were thinking of getting one yourself, but you didn't quite expect this. Not after what happened.

...Or maybe she was planning to give it to you? Before...everything, anyway.

You have the sinking feeling that it's the latter, but you've no time to contemplate it, as the bar suddenly shakes, before crashing down on you in one crushing, crunching collapse.

Making everything go dark once more.

You open your eyes to a completely new scene for the second time - but in this instance, only one of your eyes are cooperating, the other swollen shut, throbbing in its socket with a dull ache. Joining the many others all over your body as you start to realize that you've woken up for real this time, no longer in a dream.

"Finally." You hear someone say beside you, their words preceded by what sounds like bones grinding together. "Thought you were going to take the rest of the fucking day off, Murderface."

You turn to look at the source of the voice. ...Yep, it's Sayaka, alright. You didn't know who you were expecting.

And...she's smoking? Yeah, that's definitely cigarette smoke you smell, and that's definitely a lit cigarette between her fingers.

You watch as she takes another pull from the stick, and it's here that you notice that her cape's missing. Giving you an unobstructed view of her back and shoulders - which look eerily similar to yours. In terms of scar tissue here and there, anyway.

You're about to ask where it went, before realizing that it's actually draped over you, like some sort of blanket.

"Well? Are you going to take a longer nap or what?" Sayaka glances over you, her left cheek bruised, swelling up something fierce. "Because from how you were snoring, it sounded like you needed it."

How do you respond?

Seems unlikely. If we don't end the world, Pinky will, or at least that's what I've gathered.

So, in a sense they're absolutely right. We ARE going to end the world. Only somehow it'll be the lesser of two evils.

Yeah, but that takes magic and means that her Soul Gem darkens. And while she's got an extremely high-speed and high-efficiency self-heal, I don't know if that same high-efficiency extends to when she's healing others.

Also, as some others pointed out, right now when we are physically not at our best could be a good time to speak with Kirika. If she does end up taking control for a few seconds, it'll be of a broken, noodly-armed Chiaki, and not one that's physically at 100%.

You narrow your eyes at Sayaka. ...You were hoping to wake up first, to be in a better position to boast about knocking the fuck out of her - but it's not like you didn't expect her super regenerator bullshit to come up and make a mess out of everything.

So you do the next best thing, in your opinion. You grab fistfuls of your cape-blanket and drag it up to your chin, before grumbling that you're now ruined for marriage - just as she takes another pull from her cigarette.

The sudden rash of coughing and hacking and wheezing that came directly afterwards never sounded so righteous, nor so vindictive. The sudden flat-handed slap over your forehead - the heel of her gloved hand pressing against the bridge of your broken nose - feels less than righteous, and it's with an irritated grunt that you try to pull your face away from it. Sayaka seems to hold on, however, with a grip of iron that you're not exactly eager to test.

"Stay still, idiot." That grinding noise again. "I was waiting for you to wake up so I could heal your ugly face. I did all what I could with the other big ones, but the small stuff you'll have to let your own body heal on its own." She grunts.

...Ah. Well. That's...nice of her, actually. For someone who'd been doing their level best to kill you earlier, anyway.

Couldn't she have at least fixed your nose while you were sleeping? You can feel it getting better, sure, but it's still throbbing painfully, like your swollen eye.

"Probably could've." Sayaka murmurs after a moment. "But it's more painful this way."

...Bitch.

"Fuckface."

A moment of what passes for comfortable - or at least, relaxed - silence between the both of you, and it's here that she pulls her hand away. Your eye not as swollen anymore, able to actually open and close this time. Your nose isn't feeling like it's filled with broken glass anymore, too.

[1/2]

"Thank you, Sayaka," the Eversor suddenly says, in a rough and disturbingly accurate mockery of your own voice. "Thank you for healing my stupid, ugly face, and kicking my stupid, ugly ass. Oh, and sorry for suddenly going batshit insane and attacking you with a fucking chainaxe in the middle of training."

...Well. You were going to say all those things yourself - except for the part about her kicking your ass - but since she already did, you're probably not going to bother, now.

Any chance of her letting you bum a smoke off her, though? Seeing as you won and all.

"Figured you wouldn't. And yeah, I figured that too." She takes what looks like a pack of cigarettes from her lap - one that you recognize as your own - and taps out a stick from it on her wrist. "And technically, I won. You just got lucky." Sayaka reaches out to place the cigarette between your lips, before lighting it with a zippo - which, again, is your own. You take a few grateful puffs nonetheless, closing your eyes and letting the soothing smoke calm your frayed nerves. "Fucking lucky punch, that was all that was. I'd have taken your head off if it weren't for that."

Apologize, because it's been implied that our amnesia has done exactly what we did before, and it was the equivalent of prank-calling a bomb threat to the Boston Marathon.

Naw. This is useful in two ways. First is that we learn about the GW in a controlled setting. If we had tried this is Kirika in the field thinking she was safe because she didn't rage at us, everyone would be dead. Second is that Sayaka is a good instructor. If we don't devolve the training into a bitchfest, we could get really good with weapons that we can actually train with, like Yuu.

If Sayaka is up to it, we need to do this again. But maybe at a bit lower intensity next time, when Yuu is back in action.

You hold off from biting back at Sayaka's somewhat halfhearted barb, opting to instead enjoy your cigarette in silence, and letting her enjoy hers in peace. ...If you're honest, you're a bit glad this happened, and in this way. Sure, the both of you very nearly killed each other, and you're pretty sure things will start hurt much more the morning after, but it's nice to finally to be able to clear the air between you and the blue-haired Eversor. Winning - and being able to lord it over her - was just a bonus.

A big, juicy, fat bonus.

You're savvy enough to know that it's not exactly the time for that, though, and after a few more puffs, you work up enough gumption to apologize for real. About attacking Sayaka during training. Yeah, the repetitive exercises were getting boring, but you knew what they were for. You didn't just attack her because you were bored, or anything like that. It was--

"--the ghost inside the Golden Weapon? That's what you were going to say, right?" Sayaka interrupts you again, and you nod here, expecting her to snort in disbelief and call you names again. What you get instead is silence, a contemplative one, before a grunt that sounded much like begrudging acceptance.

"...I'll buy it. I still think it's bullshit, but...I'll believe it." You hear her pull a deep breath in, before tapping out another cigarette from your pack. ...Is she chain-smoking? "I figured it wasn't you, you know. When you charged me. It felt like you were playing around, doing crazy shit for laughs. Reminded me of Kharn, in fact. Crazy bitch."

Then why the hell did she get that mad, then? You find yourself asking incredulously. What was that breakthrough about? Beating you like a drum? Going for the decapitation no less than four times?

"...Let's just say I got carried away, alright? I needed to let out some steam, too. I figured, hey, if you're going berserk with your golden shit, then that means I could cut loose a bit, get some stuff that's making my job hard to do out of my system." She shrugs her bared shoulders, here. "Also, if you were indeed going absolutely batshit insane, at least you'll be with someone who can take you out if it comes to that."

Right. Like how she took you out by getting knocked out first, earlier.

"I did say I got carried away. That's not going to happen again, now that I know what kind of boost you actually get." Sayaka smiles. "I got your number, Murderface."

You shake your head at this, before glancing up towards the ceiling, where the golden chainaxes remain embedded. The harsh fluorescent lighting overhead making them glow.

...Huh. Speaking of weapons, what about her sword? Is it fucked?

"You try blocking two demonic chainaxes with a sword, see how it turns out." Sayaka snaps at you, and it's here that you realize that she'd been talking all this time with a broken jaw. That was where the grinding noise was coming from. "Yeah, it's pretty fucked. I can get it fixed in time for our op, though, no problem." It's here that she looks - and sounds - a bit hesitant. "...Yeah, no problem at all."

We need Kyouko to know that Oriko is the Prophet so that she won't blindly accept an invitation for tea from her and get herself captured or killed. We don't know when the Prophet's group is going to attack again, and next time she's likely to go after Kyouko.
So we need Sayaka to come up with how we're going to break this news to Kyouko.

Just the ending. The book itself was kind of neat, though like everything Palahniuk writes, fans tend to treat it as if it's profound, when it's really not.
Basically, if you don't go into it expecting it to be amazing, it's a fun read. Which is true for pretty much all of his stuff. That said, he's a fan of gross-out humor, so unless you are okay with stories about people getting their jaws shot off with shotguns or their intestines sucked out of their anus', you might want to stay away.

Right. Well. About Kyoko and Oriko, then.

"Yeah, I know." Sayaka turns away from you, exhaling smoke in the other direction. "I know they're pretty close, and Kyoko has a thing for her, even though she'll swear up and down that she doesn't."

Another pull, and the Eversor taps out her THIRD cigarette from your pack. "That said, they haven't talked to each other much after...you know." She turns, gesturing at you. "Kyoko was worried sick about her, and kept trying to call her up every now and then. Never picked up once."

Sayaka reaches forward and replaces your now-spent cigarette with a freshly-lit one. "It's going to be rough on her, so I'll just get it over with as quickly as I can. Delicately, of course, but no need to prolong it more than necessary."

...Would she need help there, then? Because you can probably help out if you're needed--

More coughing, more hacking. And this time, you get a spirited nudge of a sock-clad foot in your still-tender ribs. "Give me a fucking break, Murderface. No, it's fine. Let me handle it. I know how to get Kyoko out of a funk."

You blink at this, before nodding. Well, how, then? You'd like to know it too, just in case.

No coughing, this time. Just a glare, one with red-tinged cheeks. "...You're the last person I'd tell it to, and if I had to at gunpoint I'd fucking kill myself first."

...Ah. Well. That's...couple stuff, yeah. Nevermind.

"Yeah, because I don't ask you how you sexually harrass Midori, right?" Sayaka shakes her head. "Don't ask about what other people do behind closed doors, you fucking idiot."

What? But you don't sexually harrass Midori. And no, you just wanted to look out for Kyoko, that's all.

"Sure, Murderface. Whatever." Ah, that's the old Sayaka you know and love. The bitch is coming back.

Anyway. So...this thing. With the training and the sparring. Is this just a one-time thing, or can it be something that happens regularly?

Anyway. So...this thing. With the training and the sparring. Is this just a one-time thing, or can it be something that happens regularly?

"Christ, you already forgot?" Sayaka's jaw makes that cracking sound again. "Yeah, this is probably going to be a regular thing. Once, maybe two times a week if my schedule's okay with it." It's here that she looks you up and down.

"...Bring Kirika's katana next time. I want to see if I can take you down with you using that."

...Who's training who, here?

"It's a two-way street, Murderface! You learn how to be a proper Magical Girl as an Eversor, I learn how to retire a crazy, bloodthirsty Warmaster with golden fever." She grins at you for a full second before wincing. "Ugh. Fucking jaw."

What? She's been talking all this while with a broken jaw?

Why? Why not heal it first and be done with it?

"...Because I like how it hurts?" Sayaka blinks, as if puzzled to be confronted by such an OBVIOUS question. "It'll only take me a few moments to set back and shit. Just let me enjoy this."

Right. Fine.

More silence here, enough that you actually feel comfortable enough to sleep.

Before you could, though--

"...Are you going to kill Oriko?" The Eversor asks. "If those golden things are as bad as you make them out to be...it means you need to kill her, right?"

How do you respond?

>How do you respond?
If it comes to it, yeah.

It's pretty damn bad, but the Golden Weapons are pretty much uncharted territory. Who knows, maybe Oriko will be the exception to the pretty consistent streak of death and murder surrounding them?

Whatever happens, you'll try and give her that chance. For Kyoko.

PROSE MAGICA

[Pastebin of all Prose Magica chapters here: http://pastebin.com/u/Grizzlyniisan This is gonna be a long one.]

Sleepy Sue's engine rumbled as the armoured car meandered down the cold streets of Toronto. Within, Odette sat on the floor, staring blankly at her laptop's screen. For the first time in months, her head seemed clear. She thought of the case, of Lotte and a new start. Her mind wandered to the image of the blonde Callidus' face and the thought of her touch, making Odette smile and blush like only a teenage girl in love could. For years she'd forced herself to ignore Lotte's advances, whether out of anger or fear. Something had changed inside of her. She was no longer Odette Brighton, Warmaster of the Seventeenth. For the first time in far too long, she was happy enough to just be Odette, the girl who eats too many sweets, writes dorky poetry in her spare time and works for a fat cat with an enormous moustache.

Shaking herself out of her content stupor, Odette got back to looking over the history of Fennel Vance. It occurred to her that she ought to have done a more in-depth look much earlier, but her earlier melancholy hadn't exactly proven to be the best state of mind in which to work. Contracted for just about four years, Fennel's file seemed to have more redacted missions and details than anything else. It was to be expected of someone in her line of work; the Seventeenth may have been a bit more picky about its clients than others, but there were still a good many that ought best be left out of official reports. One thing in particular about the blacked-out information caught Odettes eye, however. It appeared that - relative to her current state - Fennel was entirely average during her first year. She was described with words like 'friendly' and 'personable', if a bit on the quiet side. Her second year consisted of but a single, censored assignment, after which she seemed to take on her current, morbidly lighthearted demeanour.

Odette stared at the black lines for some time, mulling over what could possibly have happened and whether or not it was important enough to call in for further information. It looked to be about the size of four short paragraphs, further adding to the mystery. A single assignment with four paragraphs worth of information that took an entire year. The one-eyed girl groaned as she conceded, reaching into the pocket of her jeans to find her cell.

"Mornin', sunshine!" Holly answered after only a single ring, accompanied by the non-stop sound of typing.

Odette rolled her eyes and grinned, laughing at how casual the Vanus could be after not speaking for over a week.

"Good morning to you too, Holly," the silver-haired girl replied. "Sorry I didn't call you earlier. I really meant to, but-"

"Busy night?"

"In a manner of speaking," Odette laughed, humming a bit to herself. "Miss me?"

Holly paused for a moment, as if debating whether or not to make a joke. "Aaaah hell, you know I did, shrimp! Even I can't joke about it when you drop of the face of the Earth all of the sudden."

"And yet, you still have the nerve to call me 'shrimp'."

"Your vertical deficiencies are fair game. So what's up?"

Odette huffed loudly before turning her attention back to work. "Take a look at Vance's file. There's a whole year censored and judging by everything else, it looks like something big happened then. Mind unlocking that for me?"

"Uh, yeah, gimme a sec," the Vanus replied, followed by a momentary silence. "Mhrm. Looks like that's ultraviolet level information for whatever reason."

"Seriously?"

"Ayup, so I'm gonna have to run it by Terry or Tubs. Gimme a few."

"Take as long as you need," the one-eyed girl replied.

Okay, let me get my question in now:
The 7th Officio takes in Magical Girls who want to leave their own Officios; do the other Incubators grudgingly allow this, or is it a matter of Magical Girls simply running away to the 7th and asking for sanctuary and the 7th is strong enough to discourage the slighted Incubators from retaliating?

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth 16 archivalfag 01/11/14(Sat)14:06 No.29436309

As soon as she had said it, Odette realized how little the bureaucracy bothered her. A week earlier and she would have been sent into a slump over not having her old clearance. The Eversor drummed her fingers on the keys lightly as her mind began to wander yet again. Almost unconsciously, she opened a side window of a fresh document and began jotting words down. Thoughts of love and the future that had suddenly appeared in front of her.

"Hey! Hey!" Holly called out. Glancing at the clock, Odette realized that she had managed to zone into her poetry for five whole minutes. "Alright, so bad news. Terry's not answering her phone for whatever reason and Foob's having tea with the Seventh. You know how he hates being disturbed during their tea parties."

"So..?" Odette queried, scrambling to jam the phone between her cheek and shoulder. "Guess I'll take a rain-check on this one?"

"Well," the Vanus started, "I could just go ahead and unlock it... I doubt Foob would mind. I mean, with you being sane again and Kelzang coming to visit, I could tell him half the Officio died and he'd probably be okay with it. As long as it's for work, it should be fine."

"And Therese?"

"Terry doesn't check these things and besides, she's your biggest fan. What's the worst that could happen?"

"I don't know, Holly," the former Warmaster muttered. "I can wait, it's cool. Besides, don't you have to follow the three laws or something?"

"Don't be a smart ass, tiny," Holly scolded. "If anything happens, I'll take responsibility for this one."

"If you say so..."

"One, two, aaaaaand," a few more firm key presses rang out through the phone, "refresh."

Odette did as she was told and hit a key, refreshing the page. Suddenly, the wall of black lines filled out, replaced with text littered with the numbers and acronyms she had come to except from incident reports. Nothing about it seemed terribly out of the ordinary - it seemed to be an entirely standard training mission - until her eye ran across two words that Odette had hoped to never see again:

Varrigan City.

As it turned out, Fennel had been volunteered for a particular training mission. One that entailed being dropped into the city without outside contact and eking out a living for two weeks until extraction. A ninety percent mortality rate. How the seemingly mild-mannered Fennel Vance managed to take part was unthinkable; the fact that only a single member of her four-girl squad arrived for extraction spoke well enough for their success. It wasn't until an entire year later that Fennel - along with an unidentified individual - arrived for an entirely different training squad's extraction. In the face of such an unprecedented situation, the Eighth and Seventeenth agreed to take her home.

"Christ, kid," Odette muttered, feeling just a twinge of pity for the girl who had tortured her for over a week. "What did they do to you?"

Somehow, she had managed to survive in the closest thing to Hell on Earth for an entire year. She never spoke of what happened in the city, nor told anyone who was with her when she left, only ever calling the figure "Sensei" or "The Wolf". Odette read it over and over, as if expecting to find some hidden answer to the obvious question. How did she do it? Even before it had become a ruined, mutant-ridden hellscape, it was already a horrible place to be for a single day, let alone an entire year.

Odette let an exasperated breath run through her nostrils. "Thanks, Holly. It might not be related to the case, but it'll give me some serious ammo if she doesn't want to talk."

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth 16 archivalfag 01/11/14(Sat)14:09 No.29436365

"No problem, doll," the Vanus laughed, before adding, "So hey, chubby said you wanted to requisition some supplies or something?"

"Oh yeah, almost forgot," Odette exclaimed as she suddenly remembered. "Since he wants to get me back to the fight, I figured I'd knock a few things off my Christmas list."

"Shoot."

"Alright, let's see. First, can you get me a bullet-proof cape? We started talking about it right before I got fired, right?"

"Expensive. I'd have to run it by Fubey, then start development from scratch... Like hell I'm going to those asshats in the Four-"

"But you can do it?"

Holly sighed. "Let me run a quick search on the latest tech. I'll see what I can come up with," the Vanus was silent for several moments before speaking up again. "I can dooo: blade-proof, bullet-proof... Ooh, chainsaw-proof, I didn't even know that was possible..."

"While we're at it, think you can make it work as a glider-thingy? With some magic wind thrown in, I could probably make it fly pretty well."

Holly paused for a single second, accompanied by the sound of a keyboard being pushed away. "Odette," she started slowly, "are you asking me to make you a batcape?"

"Mmmaybe? Can you handle it?"

"I'll see what I can do," the Vanus grumbled. "What else?"

"Grenades, please."

"Like," Holly said, trying to pick her words carefully, "frag grenades?"

"Yup," the one-eyed girl replied, bright and chipper as she switched the phone to her other ear. "Maybe, like, an assortment? Frag, smoke, flashbangs, all that stuff. That'd be swell."

"Do I want to ask why?"

"They would have helped a lot with that last job."

"So would a rocket launcher! And I know what you're thinking, don't eve-"

"Can I get one of those, too?"

Odette could actually hear the servos whine as Holly clenched her robotic fists in frustration. "Fancy cape and grenades. Fine. That it?"

"A pony would be nice."

"Well, yeah," the Vanus said. "A regular sized horse would be way too big for you, shrimp."

The silver-haired Eversor pursed her lips and pouted. "Guess I deserved that one."

"Trying to do you a favour here, small-fry," Holly muttered. "Show a little gratitude, why don'tcha?"

"I'm sorry, I'm sorry," Odette said, trying her best to stay serious. "I'm grateful, really. This'll help a lot. Thanks... for everything."

"D'aww, you know I was just playin' around," the Vanus replied. "I'm glad to see you in such a good mood for once. It's... refreshing? I don't remember you actually joking around like this since... For... For a long time."

"Since Mimi died."

"I didn't want to say it, but yeah," Holly said, pausing for a moment, "since Mimi died. Even then, you serious'd up pretty hard after Brie went. You've been through a lot, kiddo. I think she would've been pretty damn proud of you. You did a hell of a lot better than a lot of others."

Odette forced out a chuckle and shook her her, grinning meekly. "I don't know about that, but thanks. I just- I don't know. I just want to do my best, that's all. And for what it's worth, I'm sorry for the past couple years. I'm going to do things right this time."

"I know you will, kid. I know you will. Take care."

"Later, Holly. Say hi to Molly for me."

Odette hung up and breathed a long sigh of relief. Somehow, talking to the unseen Vanus felt like another weight was lifted from her shoulders that she didn't even know was there. After a few minutes of rereading Fennel's file, the one-eyed Eversor gathered up her things and got out of the car. It had probably already been parked outside of the main building for some time, for all she knew; Lotte's condo was significantly closer than her old apartment.

As she passed by women's clothing stores on her way to the elevator, Odette made a mental note to have the Callidus take her shopping at some point. For the first time in far too long, she was perfectly fine with just letting herself be a girl. Her jeans and leather jacket combo were comfortable enough, but they weren't exactly the height of female fashion. Lotte, on the other hand, seemed to have "a guy" for every possible article of clothing or accessory. She always seemed to know exactly what was in season - though, Odette reminded herself, looking good was very much a part of her job.

Taking the pair of elevators down to the holding cells, the silver-haired girl made sure to smile the whole way and nod or say hello to passers-by. She even made sure to switch into her costume as she strode down the halls. Just about every she saw was in some way awe-struck at the sight of the fabled Odette Brighton, especially in such good humour. She had heard about the reputation she had garnered following her self-imposed exile, but it still shocked her to see just how stunned everyone seemed to be to see her.

It wasn't long before she reached the double doors of Block Nine, nicknamed "The Ninth Circle" by just about every girl in the Officio. Standing somewhat less than alert were the ubiquitous duo of Mona Bernard and Meg Laurie, the latter giving a curt nod and a restrained smile, while the former simply called out across the hallway, jumping and waving.

"Yo!" Meg shouted. "How's it goin', boss?"

"Nice to see you, too, uh," Odette snapped her fingers as she tried to remember the girl's name. Spending a week hanging from a tree had a way of sapping one's memory. "Laurie?"

The shorter girl's eyes lit up as she seemed to fade into a star-struck daze. "She remembered my name..."

"How you holding up?" The one-eyed girl asked, turning her attention to the taller of the duo.

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth 16 archivalfag 01/11/14(Sat)14:13 No.29436413

Mona shrugged, giving Odette a neutral look. "I can do my job well enough. Night's are harder. Times when I don't have a lot on my mind."

"Has a way of creeping in, don't it?" The former Warmaster reached up to place a hand on the taller girl's shoulder and gave it a squeeze. "You ever need to talk or anything, feel free to give me a call. I've got time these days."

"Thanks, but, uh," Mona grinned sheepishly, glancing over at her smaller companion, "I've been staying over at Meg's place. Our- my place is a bit wrecked after... everything."

"Oh," Odette nodded slowly as her lips spread into a wide grin. "Oooh! I didn't realize you two were- Oooooh."

"What?" The taller Eversor blinked before her eyes went wide, suddenly realizing what she had said. "Oh no no nononono, I meant- I didn't- We're not- NO."

"It's alright, I understand. Magical girl life's a lot easier with a warm bed."

"Meg!" Mona shouted, grasping for assistance. "Tell her what I meant!"

"Ah?" The shorter of the pair muttered as she finally snapped back to reality. "Ah! Nah! Nah, we ain't like that! We just watch movies and play video games and read comics, SPEAKING OF WHICH!"

"Meg-"

"Hold on, I've got it here somewhere," the black-haired girl stuck her tongue out, obviously putting great effort into searching her inventory.

"Meg, no-"

"Got it!" Meg handed a single, soft-cover book to Odette, beaming with excitement. "Think of it as a get well present! Or a welcome back present. Or something."

Odette blinked as her eye ran across the title. "The Steamy Adventures of... Um."

"I got Mona hooked on them. They're actually really," Meg paused, searching for the right word, "entertaining?"

"They're... not BAD," the taller Eversor added. "But, feel free to just... not."

The one-eyed girl blinked again, taking in the cover and skimming through the pages. "The one in the glasses reminds me of someone, but I can't remember who... Huh. It'll come to me."

"So you'll read it?!"

"I guess," Odette said with a shrug. "Got nothin' better to do. Thanks, kid."

"Yes!" Meg shouted, doing a short fist pump. "Told you she would!"

"Whatever," Mona grumbled. "If you're quite finished, I have actual important stuff to talk about with her."

"Ah- Oh. S-sorry," the shorter Eversor muttered, suddenly realizing her faux pas.

"As I was GOING to ask you earlier," Mona started, "dad's funeral is in a couple days. I'd be honoured if you wouldn't mind coming. I know we don't really know each other that well, but, well, you WERE right there and all..."

"Oh, uh, yeah, of course," Odette replied. "Guess I gotta go dress shopping tomorrow, huh?"

"You... wear dresses?" The taller Eversor asked, cocking an eyebrow.

"I am still a girl beneath my cold, hardened exterior, believe it or not."

"I- I'm sorry, I didn't mean it like-"

"Chill," Odette laughed as she waved the girl into silence. "I'm just playin' with you."

"Ah- Yeah," Mona laughed. "Um, hey, there is... one thing I wanted to ask you about. In private, if it's alright."

The one-eyed girl nodded and shrugged. "Sure, but I'm a bit booked right now, so just ask Holly for my number whenever you get the chance."

"Will do. And, uh, give her a good hit for me when you get in there, if you wouldn't mind."

"I'll make sure to," Odette replied, opening the door to the next wing. "Stay out of trouble, you kids."

The double doors slowly shut with a long, drawn out hiss. Mona let out a long, deep breath and craned her neck, leaning her head against the wall as she stared blankly at the ceiling. Her peace was interrupted in a matter of moments when she noticed the shorter Eversor staring up at her, a wide smirk plastered on her face.

"So," she started, sidling up to the taller girl, "what's this about talking in private, hm?"

"Y'know, Meg," Mona groaned, "usually when someone says they want to talk in private, that means they want it to be private."

The black-haired girl gently elbowed her companion in the side, saying, "Awww, come on. Ain't nothin' you can't tell me."

"God, fine. Just... training tips. Routines and stuff. That's all."

"Yer lyin' to me."

"Am not."

"Are too."

Mona sighed and rolled her eyes, leaning against her side of the hallway. She knew better than to feed the other girl ideas. Instead, she would let the silence speak for her. It was a new kind of anxiety that pressed her into secrecy. She wasn't entirely sure how to break it to her best friend that she - and she alone - had been approached to join the most prestigious group in the Seventeenth. Part of her still didn't quite believe it was true, while another part of her didn't even think herself worthy. Most of all, she didn't know if it was worth leaving her one and only friend - if such an honour was worth losing Meg Laurie, the first colleague who didn't see her as 'that spoiled rich girl'.

"Hehe," Meg chuckled, taking a sledgehammer to Mona's tranquil silence. "She thought we were lesbians."

"God damn it, Meg..."

Nine identical doors numbered 901 to 909 lined the far wall of the Seventeenth's maximum security holding area, dubbed 'The Ninth Circle' by the girls. Odette stepped into the deserted corridor, the sound of her footsteps echoing throughout as her metal boots clanged against the marble floor. The hall was sparsely decorated, with only a handful of chairs along the near wall, with a container full of old magazines on either end. The one-eyed girl stared up at a solitary camera nested in one corner of the room.

"We good?" Odette asked.

"She's surprisingly well behaved," Holly answered through the room's PA. "Sitting nicely, cuffs still on. Head in whenever you're ready."

[10/17]

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth 16 archivalfag 01/11/14(Sat)14:16 No.29436473

Odette nodded at the camera and took a deep breath. From under her long, black cloak, she produced her battered notepad, along with a sheaf of papers clipped together. She had always preferred analog notes over digital, when the situation allowed. As she went over her notes one last time, it struck her just little she'd written in her notepad since that fateful day two- no, a week shy of three months ago, she reminded herself.

After another breath to steady herself, she put on her professional face and opened the door to cell 901. As soon as she crossed the threshold, she could feel the familiar sense of weight and itching in her gums as the room robbed her of her magic. In the center of the room, behind a stainless steel table, sat Fennel Vance, showing Odette a smug grin that only made her want to punch it off the girl's stupid face. Her hair was still long and unkempt, but appeared somewhat better groomed than last they'd met. Odette had, however, not noticed how much the other girl's costume resembled an unbuckled straitjacket in their earlier meetings. It seemed so oddly fitting.

"Mornin' Vance," the one-eyed girl called out, twirling around her own chair to sit in it reverse, leaning forward over the back rest. "How are things?"

"I want my phone call," was the Wolf's only response, bemused grin still decorating her face.

"This isn't prison," Odette laughed, matching the girl's expression. "You don't get a phone call."

"Laaame."

"You didn't answer my question," the former Warmaster pressed. "How are you doing?"

"Booooored out of my miiiiind," Fennel drawled, leaning her chair back.

"If you cooperate, I can grab you a magazine on the way out."

The messy-haired girl smirked and let out a short snort of laughter. "Pretty they sure haven't been replaced since Brie kicked it."

"Quite possibly," Odette muttered as she reached under her cloak. "Quite possibly... Shall we get to business?"

"Well, I was trying to have a conversation, but SUUURE," Fennel grumbled, rolling her eyes and waving her hands in an exaggerated gesture, "let's do what YOU want to do."

"Good, good," the one-eyed girl replied, unphased, as she leaned back and pulled out her notepad. "Now, we have a vague idea of why you kidnapped these innocent girls. Something about this..."

"Blessed Lady."

"That's the one," Odette said, holding a pen to her notepad. "Elaborate."

Fennel blinked, then shook her head with a look of stern confusion. "What?" She asked, dead-pan. "That's... You're not even gonna threaten me? No intimidation? No yelling or rage? Just a 'Hey Fennel! How ya doin! So how's about that Blessed Lady, huh?' Like.. Seriously?"

"Would you rather I hurt you?"

"No, but like, I expected some kind of 'TELL ME WHAT YOU KNOW OR I'LL DO'... some kind of unspeakable torture, I dunno," the messy-haired girl shrugged, "you fill in the blank."

"Not the type."

"I guess, but it's just... it's unnervi-" Fennel blinked as her eyes widened in sudden recognition. "Oh. OH. Oh, you're good."

Odette shrugged sheepishly, making a show of absorbing the praise. "I do my best," she replied. "Gets old, after all. Only so many ways I can tell people how I'll power down the room, give you a little cut, dig my finger in there and slowly freeze every vein in their body - incredibly excruciating, by the way - then call Fubey in so I can do it all over again."

"Right."

"Was that intimidating?" Odette asked, maintaining an unphased look. "I never know."

"Well-"

"Getting back to the Blessed Lady," the former Warmaster interrupted, redirecting the conversation. "Explain to me why you saw fit to kidnap eight- no, seven innocent girls."

"Eight. You're- You're, uh, forgetting yourself. You were right the first time."

"My mistake. Carry on."

"Right, um, okay," Fennel puffed up her cheeks and exhaled deeply. "Baiting the hook, essentially. You get it? Cause I used-"

"So you're saying... what?" Odette twirled her pen around, shaking her head. "I was the aim the whole time?"

The other girl pointed a finger from each of her hand-cuffed hands, grinning. "Bingo! Well," she corrected herself, "sort of. I mean, if they decided to call on the big B, then that's a win in our book."

"Why me?"

"It's obvious, isn't it?" Fennel replied, giggling. "I mean, think about it. Big churchy-culty thing, looking for the poor and the down-trodden. Big tough Warmaster suddenly dropped in the gutter. Makes sense, don't it? Who better to go after?"

"I see. Looks like you fucked that one up," Odette laughed.

"Sure does looke that way, don't it?" Fennel replied, returning a laugh of her own.

"And where do those golden hooks fit in?"

A sly, wolfish smirk crept up the messy-haired girl's face as she listened to the question, answering, "Beats me. Can't say I rightly know either. Didn't seem all that special to me. I wouldn't think too hard about them."

"Is it getting a little chilly in here," Odette said with a cold smile, "or is it just me?"

"Hey, if you want to give them a look, feel free. They're," Fennel paused, thinking, "wherever you put them?"

"Maximum security vault."

"Vault, right. Yeah, don't just leave them lying around in the open. That might be a bad idea."

"I'll remember that," Odette replied, making a quick note.

It seemed too easy. It was more like a friendly - albeit tense - conversation than an interrogation. Fennel offered little to no resistance and seemed to be answering the questions to the best of her ability. It was perhaps worse than if she had resisted. This way, Odette couldn't be sure if she was telling the truth or making it up as she went. The Wolf knew the game just as well as she did; no doubt Fennel had put the screws to her share of captives over the years, as well.

Odette decided to stow her burning curiosity for the sake of staying on track. Once again, she reached under her cloak, this time pulling out a wrinkled, flattened sheet of paper - the same one that had been found in her apartment two prior. She slid it across the steel table, watching as the other girl cocked a curious eyebrow.

"The night I first saw you, my apartment was broken into. We found this waiting for me. Care to explain?"

Fennel picked it up with both hand-cuffed hands and examined it closely, squinting and turning it this way and that. Finally satisfied, she placed it back on the table and nodded.

"I believe, and this is just my own personal opinion," she said, "that this is a message."

"Why did you write it?" Odette growled, her patience starting wear away.

Fennel's cheeks puffed up as she tried to maintain her composure. "You- You think I wrote this?" Fennel asked, slapping a hand on the table as her roaring laughter slipped free. "You- Oh god. Oh that's just rich. Listen, Odette. Can I call you Odette? I'll call you Odette," she waved her hands and spoke between fits of giggling. "I tried the whole 'Teehee! I'll carve out your skull with melon-baller!' routine, I really did. It just- It's not ME, y'know? Some people can pull it off, but not me."

"Then who?"

"Hell if I know!" The messy-haired girl answered. "One of the higher-ups or someone!"

Odette blinked. "Higher-ups?"

"In the Church," Fennel answered. "What, you think I've been doing this ALONE? Come on, Brighton! Think a little!"

Putting a pen to her notepad, the silver-haired girl narrowed her eyes. "Names?"

"None under your jurisdiction."

"Indulge me."

Fennel let out a long, strained breath, rocking back in her chair. "Let's see... Main contact is a chick that goes by Daedalus. The Architect. She's the one who gave me the note. Probably wrote it, too," she leaned over the table, gesturing with her hand as she spoke. "Real hoity-toity sort. Got them big long curls, blue ribbons in her hair, big fan of tea. You know the type. I'm, like, ninety percent sure she's ex-Eighth, but she sounds English or some shit. So who knows?"

"So she's one of the people in charge," Odette asked, "this 'Daedalus'?"

"Nah, nah. Word is she did some big favour for someone important," Fennel shrugged. "I don't know. I stay out of the loop as much as I can. They're all pretty fuckin' loopy over there. 'Golden Land' this, 'Chosen Ones' that. Devoted as I may be, that ain't exactly my scene, y'understand?"

The one-eyed girl nodded, jotting down notes. Holly was already recording all of it - and probably already had enough leads to book her schedule for next month - but taking personal notes was something that had been ingrained in Odette's mind from day one. It seemed, for the time being, that there wasn't anything left to ask, aside from the one, golden question.

"So," Odette started, folding her hands over the backrest of her chair, "I think we both know what I'm going to ask next. You want to fill in the blank for me?"

Fennel chuckled. Three, poignant laughs, as though she had been working from a script. Odette could immediately tell that she had been looking forward to the moment.

"Why have I been telling you all of this so easily."

"Bingo."

The messy-haired girl smiled to herself - a smug grin that made Odette just want to punch it right off of her face. "Two reasons. Two simple reasons. One, I enjoy toying with you, but I assume you've already gathered that-"

"I have."

[15/17]

>> ☐ Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth 16 ONE MORE THING archivalfag 01/11/14(Sat)14:22 No.29436584

"-and two," Fennel's face darkened as her grin grew imperceptibly more sinister, "it doesn't matter. In the time it would take you to reach Daedalus, I'll be out of here, you'll be long dead and there won't be anyone left to go after us."

Odette eyed the other girl. She was hoping to find some sign that she was bluffing, that Fennel had just let everything slip and was scrabbling to cover up her mistakes. Instead, she found nothing but cold certainty in the Wolf's face. Odette snapped her notepad shut and shoved it back under her cloak as she made to get up.

"I think we're done here," she said. "See you in a couple days."

Fennel smirked and gave a delicate, mocking wave good-bye. "Ta-ta, Odette~"

As she tucked her chair in, a stray thought crossed the one-eyed girl's mind. It was juvenile and malicious, but worth it. One final statement to get the last laugh.

"Hey, kid, one thing before I go," said Odette, smirking as she turned around. "If you're planning on getting out, you might want to pick something other than 'the Wolf'. It's rude to take someone else's name."

All at once, Fennel's face twisted into a vicious snarl as she opened her mouth to yell. Then, as if on cue, Odette's cell phone rang, loudly echoing through the cramped room. The silver-haired girl held up a finger to silence the 'Wolf', not even bothering to turn around and face her. Checking the call display, Odette recognized Holly's number instantly.

"Yo," she greeted the Vanus.

"Hey, uh, just a heads up," Holly said nervously, "you've got some company waiting right outside."

Odette cocked an eyebrow. "Who? If Lotte came to visit me at work, I swear-"

"Nah, it's... Well, you'll see."

"Vague and mysterious, thanks," the Eversor grumbled. "You get enough data."

Holly grunted in acknowledgement. "It'll take me a bit to analyze all this. I'll have something by tomorrow."

Odette nodded and the two said their good byes. As the door unlocked with the heavy thunk of numerous tumblers, she couldn't help but get excited for a brief moment. Perhaps it could be just Therese or someone else she had forgotten to visit after her recovery. It was then, as the door hissed open, that the realization struck her. The Seventh was visiting. That could only mean-

"Aiiiyah!" A voice screeched from across the hall. "This not how you treat guests! Stupid Crow tell me to come all way down to smelly basement and you KEEP ME WAITING?!"

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/13/14(Mon)08:28 No.29484858

You shrug at Sayaka's question. You'll probably have to kill Mikuni Oriko, if it comes down to the wire. The Golden Weapons are bad news to anyone even just holding them - you had a procedure done on yourself to deal with that kind of thing specifically, and look where it got you. What kind of shit could happen to someone who's not only using one of them, but also extremely vulnerable to them, as a non-Magical Girl? You've seen what the things can do to regular jackoffs, and it isn't pretty.

...Still, you're working on a few things that could help you take Oriko alive and end this Prophet bullshit without too much bloodshed. You've no idea if they'll work at all, but...the more options you'll have, the better it is for everyone. Especially Kyoko.

"Huh. I guess you really are changing, Murderface." The Eversor's jaw makes that awful, horrible clicking sound as she grins. "I'd have been fine with you just saying yes, but it's kind of encouraging that you're taking this Warmaster thing really seriously." It's here that she makes a face. "Sucks about you turning to a full-on watch-wearing dildo, though."

>> ☐ Deculture 01/13/14(Mon)08:29 No.29484868

Watch-wearing dildo--you're trying to fucking do the right thing here! And isn't Oriko a civilian? What happened to her being protective of another civilian earlier, huh? Like a particularly infuriating cat?

"NECO's different and you know it." Sayaka grunts as she takes hold of her chin with one hand, wiggling it experimentally from side to side, wincing with every movement. "She didn't hold an entire stadium hostage, she didn't send crazed Eversors after you, and she sure as hell didn't mail us body parts made to look like - NGGHH!- Mami-san's." A loud, juicy crunch, and you stare as Sayaka pops her jaw back into joint with a short, savage jerk. "She's no longer a civilian, Murderface. Like it or not, she's a combatant now, and it's either her or us."

...She's got a point.

Sayaka opens her mouth a few times, as if to put her wince-inducing handiwork to the test, before turning to look at you. "I...I appreciate you looking out for Kyoko this much, though. I know I can be a bitch sometimes, but I do appreciate it."

How do you respond?

Fuck alone only knows.

But pretty much EVERYBODY is dying if we bust up the universe, so what happens to the golden weapons seems kinda like small potatoes in comparison.

So, for now, we keep doing what we always do. Plug away at the problems we can deal with and hope for a tomorrow that doesn't suck.

Acquiring the staff and subjugating Ahriman would actually be a massive boon. We don't actually have any dedicated ranged golden weapons besides the deagle. This thing vaporized a warmaster in one shot.

If anything can calm Oriko down, it will be her lover and best friend.

You pull yourself up to a sitting position - and the mere act of it hurts enough that you very nearly bite through the filter of your own cigarette as you clench your teeth through it. Yeah, you could feel that Sayaka's healed up most of it, but you still have to wait for your body to catch up to it. That means a lot more residual pain.

Or at least, you hope that's just it.

Still clutching Sayaka's cape around you, you tell Sayaka that...well, the both of you need to be honest, here. You're both bitches, and that's the truth of it. Kyoko is different. She's the best friend you have, someone who can deal with your bullshit and Sayaka's, and you're pretty sure she's a good person in and out. It's why you're doing this. You feel that you have to do better for her.

Sayaka nods, here. "I hear you. Just...well, what we do and everything. The world in particular. I know for a fact that it sucks pretty bad out there, and..." She nods towards your golden chainaxes still embedded on the ceiling. "We're clearly dealing with shit that's not natural. Well, less natural than we're used to. But she's one of those people that can still deal with it and still smile, you know? Not a lot of people around that's like that. Not anymore."

Yeah.

...How does Sayaka deal with it, then?

"Like how everyone does, Murderface." Sayaka takes her spent cigarette and grinds it out on the training mat beside her. "With a sword in my hand. Or lacking that, just something to kill shit with."

Huh. Not the answer you were expecting.

"What were you expecting, then?"

Well. 'Being a bitch to everyone and everything' sounded like a winner.

"Fuck outta here, Murderface."

You talk for a few moments more, mostly about nothing in particular, just small talk. You have a feeling that your relationship with Sayaka's improved a bit, especially after that bit where the both of you tried your very best to kill each other. The talk helped too, but probably not as much.

[+ 1000 SAYAKA POINTS!]

It's after a while longer that Sayaka gets up off of the floor. You follow suit, or at least try to - but your body's still not as cooperative as it should be. The Eversor shakes her head here, before helping you up, offering her hand to you and then hauling you back up on your feet.

"I've got something to attend to, so I'll have to get going." She picks up Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie from where it landed when she tossed it aside - and you can't help but grimace at the damage on the once-pristine crimson blade. Gorefather and Gorechild didn't quite chew threw the entire blade, but they did do their best to. Sayaka's pretty much the same here, shaking her head regretfully before carefully sliding it back into its sheath, with an almost tender touch. "Might as well get this fixed, too. Hopefully it'll be done before we head out for that offshore op."

Yeah, that'd be good.

"You'll be alright then, Murderface? I don't need to send a medic squad to wheel your beaten ass to sickbay, right?"

No, but she probably'd need to call them in for herself, seeing as she's the one who ended up getting knocked out.

Oh, and she still needs to do what you want, right? Since you won and everything.

"...I'm not getting out of that, am I?" Sayaka shakes her head. "Fine. You get to call in one favor. ONE. And it better not be a stupid one. I mean...I'll do it, but don't make it stupid. I know how you work."

If she really knew how you worked, she wouldn't be letting you ask her for a favor. But you'll keep it in mind.

"Later, Murderface."

With a flourish of her cape - newly-summoned and pristine white - Sayaka departs from the training room, leaving you alone. You look around at the damaged training hall, and wonder if you need to tell Kyuubey about this. You probably do.

You see the Warmaster Cap sitting on the floor where it dropped from your head, and make to pick it up. As soon as you do, though, it's here that a familiar silhouette materializes behind you. Its wolf ears twitching rather worriedly.

No, but we could break Oriko's.

Sword is only as strong as it's wielder and even if she can sychronise with Oriko, Oriko isn't a Magical Girl, so she's working with a handicap.

Not saying it would be an easy fight. But it seems like everybody gets something they want and Oriko gets a fighting chance to come out of this alive.

Good question. This thing with Risa kinda threw all my assumptions about the girl inside the golden weapons out the window. I assumed that before the original used died it was just a more extreme proxy for the girl in question. Explaining why girls using golden weapons went batshit insane and better at what they did. Imagine Kirika with a more extreme version of herself as a shoulder angel nudging her in w/e direction. And when they did go insane and die for w/e reason, they got stuck in the weapon. Same deal with Yuu, got really good at punching shit, but her love of the fight got the better of her as she starting fighting more and more people.

But for the staff, I think it's safe to think it's Ahriman. Because they chose Oriko, someone with a grudge against Murderface. Otherwise, why not just pick any random girl from the 3rd over a normal girl?

+ What, and you're not? + Risa frowns at you, a facial expression made completely impossible by her frozen skeletal grin - but she manages to look the part, anyway. + Just...something about her gets me on edge. Like that bint inside the golden butter knife you got back in that room you've been storing us in, only worse. Much worse. +

She hugs herself, shivering. + Wasn't that bad earlier, but after a bit I got that feeling - like I need to get you to kill her right away, and not even for points, but just to be safe. You know what I'm getting at here, yeah? +

You understand what she's trying to say, but not where she's coming from. Is she saying that there's something else to Sayaka that you're not aware of? That only Risa can see?

+ Well, duh, I'm a bloody ghost in a pair of bloody giant axes with chainsaw teeth, + The silhouette snaps. + I'm all about unknowable, mysterious rot like that, I'm practically made for it! +

...If she's all about that, then can she at least be a bit more specific than just a feeling, then? A feeling's not much to go on.

It's here that Risa blinks at you. + Something more specific than that? I don't...+ The silhouette shakes her head. + Nah, I don't think I can. I told ya, it's just a feeling. just...just a really strong one, ya know? +

Huh. Well. If she can't come up with anything better than that, then this seems like a pretty clear-cut case of someone being scared shitless by Sayaka, then. Which is still actually pretty funny.

+ ...You havin' a right laugh, are you? At my expense? + Risa seems to growl here. + Last person who did that, I personally tore their heart out with me bare hands! +

Big deal. Been there, done that.

+ THROUGH THEIR ARSEHOLE! +

It's your turn to blink. ...Okay, maybe not. But still, she shouldn't be so skittish around Sayaka. She's not all that bad.

But yeah, no more jokes. It worked out all right in the end, but not everyone may actually appreciate Risa's humor like Sayaka did.

+ ...Figures. Right, right, I'll lay off the jokes until you say so. + Risa holds one hand over her heart. + Ya got my word, boss. +

Right. Well. That's settled.

You glance up at the chainaxes still embedded up on the ceiling. They're...the ceiling's pretty high up, so...

You turn back to Risa. Is there any way to get the chainaxes down, or what?

+ Piece of piss! + The wolf-eared girl claps both her hands, and the chainaxes above you begin to growl. Their motors screaming as their teeth begin to move, chewing themselves free. Two floor-shaking impacts later, and you manage to pull them free from the floor and shove them back into your inventory.

+ Right. Anything else, boss? + Risa grins at you again.

Any more questions for Risa?

Just a couple of questions more, actually. Just to satisfy your curiosity.

+ That's it? + Risa seems surprised, here. + Well, ask away, boss. Not really sure what good it'll do ya, gabbin' like this, but hey, whatever works! +

Right. Well, about the other Golden Weapons. Can she communicate with them at all? Or at least, whoever's inside them? She mentioned something about the golden katana, and her description somewhat matches the spirit inside it.

Risa shakes her head. + I can sense 'em, but communicate? Sorry, boss. I tried that a long time ago, but never really seemed to stick. + She shrugs, here. + Maybe try some of the other golden gubbins you've got up in your sleeve, they'd probably be able to. + A moment. + That said, uh...it's probably not a good idea to try that, I think. +

Oh? Why?

The wolf-eared girl looks at you askance. + Yer askin' me that? For real? +

...Yeah? What's so weird about that?

Risa manages a slow nod, here. + Riiiight. Well, let me ask you this. So far, you found us with previous owners, right? And most of them, Kharn included, seemed...off, somehow? +

Off. Right. Her point being?

+ My point being, us Golden Weapons, we want to be, uh... + It's here that the silhouette seems to almost blush. + Right, I can't say what I'm going to say next without sounding like some sort of porn thing, so just keep yer giggles to yourself, okay? +

You grunt here in annoyance, motioning for her to continue.

+ Right. Us Golden Weapons, we want to be used. All the time. We'll settle for most. + Risa holds up one hand. + We want to be used because that's the only time we can talk to people. To interact with the outside world. To be like...this, and actually not bored the fuck out of our minds in our own personal hells. If our user's got more than one of us on hand, more power to them, but we want to be used more than the other one. You gettin' me so far, boss? +

>> ☐ Deculture 01/13/14(Mon)12:12 No.29487428

Sort of. So Golden Weapons can get jealous too?

+ Now you're gettin' it. + The specter nods approvingly. + You can follow that train of thought, yeah? So if you got two Golden Weapons contacting each other, and either side thinks they're gettin' used more than the other...what do you think'll happen? +

...Ah.

+ Yeah, 'ah'. And it turns out bad for the user, too. Because once the owner uses 'em, they get all that pent-up aggression and anger stored up inside. + Risa grins. + Well, it's probably not going to be that kind of thing ALL the time, but you wanna be careful anyway. Except for that Yuu kid, she's nice. +

Yuu? But she just said--

+ I can't contact them, but they can contact me. It's like havin' a busted phone where you can only receive calls, but not make 'em. Or just being out of minutes, I guess. +

Right. You should probably write that down, somewhere.

Other question, then. You realize she didn't give you her origin story earlier, but can you at least ask who she was before she got shanghaied into a Golden Weapon?

Risa falls silent at this. +...Used to be someone important. + She replies sullenly, looking away. + And the kind of important where I'm really famous and I had lots of fun. Like, surfing in shark-infested waters while wearing a penguin costume fun. I...+ the specter's voice chokes up a bit. + I had my own spork, too, and everything... +

...

+ Aw, cripes, look at me gettin' emotional at an intimate personal background scene, + The wolf-eared girl sniffs, blowing her nose on her sleeve. + I'll leave ya alone for now, there doesn't look like any chance for points here, anyway. Just nap for a bit. +

Right. Fine.

Before she goes, though. How many points would have Sayaka gotten you?

+ Huh? + Risa blinks. + Er...75,000 points, I guess? Probably twice than that if you got her into her fish mode before doin' her in. + It's here that she starts to fade. + Right, see you later! I'll try not to sleep through the sodding century this time! +

I am 100% for using the axes and the bangles at the same time though. Risa seems to play nice with Yuu. Plus they seem to be on the same wavelength when it comes to combat. The axes require brute STRENGH to wield them properly anyway. I bet they have great synergy.

She can also use condoms to ~~have consensual sex with her boyfriend as a responsible young adult who is still exploring and defining their sexuality. Gay, Straight, Queer, it doesn't matter. If she were into girls right now or is and was seeing one there would have been finger cuffs and a dental dam in that purse. Life and love are things that are open in the world. Love has no borders of race, nationality, or gender.~~

NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/17/14(Fri)07:43 No.29576190

You decide to drop by your Golden Weapon vault.

Second time of the day you're visiting this place. You're going a bit more slowly this time, though, with all the aches and pains from your little encounter with Sayaka flaring up with every step. ...Jesus, you're practically limping the entire way. Pathetic.

You manage to make it there without making an embarrassment of yourself, however. A sigh leaving your lips as the doors slam shut behind you, sealing you in with the most dangerous weapons you've ever laid your hands on.

You pull out the chainaxes from your inventory, and place them back on their proper rack.

Despite everything, Risa wasn't really that bad, you decide. Just a bit wild, but nothing you can't handle--

>> ☐ Deculture 01/17/14(Fri)07:44 No.29576198

>>29576190

As soon as you let go of them, it's here that the aftereffects of going an entire round with the most batshit insane Eversor this side of Kharn suddenly slam back into you full force - and you very nearly pass out from it, finding yourself knocked down to your hands and knees. Gritting your teeth, you grab something from your inventory that you've never had to grab for a long time - a bottle of Interfectum 600.

You twist the cap off, nearly tearing it off its rails, before upending the bottle into your mouth. Three makes it down your throat with the first shake, and you force yourself not to take any more. You shove the thing back into your inventory, breathing hard, waiting for the familiar effects to start pouring in.

Fuck. Is this what happens when you use the chainaxes? Add to that - is your Equerry just that much of a fucking monster?

You shake your head as your breathing stabilizes, the pleasant numbing effect of the painkillers slowly making the pain recede. Not nearly eliminating it, just reducing it into a dull throbbing sensation.

Jesus. You'll have to remember that. Not only does using the chainaxes make you hyper as fuck, it numbs pain to tolerable levels - and that effect stops once you let go of them.

Fucking bullshit, these Golden Weapons.

Anyway. What do you do now?

Also, on the subject of Sayaka being a monster: Risa wasn't the first one to notice something off about her. I was rereading the Concert arc and came across this line:

"You're not too sure if it's the trick of the light or what, or if it's just from the multiple flashbulbs going off?

But for a moment there, Sayaka's eyes looked completely black for a moment. Just like Pinky's. Just like Kirika's."

There may be other instances, but I can't remember them (and incidentally, since they probably all happened before Siberia, neither can we).

I think we have sufficient leverage on Kirika that we SHOULD be able to keep her under control. If she doesn't play nice with us, she spends the rest of what passes for her life neglected in a dark hole deep below the earth, and she won't be able to do anything to prevent us from murdering the shit out of Oriko. Assuming we don't screw up that negotiation as badly as we did with NECO.

So, what I guess what I'm saying is, we're fucked.

You decide to try and communicate with the VIII Golden Weapon. Namely, your Desert Eagle.

You take it out of its foam inset, the blocky firearm immediately growing warm in your hands despite the fact that it's been sitting in something resembling a walk-in freezer for God knows how long. You find yourself smiling at this, your fingers easily finding the all-too-familiar grip you've used to wield and shoot the oversized handcannon. Its weight settling comfortably, naturally in your hands. ...It almost feels like being reunited with a lost love.

After a few moments of just simply staring down at the golden firearm in your hands, you release the magazine, letting it fall down onto your other hand, before shoving it back in again and racking the slide. Turning the gun this way and that, examining it from every angle.

It's still the same thing. Still radiating a quiet menace, despite its safety still being on.

You close your eyes, here, and start to concentrate. You don't exactly get the process - you regret not grilling Yuu about it - but you remember how she coached you into doing so, that one time.

As soon as you feel the cold of the Golden Vault suddenly vanish, you open your eyes, and find yourself in a dark place. One with four mirrors on it, standing in front of you. Each one as tall as the ones Haruka used during the seeing.

You step forward, narrowing your eyes at this - and at the same moment, three reflections step forward as well. But instead of being similar to you in every way - like reflections are supposed to be - they're different. Each one drastically different to you.

One of them, the farthest to the left, looks young, inexperienced, nervous. Her hair tied in two long, heavy braided pigtails. She looks just about ready to burst into tears.

The mirror next to her shows you what you probably would've looked like if you went the entire watch-wearing dildo routine. Impeccable posture, long straight hair down to your ass, and a cold, emotionless countenance bereft of any glasses whatsoever. You immediately hate this reflection.

The third is...a ruined version of you. You're not sure if it's supposed to be you in the first place, what with all the fucking armor, and the metal shit all over its arms and legs that strongly remind you of an infamous Russian killing machine. Her hairstyle looks the same as yours, and her eyes the same violet with the pinprick of red as the pupils, and she has the same shield...but that's where the similarities end. For one thing, she's taller than you, and her face is scarred as shit. ...But good scars, though. Scars even the most hardcore Eversor would be proud of.

The fourth mirror is blank. Strangely so. It's not reflecting anything, not even when you wave to it.

"...Sloppy." The second reflection murmurs, her voice deadpan. Your voice, but not ruined by time, or by too much alcohol and cigarettes. "Fix your posture. Your slouching is unsightly."

"U-um, hello," The first tries, but after flinching from the second's comments. "M-Matsuda-san, right? I'm very pleased to meet you."

"..." The third merely glowers at you, frowning, not saying anything.

Well. Seems there's a freakshow in your Desert Eagle. Fantastic.

How do you react?

That's not how detective work works. Everyone's got an opinion on what's going on. The truth is usually lost somewhere inbetween.

Even if we think we know what's going on, hearing these guys opinions on it can serve to cast light on something else we thought we knew.

Right. They're...they're all you, somehow?

What the fuck. What the fuck is going on? Can somebody here just explain to you, clearly and concisely, for once in your fucking life, just what is going on?

Despite being your reflections, all three of the images react differently to your outburst. The first flinches, looking more and more close to tears with each passing moment. The second frowns here, crossing her arms under her chest, her - or your - purple eyes glaring daggers at you. The third simply smirks, her ragged cut of a mouth curling upwards ever so slightly in an unsightly sneer.

"Language, please." The second says after what seems like an eternity. "I realize that you're confused, but that is no reason to act in such an undignified manner."

"P-please don't shout," The first speaks, now, her voice tremulous. "We're...we're you! I know it's confusing, but we're you! Just...I guess..." She looks at the shield on her left arm, the metal disc pristine and unscarred - in contrast to the beaten, scarred one clamped onto your right. "...Not quite..."

"What she means to say, in her own stunted, stilting way, is that we are reflections of you. Inside this...vessel of souls." The second cuts in again, flipping her hair imperiously, hatefully. "I suppose I should at least be pleased that you didn't end up like this freak." She jerks her head towards the third reflection - netting her a wet leopard growl from in return. "And I suppose one of us has to assist you should you need it. Sometimes." Another flip of her hair. "When we feel like it."

Another growl, before the third reflection turns to you and gives you the smallest fraction of a nod.

Huh. Well. That's...something you should remember, then. Maybe you should write it down somewhere.

You rummage inside your inventory, looking for a scrap of paper, and possibly a pen - when your hand clamps on something that feels like a small, slim hardbound book. You pull it out, blinking, and it's here that you see that you've pulled out the journal that Wendy left you in your dream, earlier.

It even has a small pen.

That's handy, you remark to yourself, before flipping to the very first blank page. A chair materializes behind you - black ebony in make, and looking very uncomfortable - and you sit down on it. Writing down what you've learned so far. About Risa, and about the reflections. And a bit about not challenging Sayaka to another fight again.

"Updated my journal," you murmur to yourself as you finish, before looking up again at the three reflections.

"At least this one seems to be learning, too." The second reflection remarks. The first smiles at this, clearly pleased. The third is indifferent, but she's looking at your journal with what looks like envy.

...Well, before everything else. Can you at least get their names? Because you'll be fucked if you keep referring to which reflection they are. And yes, you know they're you, but calling them your own name is going to get old real fast.

"Akemi Homura," The first says.

"Akemi Homura," The second replies.

". . ." The third adds.

Right. That's...yeah. That helps.

You add that to your journal, too. But not before popping two more painkillers, crunching them down noisily as you write.

Another question, then. Why's the fourth mirror blank?

"...Hnn. That's strange." The second Homura replies, turning to glance at the fourth. "We're all supposed to be in attendance, but...I suppose that one is either dead, or unable to join the communion."

The communion? So this is what this is?

"More or less. Or at least, an incomplete one." The reflection smirks. "If it was complete, you'd be seeing a lot more mirrors than just four. But this will suffice for you." She sniffs, contemptuously.

A moment of silence, as the four of you just stare at each other.

"That ponytail." The second Homura says suddenly. "Are you trying to emulate Sakura Kyoko's style, or something? That looks completely idiotic. Take it off."

"I...I think it's cool," The first Homura cuts in hesitantly. "L-like a samurai...

The third merely nods again, but this time with a look of approval.

Yeah. This isn't going very well. But at least they haven't started driving you insane just yet.

Right. This isn't going to work. You'll have to assign nicknames to them.

"...Nicknames." The second Homura states, flatly. "Really."

Yes, really, you snap. For fuck's sake, you can't keep referring to them via mirror position or what. That's just too annoying.

You point at each of them in turn. The first one, with the braids, is called Braids. The second, the bitchiest so far, is Dildoes. The one with all the awesome armor and cut-up face is...Murderface, because honestly, she looks more like it than you do.

Again, you see the varying reactions of each of your reflections. Braids seems to be hiding a protest behind a nervous smile, Dildoes is frowning at you as hard as she can, and Murderface is...well, she's actually smiling, now. Granted, it's a shark's smile, one full of black, sharp teeth - but a smile nonetheless.

"Naturally, I refuse such an ugly, distasteful nickname." Dildoes says after a moment, her voice the frostiest it's ever been. "Call me by my proper name, at least--"

Dildoes. That's her proper name now, you say as you write it in your journal and underline it a couple of times. Now and forever, she will be referred to as such.

"But--"

Yeah, no. You're not interested. Now, can anyone tell you why you've forgotten so much shit? About yourself, about your past? Can anyone restore your memory?

Braids speaks up, here. "W-we should be able to. It's...it's a communion, right? That means we could--"

A growl, from Murderface, and you see her shake her head. She taps at the intact shield on her left arm, before pointing at your scarred one.

"O-oh..." Braids' hopeful expression falls. "I...I suppose we can't, really...but we can at least tell her, right?"

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 01/17/14(Fri)10:53 No.29578645

"Remember what happened to the last one." Dildoes replies, reaching up with one hand to flip her hair again. You're starting to get annoyed at that. "Remember what she did? Put her own gun to her mouth and emptied her brains all over the place. Do you want that to happen, too?"

Braids shrinks back in her mirror, going pale. "N-no! I don't...I don't want that!"

"I suppose a verbal recounting would be in order. Although a heavily censored one, to make sure this one doesn't go crazy." Dildoes shrugs, but the little smirk on her lips tells you that she took pleasure in making Braids react like that. "We can answer her question at the very least. About her memory."

It's here that she turns to you. "Your real name is Akemi Homura. You are a Magical Girl."

And?

"...And you are our last hope in setting things right," Braid adds in, after she'd regained her composure. "Because...because we failed. We all failed."

Failed? Failed in what?

"This is going to take a while." Dildoes turns to Murderface. "For heaven's sake, this would be easier if you didn't screw up enough to be that way. At the very least you'd be able to tell her, instead of leaving it to me and...her."

Murderface merely growls at this, making Dildoes sigh.

"Very well, where do I start? I suppose the beginning should be good..."

And it's then that you learn about yourself. Your...past selves, more specifically.

How you were, in fact, a normal girl once. With a normal life. You had some heart problems then, requiring you to spend some time in a hospital. You transferred to Mitakihara, and met someone who would change your life forever.

Kaname Madoka.

She would rescue you, after your mindless stumbling into a Witch Barrier. An angel in a pink dress, swooping down to offer you salvation. You become fast friends. Best friends, in fact. Maybe something even more.

But then fate strikes as Walpurgisnacht. She defeats it, but is killed herself. You didn't even get to say goodbye - all you find is her lifeless corpse, torn in half. The only mercy granted to her was that she died with a smile on her face, and not the expression of fear and despair that you would find familiar in your own reflection all too soon.

A contract made in haste. Giving you the power to rewind time, as much as you wished. Allowing you to try, again and again, to rescue her, to stop her from the cruel fate that she'd been cursed with.

But you kept failing. Every single time ended in complete and utter failure, no matter what you tried, no matter how hard you fought.

"...We broke at the ten thousand, nine hundred and forty-eighth attempt." Dildoes remarks here, her smirk gone, replaced by her businesslike emotionlessness. "But we kept trying, even then. Until one of us was broken enough that she did the impossible. The unthinkable."

And what's that?

"..." All three reflections fall silent at this, bowing their heads.

"It...it's probably better if we don't talk about it." Braids murmurs. "Let's...let's just say it was really bad."

"As for why you lost your memories..." Dildoes starts. "...that's easy enough to explain, along with that." She gestures towards your scarred Shield. "It's to remove you from the chain of failures. To make sure SHE doesn't use you as her pawn."

She? Who's she?

All three glance at each other. "The most broken one of us all," Dildoes replies finally. "The one who turned our ambition into ashes in our mouths. Who twisted our wish and broke every single promise we've made to everyone. Even to the blue-haired harridan."

Dildoes narrows her eyes at you, before shaking her head. "What's there to tell? She answers to the same name as all of us do." Another fucking hairflip, this one made with such flamboyance that you can't help but grit your teeth at it. "But we call her the Transcendent One, if you really need a name."

The Transcendent One? That's...unnecessarily flashy, yeah?

"It's what she became. Or what we became." The raven-haired girl lets out a sigh. You write that down in your journal as well, circling it a couple of times.

...Wait. Did this Transcendent One dress like a slut? Feathers, skimpy gown, that kind of slutty?

It's here that all three reflections glance at each other, then at you. "That...well, I wouldn't use the same words, but yes, that fits her." It's here that Dildoes' eyes go wide. "Has she manifested to you in any way or form? In your dreams, maybe? Because that should be impossible--"

No. You just saw her, during a seeing. You've also heard of her, but only through someone else's memories.

Dildoes and Braids visibly relax here, while Murderface remains impassive. "Good. That's good. She shouldn't be able to." The former gestures towards your Shield. "Otherwise, everything would've been for naught."

...Right. Well.

What about Kyoko? They mentioned something about her. This isn't the first time you've met her, is it?

"No, it's not." Dildoes shakes her head. "Although, I would definitely recommend not--"

"K-Kyoko-chan's good! She's a good friend! Please stay with her! Don't make her angry!" Braids suddenly cuts in, adamant. "Please! Whatever you do--"

"--Quiet." Dildoes snaps, icily. "You will have your turn. Let me talk to her first."

"B-but--" Braids glares at the other reflection, before bowing her head a few moments later. Effectively cowed.

"...Right. Now, before I was so rudely interrupted..." Dildoes shakes her head. "I would recommend not bothering with Sakura Kyoko, or Sayaka Miki, or even Tomoe Mami." It's here that she smirks. "They will die, one way or another, and there's nothing you can do to stop that. Just do what you're supposed to do, and finish it."

"N-no! That's cruel! They've always been there for us!" Braids tries again, unable to hold herself back any longer. "Everyone tried to help us in the end!"

"And we betrayed them. All of them." Dildoes counters calmly. "It's no use trying. We don't need to concern ourselves with riffraff."

Murderface merely shakes her head at this, raking a clawed hand through her ragged, matted hair.

...Wait. Wait. You're still trying to get all of this into your journal - for you to hopefully understand later - but couldn't you just rewind time, then? Back before all this started?

Silence, as both Dildoes and Braids stop in mid-argument, turning towards you with something approaching irritation.

"Well, that's a novel solution, isn't it?" Dildoes flips her hair - AGAIN - before crossing her arms under her chest. "It's not like we tried it ten thousand, nine hundred and forty-eight times already."

"I-it's not going to work! It's never going to work!" Braids is in tears now, clearly frustrated. "We made the wrong wish! It wasn't going to solve ANYTHING! What we need to do is to fix things, not make them worse!"

"Besides, you're no longer part of the chain, remember?" Dildoes points towards your Shield. "Whoever did that had the foresight to sever you from the rest of us and prevent another loop. This is clearly the last one." She smiles, hard and brittle. "One last chance to do what's right."

But in Chiaki's barrier, there were four fragments:

Moemura
Murderface (AKA Chiaki Matsuda)
Warped Fragment (armored) and RibbonHomu.

We know that Moemura and Warped Fragment were killed during the fight with RibbonHomu, but were still subsumed to recreate a coherent psyche. RibbonHomu was also killed, but we don't know what happened to her. Since there's another fragment in the Deagle that isn't armored or Moemura, we can presume that RibbonHomu is none other than the Dildoes we see in the mirror.

Murderface/Matsuda is not present since she was chosen as the vessel that would bring the whole person together again.

But Malal mentioned that the RibbonHomu fragment would never rejoin the collective willingly. We knew that we'd either have to do some slick talking or beat the hell out of her to make her submit.

It's here that you look up from your journal. They do know about Pinky, right?

"Pinky?" Dildoes' brow furrows, while Braids manages to stop sobbing enough to wipe her eyes, blow her nose, and blink at you through her tears. "I don't...we don't follow. Pinky, as in your little finger?"

No. Well, sort of. But it's a name you made up for the black-eyed girl who haunts you whenever you stop time with your shield. You call her pinky because of her costume, and her hair, and--

"No. No, no, no." Dildoes is the first to react, her eyes going wide, all color draining from her face. "No, no. That...that's not true. That can't be true." She looks wildly at the other two reflections, before sinking down to her knees, both hands grasping at the sides of her face. "This...this means we've lost. She's turned. We can't save her. We're too late. We were too slow to initiate the last sequence, now that she's turned--"

"NO!" Braids shouts, enough to stun Dildoes from her sudden trance. "W-we still have hope! We still have her! We can't give up now!"

"Don't you get it?!" Dildoes snarls, getting back up shakily to her feet. "We are FIVE minutes to midnight! Madoka can't be saved any more - she knows what we did, and she'll be spending the rest of eternity making sure we suffer for it! The only way we can put things right now...the only thing we can do is...!"

A sob tears itself from Dildoes' throat as she turns away, her icy countenance all but completely shattered, now.

What? You narrow your eyes here, and glance at Murderface. What are they fighting about? What the hell's going on? What's the only thing you can do, now?

+ KILL. + A jagged, rusty shiv of a pulse stabs itself into your mind, making you wince visibly at its migraine-sting. + KILL. MADOKA. +

"It's the one last thing we can do to save her," Dildoes mutters bitterly through her own tears. "Her manifesting to you like that means...means we have to kill her to save her." She shakes her head. "Too much sin. Too much hate. Too much damage we've done to her soul and sanity already."

She turns to you. "Get the Golden Weapons. All of them. Use them to kill her, in the realm where gods and mortals meet." She taps at her Shield. "Only then you'll be able to save her."

You narrow your eyes at this. That doesn't sound much like saving someone. More like putting down a rabid dog.

"Do you think we WANT it to be this way?" Dildoes spits at you. "This is the only way to save her. We're not sacrificing this last timeline for our fool's errand." She shakes her head. "We...we need to let her rest. It's done. It's over. She's been corrupted." She manages a tremulous laugh, one laced thickly with defeat. "All...all those loops. Gone. For nothing."

You glance at the other reflections. Braids is silent, her head hung low, her shoulders shaking. She's probably crying again.

But Murderface...she's looking at you. Silently. As if trying to find some way to say something but, for some reason, can't.

+ NOT. ONLY. WAY. + The pulse finally finds it way back to you in a pain-filled stab. + FIND. GOLDEN WEAPONS. KILL. TRANSCENDENT ONE. +

"And HOW is that supposed to help?" Dildoes snarls. "Even if she manages to kill the Transcendent One, that still leaves Madoka! But even worse off than how she was back then! +

+ MUST. TRY. + Murderface growls at Dildoes. + MIGHT. WORK. +

How do you react?

And even then, there's still one insane god left hanging around, except now it's even more insane because we just killed the only thing keeping it in check?

“Sayaka-chaaan~!” Mere moments after Miki Sayaka stepped into the crappy fast food joint a few blocks from her apartment, she was struck by a bullet of white, yellow, and pink-red, one that nuzzled into her neck not unlike a cat from the moment it connected. “Holy carp, I didn’t think you’d actually come!”

“Come on, have I ever stood you up before?” The blue-haired girl snickered, wedging her hands between the two of them to pry her friend off. “I’ve got a favor to ask, anyway.”

“…You can let go now,” she murmured after a few lengthy seconds with no luck. The little American didn’t look like much, but once and a while, her Eversor showed through. A moment later, a shiver down Sayaka's spine as enthusiastic nuzzling turned to nibbling, and she tore the smaller girl away. "Christ, Amber, everyone's staring!"

"Only 'cause you started yelling, dummy." It was a small relief, at least, that Amber was still Amber. Whatever she'd had to do since…whatever the hell happened, she had the same grin, the same playful glint in her yellow eyes. Sayaka worried about her. She really did. "And anyway, it wouldn't be weird if you just let me come over to your place."

"Come on, you know I can't do that. Kyouko'd get the wrong idea. You'd GIVE her the wrong idea."

"Well that's just mean. I've got enough love for two! She can sleep at the foot of the-okay, okay." Amber giggled, seemingly unfazed by Sayaka's withering stare, and the two idled together among hushed whispers as they waited to order.

Ten minutes and a tray piled with an enormous amount of junk later, they sat in relative silence, neither quite sure how to bring up what they wanted to talk about. Deep, blue eyes met shining amber time and again, and Sayaka almost spoke, almost. It wasn't supposed to be hard, or anything. She just needed to get her sword fixed. But that wasn't what she was worried about, exactly, either.

"Hey, Amb…" she finally began, only to be cut off by a few fries being delicately shoved into her open mouth.

"Gotcha~ So how've you been? How's the Equerry thing going? Do you need me to kill her?" They'd talked about it a couple of times before. Well, Sayaka hadn't really MEANT it that way. Maybe. Mostly. She didn't want to have to mean it that way, and she didn't really think Amber took her that seriously. "'Cause I'm gonna be honest, I have all kinds of pent-up frustrations, here. Like, wow."

"I don't-" When the Equerry opened her mouth to reply, another fry slid into her mouth. "Quit it!" But even so, it was hard not to laugh. Amber was a pain in the ass, but…she was refreshing, too. A lot like Kyouko could be. "I don't know. I mean, she's getting…better? Since she got back from her…vacation, we've almost gotten along pretty well."

"Aww, if I knew all it took to butter Sayaka-chan up was a promotion, I would have become a Warmaster years ago." Amber leaned on the table, resting her head on one hand as she fed her lover(?).

"It's not-" Fry. "It's not like that! She's really been trying to clean up her act. I don't really get it-" Fry. "I don't really get it, but-"

"I bet it's for Fatty. And Miss Mammies."

"Fatty? And don't-" Fry. "Don't talk about Mami-san like that." The blue-haired Eversor had more or less resigned herself to being fed at this point. Not like it was hurting anything – she knew Amber hadn't tampered with these. Probably. It would have been hard.

"Green Fatty. The one she was makin' out with."

"Oh, Midori-chan. Yeah, maybe? She basically treats her like a body pillow, though." Fry. "Something soft she can do whatever she-" Fry. "-wants with, because they won't stop her."

"Ahaha, is that really her name? Omigod, that poor fatty."

“Yeah, seriously…” The next fry she took slower, nibbled on in deep thought. “So how’re you doing in…uh…whatever it was?” Sayaka felt like she made a mistake the moment she’d said it – a shadow crossed Amber’s normally bright features, and though she sprung mostly back into place a second later, the very edge of it remained.

“Still crazy, still stupid. I’m running out of people to talk to, now all I can get from Sab and Wendy is like ‘bawww some animal died bawww my girlfriend bawww everything is the end of the world’, and Jade pretty much just follows Wendy around.”

Wendy. Wendy Wendy Wendy, again. Sayaka opened her mouth to-Fry.

“I still can’t tell you, Sayaka-chan. Yet. Maybe. That’s kind of what I wanted to talk about…” Her face fell, and the fries finally stopped. The little American cleared her throat and covered her mouth with her hands, forcing out a faux-trumpet fanfare.

“This is an invitation to Warmaster ‘Murderface’ Matsuda and her associates to formally discuss a temporary alliance with the Church of the Golden Land.”

“…What?” She nearly dropped the burger she was raising to her mouth.

“The Church of the Golden Land wants you.” Amber stood just enough to reach over and poke Sayaka in the chest. “There’s somebody that’s causing us and the Warmaster both trouble, so we figured we’d get your help. Maybe, you know…build up some trust between us.”

The Equerry knew it, looking into Amber Nakajima’s eyes. ‘Save me, Sayaka-chan’. That’s what Amber wanted to say. This was her chance to do something about all the vague…vague bullshit she’d been fed every time they’d met. Would have been better if she could just bust in somewhere and start cutting people apart, but-

“Sooo can you talk to her about it? And it’d be good if you came, too. And maybe Miss Mammies? But probably not Miss Mammies. It’ll be me, Wendy, Jade, and a few local reps. We’re not going to ask you to come unarmed or something, but, y’know. Maybe tell her not to start shooting people.” The American’s expression was cool (by her standards), her voice quiet.

“…When? We’ve got a mission soon, but…”

"Get ahold of me when you're done and we'll set up a time, mmkay?" She relaxed back into her seat and unwrapped a burger, as though nothing at all were wrong.

"You did WHAT to her? What…how? I know she's pretty hard on herself…" While the rest of lunch had been kind of awkward, the favor Sayaka had to ask seemed to kick things back into a normal pace for the two of them. Amber clutched, as she put it, the broken remains of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie, the faintest vestiges of tears in her eyes.

"…I broke her in a fight with Murderface."

"The crap did she use? A black hole? Some kinda super-laser? The power of friendship?" Amber squeaked as she ran her fingers over the blade, then hugged it close. "Poor baby…"

Sayaka scratched at the back of her neck.

"She was using Kharn's old weapons. The gold ones."

"…Ah. Yeah, I guess those are pretty hardcore." A moment of silence passed between them. "So how bad did you beat her? Pretty bad, I bet. For hurting my baby."

"… …Y…yeah. …I beat her…pretty bad." Sayaka stared at the ground, mumbling out her half-assed lie. She squeezed her eyes shut when Amber started to laugh.

"You lost to a Vindicare, didn't you? You got beat by a Vindicare! Oh crackers! Wow. Just…just wow." It was all Amber could do, really, to not cry as laughter overtook her.

"She got a lucky punch! She was still juiced up by the fucking golden axes!" The Equerry snarled as she tried to preserve the pride she had left.

"It's-it's okay, Sayaka-chan! I still love you! But, um, I'll be the husband, okay? You can…you can stay home and raise the ki-hi-hi-hids-!" Another peal of laughter overtook her, nearly sending her sprawling on the ground. "Oh man I'm gonna pee myself…!"

"Just fix the fucking sword, Amber. I need it for the mission."

"Hee, yeah…yeah, okay…yeah…Mmm." The redhead wiped a tear away from her eye. "I need to borrow a lab, though. Could you get me in?"

"…Sure. I'll make up a reason. I'll just…tell them you're a consultant, or something." She let out a small noise as Amber's arms squeezed tight around her again, sword still clutched in one hand. …She didn't try to push her away this time. This time, she held her close, just for a minute, and ran her fingers through silky red hair.

"…Hey, Amber. I'll…I'll get you out of there, okay? Don't worry."

“I was never worried, Sayaka-chan. You’re my hero, y’know.” It felt like a long time for both of them, and even then, it wasn’t nearly long enough. At least, for Amber. Sayaka already felt bad for doing THIS much, but the American’s smile made it worth it. It wasn’t wide, joyful, or exaggerated, like usual. If Sayaka didn’t know her as well as she did, she might have nearly missed it entirely.

Just a soft curve or her lips and a small light in her eye, then a gentle kiss on Sayaka’s cheek. For a moment, there were no masks or pretenses between them. And then, though it was only briefly there, it was gone, shattered by a bark and a sharp salute.

“Sayaka-chan! No witnesses!”

“And no discounts.” Sayaka returned her salute, less enthusiastic but no less crisp.

She’d get her in the R&D lab as soon as she could. And if she could talk Murderface’s dumb ass into it, maybe she could finally make good on her promise.

Maybe she really could save her.

When do you think we are going to get around to Midori telling us the full picture of what happened in Siberia thread-wise? Feels like knowing that Godoka exists separate from Pinky will be really useful info to have after the convo we just had with the fragments.

Also how long do you think the next mission is going to take? I really wanna see that cult arc since sounds fun, but I don't think I can wait another year at the pace we are going.

Sayaka making assumptions about Chiaki is pretty much her MO, If you haven't noticed. The only time Sayaka has seen us with Midori is at the housewarming party so anything else she thinks she knows is secondhand info from Kyouko and her own assumptions.

To be fair, she's partially right. Chiaki has, so far, doted on Midori, but more than that she treats her as someone she can trust implicitly.

Also, my meeting is over, I caught up with the thread.

So, have her do information analysis by going back through Officio records to recreate Chiaki's personnel file and find out what Malal redacted?

Malal's bow wasn't ever referred to as Golden, so we're assuming it was just the regular Madoka bow. It seemed to hurt her to use it, but that may be a side effect of a Culexus trying to use their innate magic despite their own personal fields.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/19/14(Sun)09:03 No.29625354

You look at your three reflections, before looking back down on your journal. Narrowing your eyes at a particular pair of words that you've circled a couple of times.

'Transcendent One'. Flashiness aside, it does sound like some sort of shitty final boss that you have to beat at the end of the game. And...well, you hate to say it, but as far as malevolent insane goddesses are concerned, Pinky's kind of grown on you a little. You'd hate to have to be the one to put her down. Not that you doubt there'd be a time for it, or that you'd be forced to, but you're not exactly looking forward to it.

Besides, killing a superpowered, godlike version of yourself? That sounds much more appealing. Much more...brutal.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/19/14(Sun)09:05 No.29625366

>>29625354

It's here that you nod at Murderface. You're not making a decision yet, here - it'll be a while until you can get all the Golden Weapons anyway - but you're definitely leaning towards her suggestion.

"Really? You believe this walking advertisement for a car accident insurance company?" Dildoes jerks her head towards Murderface irritably, netting another growl from the third reflection. "Look, the only sensible thing to do here is to...to give her what she deserves. A clean death. Let's not let her suffer anymore for our folly--"

"...I-I agree with Miss...Miss Murderface," Braids suddenly squeaks out, wiping at her reddened eyes with a silk purple handkerchief. "I...this is our fault. We should...we should be the one to suffer for it, not her." She looks at Murderface, then at you, nodding sheepishly.

"Not you too." Dildoes groans in frustration. "Look, I realize that our main objective has always been to save Madoka. But with the existence of...of Pinky, or whatever it is you've decided to call her, everything has changed. SHE CANNOT BE SAVED. We have pushed her past the breaking point, and then some. Do you understand? We have already failed. Killing the Transcendent One will do nothing but leave this last timeline in the claws of a twisted, corrupted abomination of a deity!"

+ WE. OWE. IT. TO. HER. + Murderface snarls. + OWE. IT. TO. MADOKA. +

Dildoes narrows her eyes at Murderface, then at you, before shaking her head - one hand reaching up to pinch the bridge of her nose. "Idiots. I am in a room FULL of idiots."

Idiots, huh? Is she aware that she'd just called practically called herself--

"Yes." The long-haired girl snaps. "I am."

Right.

...How did this happen, anyway? What did they do to Madoka? How did she turn out to be like this?

[2/3]

>> ☐ Deculture 01/19/14(Sun)09:07 No.29625379

The three reflections glance at each other in turn, and it's Dildoes who lets out a sigh. "I suppose it should be told, if it's come to this." She clears her throat into a fist. "In so many words, Madoka, in one of our more successful attempts, achieved apostheosis. She wished to erase the existence of Witches forever - and in doing so became a god."

"We should've been happy with it then." Braids cuts in, bitterness leaking into her tremulous voice. "I-I mean, it still hurt, to know that she wouldn't be remembered by anyone, n-not even by her own mother, but...Madoka helped everyone! It was the best for everyone, but..." She lets out a sigh of her own. "We couldn't just leave this well enough alone..."

"We tricked her," Dildoes continues, just as Braids' voice trails off into silence. "We tore her down from the sky with our own bare hands, stealing her away into another timeline and sealing her powers and memories enough that she was no different from a normal girl. No different from her former self."

You blink at this, and open your mouth to ask how - but Dildoes raises her hand before you can speak. "I won't go into the details of it, because it involves some unnecessarily-complicated metaphysics - but it involved a lot of cunning, guile, and a nearly successful attempt at Incubator genocide."

It's here that she smiles. A small, cold smile. "And love. I suppose I shouldn't forget that."

Another clearing of the throat. "In any case. It worked for a while, until she started remembering things. Things we didn't want her to remember. And she'd try to take her rightful place, to try and repair the damage we'd wrought. Never once blaming us for what we did, never accusing us of betrayal or greed or selfishness. Only sadness, regret and disappointment."

>>29625379

"No matter, though. We were so enamored with her, so...focused on living the rest of our lives happy with her that we just wiped her memory, sealed her again, and shoved her into another timeline. It would never last as long as we wanted it to, though - just when we thought it'd be, she'd remember again. And we'd have to..." It's here that Dildoes' voice starts to catch, a bit. "...we'd have to resort to much more drastic measures to make her forget, to make her all right again."

She shakes her head. "It...I suppose it got to her. Something happened, we don't know just what, but on one of the timelines, Madoka fought back. She didn't want us making her forget anymore. She escaped before we could get to her, and sealed herself away somewhere she thought we'd never find her."

...Where's that, then?

"The moon." Dildoes shrugs. "By the time we discovered where she was, though...we also found out that Madoka had fragmented half of her soul into twenty golden swords, and flung them down to the Earth below. Making the feat of unsealing her from her own self-imposed prison a bit of a task, as we need to put her back together first before waking her."

Another sigh. "This brings us back to now. The Transcended One has been attempting to gather all of the golden swords, but for some reason or another, she hasn't quite succeeded. She gets closer with every timeline, though - as such, we've decided to make this our final stand. The final timeline. Where we get all the Golden Weapons ourselves, rescue Madoka, and set her free to become who she once was, once more. But, seeing as she's manifesting to you now as a corrupted being..." Her shoulders droop, here, and she hangs her head.

"Maybe...maybe if we find this timeline's Madoka?" Braids suddenly speaks up. "S-she'd be a big help, right?"

Dildoes frowns at this. "We made a pact not to involve them, but..." She grows thoughtful, here. "We could definitely use her, I suppose. It's her timeline at risk, too, after all..."

How do you respond?

She's a walking armored pincushion of regret, made from all of the times that the Procedure in Siberia failed and she killed Kharn, Midori, Misaka, Mami, Kyouko, and Sayaka, as well as the entire Ninth.

...Yeah. About that.

"Hmm?" All three of your reflections turn to you, hopeful. Dildoes in particular looks quite pleased at this development. "Ah, would you know of this timeline's Madoka, then? If you do, then that makes our work easier. She should be a great resource to help you get all the Golden Weapons under your control, and--"

She's dead, you cut her off, and it's here that each of them react in pretty much the same way - a slackening of the jaw, a paling of the skin, the brow upturning in a split second of complete and utter despair. A stark, if a bit amusing reminder that you were all still the same person - no matter how different you seemed to be from each other.

"B-but how...?" Braids is the first to break the silence, her voice cracking. "S-she wasn't supposed to be involved, we all agreed to it...!"

You shake your head here. She involved herself, you think. Long before you yourself got mixed up into this mess, too. And from what you've learned, she got herself killed seeing to a huge, long term plan that you're still discovering the extent of. You're not exactly sure what the plan is for, but...it's helping you out so far. Somewhat, anyway.

Silence, again, before Dildoes breaks the silence. "Regrettable, but if she's left you something to go on, then she's done all she can. Certainly...certainly more than we have any right to ask for." She looks up at you. "Did you know her, then? This Madoka?"

Yes, and no. You're supposed to have been friends with her at one point, but amnesia said fuck you to all of that. ...She was a decent person, though. A bit rough around the edges, maybe, but she seemed genuinely nice. Someone you wouldn't have minded to meet all over again, if you were given the chance to.

Each of your reflections look at you with envy. "At least you got to be friends with her," Braids murmurs, before looking down, crestfallen. "I-I wish I could've held her hand at least once..."

"We've all made sacrifices. There's no need to discredit them with something as crass as regret." Dildoes snaps, but it's a half-hearted barb, one that doesn't even make Braids flinch. It's obvious the news of Malal's - no, Madoka's - death had shook her.

It's here that she takes a deep breath, before looking directly at you again. "Now you know what we know. Do you realize what you need to do? Your path lies clear before you?"

Yeah, you think so. You've written most of this down on your journal, too, so you won't forget.

"...Hmph. There may be just hope for you yet." She nods here, seemingly impressed. "For all of us."

"Do you have any more questions, then?" Dildoes adds after a while.

Is there anything else you'd like to ask?

The only difference that the Golden Weapons have except for super-special properties that they can manifest (of which the Deagle has none so far) is that they are unbreakable. This is very useful on melee weapons that otherwise run the danger of bluntening but for the firearm it doesn't make much of a difference except for reduced jam-probability.

We don't have damage metrics on exactly -how much- stronger the weapons are than normal weapons, but it seems pretty clear that they'll fuck up even a Meguca in a way that most mundane weapons won't.

Yes, they can. Or since you don't seem to know what "from the leg down" really means, it would turn what the knee is into a hole with a bit of skin on the left and right left and that'd be it mostly.

At the same time, the Golden Deagle can obliterate a person's head and decapitate limbs with a single shot. It is obviously not a normal weapon.

"Golden eyes?" Dildoes blinks at this. "Well, that's how her eyes looked like during her apotheosis, back when she was still uncorrupted. Why?"

Well, it's only that you've seen her eyes go from black to gold sometimes, when she starts to act all weird and clingy. Actually, she's always clingy, but whenever she gets going with the lovey-dovey stuff, she gets all warm and her eyes change to that color.

"That's...!" Braids is the first to speak up, cutting you off as she leans forward eagerly. "That's good, right? That means a part of her's still okay! She's not all gone--"

"--yet." Dildoes finishes for Braids, crossing her arms under her chest. "I won't disagree that it's an encouraging sign, but we don't know if it's really what's left of her trying to reach out, or simply a trick of the corrupted self." She shakes her head. "My recommendation remains the same. Get all the Golden Weapons, and use them to kill Madoka. It's time we stopped trying the impossible and move on. To get on with your lives."

Murderface glares at Dildoes, before turning to you. + IGNORE. THIS. LOSER. KILL. TRANSCENDENT. ONE. + She taps a clawed finger on the glass in front of her. + COUNTING. ON. YOU. +

Braids also shoots the long-haired reflection an irritated look. "Even with her corruption, Madoka's still trying to reach out to us. To you. Please, try to reach out to her too, when you can...a-and be nice to her, even when it's difficult to!"

...Easy for her to say, since she's not the one getting tongue-fucked in the mouth along with blood-saliva.

"W-what?!"

Nevermind. There's...what about the thing about...well, you? You're not supposed to be here, and you're...you're a bit different from them. Your Shield is on a different arm entirely. What the hell's up with that? Can you still do what you're supposed to?

The three reflections glance at each other in turn, before Dildoes gives a small shrug. "We probably would've been concerned a few hundred loops back. But if you're able to understand what we just told you and not blow your brains out through your chin, then we'll take what we can get."

Right. You're not sure whether to feel insulted about that.

"Come, now. Even when we were still a knock-kneed, stuttering waif, we had thicker skin than that, and--" It's then that the dark room suddenly begins to fill with light - blinding, searing and painful. "Well. That's the cue that says this conversation is over. We'll get back to you soon enough." Each mirror starts to crack, loudly, jagged shatter-lines spiderwebbing over the once-pristine surfaces. "Remember what we told you! Don't forget!"

Yeah, you won't. Your journal will take care of that.

Before you get back to reality, though - is there anything else they can share with you? A tip, a clue, anything that can help?

"Green hair is the danger!" Dildoes yells, just as Braids' and Murderface's mirror explodes into shards. "GREEN HAIR IS THE--"

You open your eyes again, and find yourself back in your personal vault. The Golden Desert Eagle sitting in your hands, as if you've never let go of it. The weapon resting underneath your journal, opened to the last page where you'd been scribbling.

...Well. Fuck. That was a trip.

You're definitely going to have to spend a while thinking about everything you've just learned.

Jesus. Just when you thought you knew something about what was going on--

It's here that your smartphone vibrates, notifying you of an SMS message. You place the Desert Eagle back in its inset, stuff your journal back into your inventory, and see what the message is all about.

It's from Mami. It's a bit uncharacteristically hurried of her, but stranger things have happened.

>Items of interest and packed lunch on your office desk.
>Didn't see you this morning but heard about you training with Sayaka.
>Take it easy on her, okay?
>Will be out of the office today, too, but don't hesitate to call if you need me!

Hnh. Well. There's a thing.

...Yeah, you probably should get lunch. The only thing you've had all day post-Sayaka is a handful of pills, and your stomach is starting to growl. And you've had enough of the Golden Weapons for one day, you think.

Before you leave the vault for your office, however, you decide to take one of the Golden Weapons with you. Might as well, right?

That would feel really contrived. It would require the 10th to know that
1. Chiaki would choose the same assignment as Midori.
2. Chiaki would actually break free of the illusion and capture her.
3. Chiaki would not just kill her outright on the spot.
4. Kyuubi would choose to rewrite the contract.
5. Chiaki would accept responsibility and not let her be killed.
6. Chiaki would grow so close to Midori, rather than just dump her on someone else later.
7. And so on. There are too many things that would ALL have to go right for Midori to get into a good position to betray Chiaki. It would be silly for the 10th to have foreseen all of this. If he had access to this kind of future seeing, he would be in a FAR stronger position than he is.

Chiaki woke with a start, her head aching from yet another hangover. Her eyes slowly adjusted to the mid-morning sun as she regained her composure and slowed her beating heart. A vibration noise turned her to the nearby nightstand where her phone was ringing.
"Who's calling this early? Thought I had today off?" Chiaki slipped out of bed, picking up her now still phone, seemingly missing the call. Glancing at the screen, she noticed she had multiple missed calls, all from Mami. It seemed as though Mami had been trying to call Chiaki since early morning.
"Fucking hell, can't I get a single day off?" She brought up her contact list, angrily tapping the name 'Tomoe Mami' and put the phone to her ear. After 3 rings, a sobbing voice on the other end picked up. "C-Chiaki-san?"
"Sorry I missed your calls, I was dead to the world. Thought today was my day off. It IS, right?...wait, why are you crying?"
Mami took a deep breath before responding. "You need to come to the office. Now. Please."
"What's wrong?"
"Please, just get here."
"Oh...lemme get dressed and I'll be right there."
Upon closing the call, Chiaki felt a weight in her stomach and a sense of dread. Something was wrong, especially if it made Mami cry, so without a thought, she transformed into her costume, grabbed her Warmasters jacket and left her apartment in a hurry.

The wind in the streets of Mitakihara furiously blew her hair as she barely succeeded in pulling it into her usual ponytail. The dreadful feeling grew as she walked, her heart beating erratically.
'Why am I feeling this? It can't be that bad, can it? I mean, Mami-san seems like a strong woman, but what can make her cry?'

Turning a street corner for a straight shot to the Ninth, Chiaki wracked the shield on her arm, the gears inside grinding as the world was flooded with a grey tone. She looked all around, expecting the pink haired abomination to show her sharp, bloodied teeth, but to Chiakis surprise, Pinky was no where to be seen.
"Oi, if you're out there Pinky, and you know what the hell is going on, mind giving me a heads up before I probably make worse whatever it is?"
Nothing. No hide nor hair of the demon. Shrugging it off as Pinky being a bitch, Chiaki turned her shield as the colors of the city returned and time resumed.

Stepping into the main lobby with what felt like a 2 ton weight in her stomach, Chiaki made her way towards the elevators as the other employees of the Ninth avoided her eyes, barely issuing a 'good morning' or a 'hello'. 'What the fuck? Is everyone going to avoid me today?' Chiaki stepped into the elevator, pressing the button for Kyubeys office floor. 'That would be pretty nice, actually.'
The elevator came to a halt as Chiaki stepped into the single room before Kyubeys main office. The mood couldn't have been any more somber; Mami sat at her secretary desk, eyes reddened from tears. Her white blouse slightly wet from wiping her eyes with it. Kyubey sat at the front of the desk, his beady red-pink eyes staring at Chiaki.
"Glad you arrived in a timely manner Matsuda..." Kyubey looked to the floor, a hint of sadness coming to his voice. "We have...some bad news."
Mami stiffed back her tears as she stood and walked over to Chiaki. "I tried calling you once I heard."
"W-what happened? What's going on?"
"Midori...Midori-san is dead."
Chiaki nearly choked on her own breath as she heard those words. "Kuh...wait, what?"
Mami just stared into Chiakis eyes, tears welling up as she starting sobbing. "W-we found out last night. She...was drinking and got into a fight with what we think was a thief. We're guessing he, hnnff, got a hit on her Soul Gem...we were only able to find a small shard of it." Mami looked towards a small box on the desk next to Kyubey.
Chiaki slowly walked to the desk as her mind went numb. Opening the small, wooden box, she found a crimson shard sitting inside.
"You...you must be joking right? Midori can't be..." Touching the shard in the box, Chiaki froze as she tried to feel for Midoris Soul Gem, only to find a feeling of nothing. "Dead. She's...dead."

"No. Nonononono, that-no, she can't be dead!" Chiaki grabbed the crimson shard from the box as she turned to Mami. "Please, tell me this is just a joke. Please, for the love of god, tell me this isn't true!"
She fell to her knees and hands as tears began pouring down her face. Mami knelt down before her, pulling Chiaki into a hug.
"I'm so sorry Chiaki-san. If there's anything you need, just ask me, okay? We're all here for you."
Chiaki buried her face into Mamis chest, sobbing through her words. "This is all my fault...s-she wouldn't be dead if I wasn't such a stupid fuck up!" Beating her fist on Mamis shoulder, she crumbled completely. Mami held her close, petting her in an attempt to comfort her. "It's not your fault Chiaki-san..."

"Hic...yes it is..." Chiaki pulled back from Mami for a moment, wiping her eyes with the sleeve of her costume. "I-I said some things to her last night that I shouldn't have...if I had just listened, then none of this would have happened."
Turning her head up to look Mami in the eyes, Chiaki sobbed out her words in haste, as though if she didn't say it now, her tears would drown them out.
"She told me she loved me. I knew some things had happened in Siberia, but hearing her say that set me off the wrong way; I accused her of lying, that she was just saying that to get on my good side. I knew she thought of me as something greater than a friend, but I took her confession and slapped her with it!" Her eyes swelled with tears again as Mami wiped a few strands of hair from Chiakis face. "And because of my stupidity, the one person who has ever told me they loved me is...is..."
Her mind finally gave way to the pressure. She cried and cried until she passed out in Mamis arms, the blonde Vindicare cradling her Warmaster like a child.

The next few days were all a blur to Chiaki. She kept herself locked inside her apartment, save for Midoris funeral. The funeral itself went without hassle, despite being outside and with only a handful of people going to the service. To Chiakis surprise, Kharn, Misaka and Souji showed up to pay their respects.
Misaka walked up to Chiaki, who was sitting in the back, her eyes reddened from tears and sleeplessness.
"Will Murderface smile again?"
She looked up to the childs worried face, the brown orbs glistening with tears. "I'll try Misaka. It may take some time, but I'll try..."
Misaka placed Big Pete on Chiakis lap, the toy slightly damaged by rough play by her owner. "This one wants you to give Big Pete to Broccoli Head...Misaka did not like her, but never hate."
Chiaki patted Misaka on the head, the little girl beaming. "Is Misaka a good girl?"
The Vindicare stood, giving her best to smile. "Yes Misaka, you're a good girl."
She started walking through the rows of chairs before Kharn approached her. "Murderface, you holding strong?"
Chiaki stared into the red pupils of her old partner with her deadened eyes. Kharn took this as a sign to keep Chiaki from speaking. "Losing loved ones hard...but their memory will live on. I know this."
Kharn grabbed Chiaki into an embrace, holding her friend close. Chiaki breathed deeply in order to keep her imminent sobs from sounding out.
"But even then," Kharn whispered, "pain does not go away. I know how you feel Murderface. Malal may live on in memory, but pain of loss remains forever." She gripped Chiaki tighter, a few tears slipping from here eyes. "You are strong. You will remember her."
Chiaki gulped back her tears as Kharn released her. A whispered 'thank you' escaped her lips as she started walking towards the casket, Big Pete in hand.

The casket was lowered into the ground, Big Pete placed into Midoris eternal embrace. The friends that had came slowly left after everything was said and done, leaving only Chiaki and to her surprise, Kyubey.
"You can take the next week off Matsuda. I'll have Miki and Miss Tomoe take care of everything in your steed."
Chiaki simply nodded at the statement.
"I'll leave you to your own devices then. I'll have someone check on you tomorrow."
Kyubey patted away, leaving Chiaki alone in front of Midoris tombstone.
"...I'm so sorry Midori..."
An empty, glass whiskey bottle rolled across the floor of Chiakis apartment, colliding with a growing pile of cigarette packs, pain pill bottles and other whiskey bottles. The ping of glass on glass snapped her out of the drunken and pill-raddled daze she kept herself in for the past few days. Grunting as she stood from her favorite green chair, Chiaki stumbled through her apartment to the kitchen. A few more bottles of alcohol were surely left in the cupboards.
She found two half bottles of vodka, gifts from Kharn after her trip to Siberia to thank her for putting everything right then. Staring at the Russian water, she grabbed a bottle and flung it across the kitchen, shattered shards of glass and vodka going everywhere. Chiaki slid against the lower cabinet doors, letting herself sit knees up, thoughts and memories of Midori coming to the front of her mind.

"Why did this have to happen? Why couldn't I have just died in the barrier I was found in? People would be better off without me..."
She cried out to the emptiness of her apartment, tears pouring out and staining her leggings as she rested her head against her knees. The world around her seemed to slow to a halt, her sobs of heartache echoing. Everything around her became washed with black and white as an all too familiar voice picked at Chiakis ears.
"H-Homura-chan?"

Pretty simple
Bemgay like many pain creams causes the area it is applied on to feel hot, now this can range from warm to very hot and this is on regular parts of your skin

Now imagine, smearing this heating cream all over your very sensitive and more importantly heat sensitive testicles

You should be able to imagine the rest

Chiaki looked up with surprise to see her pink haired demon friend standing in front of her, looking down. She noticed something was off though; her eyes were tinted grey instead of pure black, with a hint of pink showing in her pupils. "W-what do you want? Please, leave me alone..." Chiaki placed her face back into her knees. "I don't want to deal with the world right now..."
Pinky knelt down in front of Chiaki, her voice sounding more passive and reserved than Chiaki ever heard. "I'm sorry, Homura-chan...even though I hate what you did to me, I never would wish this upon you." Chiaki looked up a bit, staring into the red-pink eyes of her time-frozen companion. "Heart break is something that no one should have to suffer through, no matter what happened...if I could bring myself to change this, just so you could have that one person to keep pushing you through my little game, I would. But I can't."
Pinky leaned forward, wrapping her arms around Chiakis neck and held her against her chest. "Again, I'm so sorry that his happened to you, Homura-chan. Please believe me." The sobbing, raven-haired girl slid her arms around Pinkys back, holding her.
A sudden flash, and the world is back to color, Pinky dissolving before Chiaki in a pink mist, leaving her alone in her apartment once again. She picked herself up off the floor, grabbing the other bottle of vodka and drank the rest before she made it back to her green chair. Plopping down into it and letting her body go limp, Chiaki stared forward at a display she'd been looking at for days; her Soul Gem sitting in a small glass of whiskey along side the crimson shard that once was Midoris Soul Gem.

~~Apparently it didn't fix it. There's supposed to be breaks between the casket scene and the apartment scene.~~

The sight brought her to tears again, the vodka not having quite the effect she hoped for. She cried out for Midori, kicking the legs of the chair with her heels. "I wish I didn't say those things to you Midori...you didn't deserve to hear them." Chiaki closed her eyes, letting her words flow. "Why'd you choose to love me? Of all people, why me? I didn't deserve you...but you clung to me, even saving my life. And how did I repay you? By calling you a s-spoiled brat with an unhealthy obesession!" She beat her head against the head rest of her chair, screaming out, not caring who or what heard her.
"Please...someone, tell me what I should do? I can't go on like this..."
As if answering her request, the Golden Desert Eagle materialized in her hand. Its metal cold against her palm instead of the usual warmth it would give. She brought it up in front of her face, staring at the weapon. "Is-is this...the answer?" The weapon glinted in the dim light of her home, Chiakis hand shaking.

She brought the gun forward, shakily aiming it at her whiskey doused Soul Gem. Clenching her eyes shut as tight as she could, Chiaki whispered out the words she wished she could have said before.
"I love you...Midori."

Bang.

A shocked Chiaki Matsuda sat straight up, the sound of a gunshot ringing in her ear. As everything came into focus, she realized she was in her bedroom, the sun already up and filling the room with warmth.
"W-was it all a drea...MIDORI!"
In haste, Chiaki flew from her bed, rushing through her apartment and calling out for Midori. Reaching the living room, Chiaki found her friend slowly waking up from the noise she was causing.
"Uagh...what's wrong sempai? Why're you yelling for me?"
"M-Midori...you're alive." She slowly walked over to Midori, pulling her into a hug, as she began crying.
"Sempai, what's wrong? You're crying."
"I had a nightmare..." Chiaki hiccuped and cried through her words. "Y-you were dead. I seen you dead. I said some very mean things and you were killed..."
Midori chuckled at her words. "It's okay now sempai." Pushing her forward and kissing Chiaki on the forehead, Midori gave her Warmaster a gentle smile.
Chiaki smiled. One that felt like it could shatter any despair that would come her way. Staring into the crimson eyes of the person who would give her life for her, Chiaki felt the words she needed to say come without pause or hesitation.
"I love you, Hanegawa Midori."
"I love you too, Matsuda Chiaki."

Behind a framed picture of Chiakis closest friends sat a small, wooden box, locked with a heart-shaped lock. Inside lay a shard of pure crimson. And next to it, a shard of pure violet.

The time we've spend in the ivory tower and with Idols really seems to have warped some people's perception of what the job actually entails.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/20/14(Mon)07:06 No.29650485

You decide to take your Desert Eagle with you. You still dont' want to bother Yuu's rest, you've had enough of Risa for one day, and Kirika can just go and fuck herself. ...Well, no, you're still curious how using the Muramasa, post-procedure, would actually be like - but you're not just in the mood to fuck around with it now.

With the oversized handcannon now back in its rightful place - glinting from a snakeskin shoulder holster strapped around your form, its comfortable weight settling against your side - you immediately feel like things are properly getting back on track, now.

With the Golden Desert Eagle within your reach in case you need to shoot anything in the kneecaps, and the journal Wendy gave you at hand to help you note down the really important things - it's starting to feel that you may just be able to get a good handle on this Warmastering thing. As well as, you know, the entire deicide-suicide mission that your past selves dropped on your lap.

Now if you could only do something about hurting all over.

Argh. Fucking bullshit. Jesus Christ. Next time you have the bright idea to challenge Sayaka to a goddamn sparring match, you're going to shoot yourself in the kneecap for the disqualification.

It's not worth it. Nothing is worth limping every time you take a step in your fucking heels, or feeling like each of your ribs are sticking into your lungs every time you take a breath.

Despite all this, you manage to stalk your way to your office without too much hassle. And just like Mami said, your lunch is on your desk - along with what looks to be a pile of important-looking paperwork.

...This is what it's come to, is it? You sigh as you slink behind your desk, letting yourself fall into your high-backed mafia boss chair, at the same time tearing off your Warmaster Cap and letting it fall onto your desk. Vindicare Murderface is dead, long live Watch-Wearing Dildo Warmaster Chiaki Matsuda? Should you actually go out one of these nights and buy a fucking watch?

You look down on the pile of paperwork before shaking your head. Kharn never had to fucking go through one piece of paperwork in her career. It's not fair.

Then again, she did have Malal, so...

You let out another sigh - most certainly not your last - before picking the pile up and shuffling through them.

Hnh. Well, this doesn't seem to be that bad. You have two transferring orders that require your authorization, three retirement benefit packages for you to sign off on, three new contract notifications, Mami's Interrogation Report, and...what looks like a very ornate envelope, made out from very expensive paper. And it's even got a wax seal, of all things, the symbol II pressed into the solidified adhesive.

...So it's from the Second, then? Strange.

What do you do now?

[]Look at the message from the Second, see what it's all about. The rest can wait.

We really need to do that staff briefing, though. Unless Blueberry was handling that in private. We can talk to Midorin after that, since she and Kumatora are getting office duty.

Also, I'm toying with the idea of asking her to take Eversor training with Kyoko, and to keep an eye on Blueberry for "pretending to be her" purposes.

I'm thinking it might be handy if Midori could "play Equerry", letting Sayaka actually be somewhere else.

To be fair, there isn't actually any boring stuff mentioned.

Retirement benefit for MGs is heart warming. New Contractees is depressing, but still interesting. Even transfer orders are curious.

Mami probably wouldn't have left that stuff for us specifically unless she thought it would be useful for us to see.

I agree with this guy. Mami probably already took care of the really boring stuff behind the scenes, leaving behind only the truly useful stuff.

Anyways, voting period was done a while back, so Decu's probably working on the new post now.

Urk. You can feel the gold-plated, diamond-encrusted watch wrapping around your wrist already, the leather strap a luxurious manacle chaining you to your desk. Girl A. Murderface. Chiaki Matsuda, doing paperwork. It's a nightmare you never thought you'd be living, but here you are, and there's no waking up from it.

...Christ. No need to be so fucking dramatic. It's...it's just paperwork. Just pieces of paper you need to deal with. After you've cleared your table of them, you'll be free for non-paperwork stuff. Yeah. Maybe go and bother Kyoko, or something. Or maybe even call Midori and have her give you a backrub. That'd be nice.

You set aside the message from the Second to focus on the Ninth-related stuff first. Your girls come first, after all, not some bunch of posh-speaking...tea...guzzlers. Yeah, okay, you don't know much about the Second, but you're not going to put them over your own Officio.

Anyway. You pore over the the first batch of documents, that being the two transfer orders. Two Vindicares - Iwakura Honoka and Hino Setsuna - are asking to be transferred to another Officio. The former, a four-year veteran, wishes to temporarily transfer to the Fourth, to study with their Mechanicum division for an entire year. Hino Setsuna, on the other hand, wishes to transfer to the Seventh, citing 'irreconcilable differences with her squad mates'.

You briefly check the Magical Girl Primer about transfers, flipping through the long-winded book to see what kind of procedure is followed. You quickly find the passage you're looking for: 'While transfers may be approved or denied by the presiding Warmaster without an interview, it is usually recommended that an interview actually be conducted, most especially in the case of permanent inter-Officio transfers.'

Hmh. So you can just approve or deny a transfer without an interview, then? That's handy to know.

What do you do?

We should approve Honoka and arrange an interview for Setsuna. But at same time we should try to meet with Honoka just so we can meet learn more about that sort of stuff.

It would be good to learn more about the megucas that are working for us and also gives us a chance to get more background info on how the officios work. Though we can always just schedule this for later instead of immediate, just so we don't waste that much time.

Also for Setsuna, we should probably also arrange meetings with her squadmates beforehand just so we can have the other side of the story and have a bigger picture of what the problem is.

Honestly, I'm inclined to just scare Setsuna a bit so that dealing with her squadmates seems like less effort than trying to deal with us.

If she can't get a backbone here, moving to another Officio is unlikely to help.

Honoka seems like a formality, which makes me wonder if there's something more to it than meets the eye. Or if Mami is just using her as a test of sorts for us.

After we're done playing Office Lady Simulator 2014, we should go forward to Kyuubey with a proposal to expand the Office of the Warmaster beyond a handful of part-time employees. We have cultists to stomp and golden weapons to acquire, we can't let Officio business prevent us from completing our actual quest.

First, Chiaki and Sayaka should each have full-time secretaries to schedule appointments and sort paperwork. Mami is lovely, but I think we'd be better served by girls whose schedules allow them to actually remain in the office during office hours.

We should also obtain additional aides or underlings that we can delegate the mundane tasks and meetings of the job. Kharn got by with just Malal, but expecting Sayaka to shoulder Malal's workload on top of being Eversor Rank Leader is...unrealistic. Additional aides empowered to act on our behalf for the boring shit leaves us with handling only the ceremonial duties of the office (like presiding over trials), and the decisions that actually require the real Warmaster's approval.

In practical terms, this would ideally mean more of our future Quest time will be dedicated to...questing.

I think it may be better to give her a chance solely because this may be a good chance to improve our reputation. Even though this is thinking too gamewise, think of it more as a reputation slider event instead of simple fluff text event. If we are willing to hear her out and give her a chance then it will make us look better and more diplomatic in the eyes of the people under us, alongside of it also giving a good impression to the Seventh if she transfers.

Same with Honoka, if we actually do the formality then it make us look more involved as a warmaster and shit as though we actually give a shit about the job instead of being indifferent, which may be good for morale.

That's only to say that this is actually one of those events and isn't just background fluff.

It's worth doing this at least once to see what's involved, even if we're only here to say "well that was a waste of time, we can give this to someone else to deal with".

At the moment we haven't got a good grasp of officio politics and shit. Going through at least once might actually tell us some things, like "holy shit what's this cult thing and why are so many people involved in it" or "why has there been 20 girls killed on 20 assault missions with this crew and how come no-one's bringing it up"

>> ☐ Anonymous 01/20/14(Mon)08:30 No.29651653

This whole, dealing with problemed girls in our officio thing reminds me of a quote from Kharn, off all people. About how we should handle this.

>"I do not expect everyone to get along but I do expect some degree for professionalism from those in the employ of this officio"

It's partially how I modeled my view of Chiaki as a Warmaster. Kharn may have loved killing and fucking, but she took the work seriously... for the most part... and she had Malal. But she did care for the girls she was in charge of. I figured Chiaki would model herself after that aspect of Kharn when it came to being Warmaster.

You decide to approve Iwakura Honoka's request. Rifling through your desk drawers, you find the Ninth Officio Warmaster's official rubber stamp seal, along with an crimson inkpad that smells quite strongly of turpentine.

Glancing over Honoka's request, you press the rubber stamp into the inkpad for a few seconds, before lifting it off and carefully pressing it onto the form itself. The stamp leaving behind the Officio's symbol - IX - along with what looks like a superdeformed depiction of Kharn's smiling face.

...You should probably look into getting your own stamp made, huh?

You decide to hold off on approving Hino Setsuna's transfer, however. As reasonable at it seems - irreconcilable differences with your team mates may be a trivial thing in a regular jackoff's life, but when you depend on the Magical Girl beside you for your own survival, well...you just want to make sure that you know where she's coming from, first. That means an interview.

You open up the laptop that you contacted Mami with, earlier. Yes, you know she said she'll be out, but hopefully she left someone else to help you in this kind of thing. You could call her, but you'd rather not interrupt her day for something so trivial.

Who greets you, then, is a pink-haired girl with glasses and what very much looks like office lady attire. Goutokuji Fuu, her nameplate reads. She blinks at you a couple of times, as if wondering just who you are - before completely going red as she recognizes you.

"O-oh! Miss Matsuda! I...I apologize, I wasn't prepared, I, uh, I'm--" The girl is visibly panicking here, clearly not expecting you. "G-good afternoon! W-what can I do for you today, Miss Matsuda?!"

...Right. Yeah. You return the greeting after a few false, awkward starts, before asking her if she could help you call in two Magical Girls to your office. Transfer interview.

"Oh, of course, Miss Matsuda! T-that won't be a problem!"

It's...every single day? You have to do this every single day?

Nnnh. Sooner you can have Midori set up here as your secretary, the better.

While you wait for the two, you look at the three contract notifications. You don't need to take any action on them, you remember - they're just for the Warmaster's benefit, to know who was contracted recently.

>Shinohara Tsukasa, Age 15, Eversor
>Hanazono Sasami, Age 16, Vindicare
>Kanzaki Ichigo, 15, Venenum

...Well. A bit young, and that's always a shame, but...

You feel relieved, in a cold, detached way, that you didn't see Iori's name on the list.

You stamp them anyway, just to show that you've looked them through.

As you're about to look through the last set of paperwork, it's here that you hear a knock on the door leading to your office.

"Warmaster?" A polite, but firm voice comes from behind the heavy oaken door. "This is Iwakura Honoka and Hino Setsuna. You asked to see us?"

You blink at this. That was quick. You tell Honoka to come in, first. Setsuna can wait for a bit outside.

A bit of a muffled conversation, and the door slowly creaks open to admit a young crimson-haired girl through. She's wearing the typical Vindicare battle gear that you've seen Squad Hiryu wear - and from the looks of her pockmarked armor, you've just called her out of a particularly heated training op. She doesn't seem to mind, though, her blue eyes wide and bright, lighting up her face along with her somewhat nervous grin.

"Good afternoon, Warmaster. Iwakura Honoka, Vindicare of Squad Kiryu." She bows once as she approaches your desk, and bows again as she stops in front of it. "I...I suppose this is about my transfer request?"

How do you begin this interview?

>"I do not expect everyone to get along but I do expect some degree for professionalism from those in the employ of this officio"

Inspiration strikes:

"The new Warmaster is sooo cool!"

"She is! How does she do it!"

A sound of heels tapping against the floor interrupts the girls' chatter. They turn around to be met with a faceful of smoke, coming from the lips of their subject of interest.

Chiaki Matsuda stares. She still doesn't know what to do with these... Situations. And she still doesn't like how the girls can completely ignore the smoke entering their lungs. Fucking eversors. Still, she's trying to do a good job, and may as well show it.

She's taking Kharn's words to hearth, she tells them.

"Kharn's!" Yelps one of the girls.

"T-The previous... Warmaster?" The other girls says with a suddenly very small voice.

Chiaki frowns. That's not what she was expecting, but then again, what's new? Changing tracks, she adjusts her Warmaster hat and looks at the girls' eyes with as firm a look as she can manage.

She speaks with surety: She'll take care of her girls, they can be sure of it.

The girls' eyes widen, and they all stay still for a second. Chiaki congratulates herself for not screwing up, and brushes past the girls who were blocking the hallway. As she turns a corner, she attemps to look back and smile, inadvertently letting her ponytail flip around.

The loud sounds of two bodies hitting the floor was not expected.

I have advocated in past threads against tipping our hands in conversations, but I'm not sure what we're gaining by withholding here. While I agree with you (people being super happy to blab about everything to everyone is one of my pet peeves with this quest), I don't really see any point to withholding information here.

Besides, I want to be sure this really is as straightforward as it seems, and we can't do this without leading the conversation a little.

Assuming it's as simple as it seems, we didn't even need to call her into the office, and Mami will probably just approve this kind of thing in the future straight off for us. Got no beef with the fourth, we aren't planning anything that would make sending a girl there dangeous, so... yeah.

Resulting in the 1st sending someone to take care of it and then smack our shit around for not being diligent in our work.

You nod. You tell her that you've approved her request, so she doesn't need to be worried about that.

Honoka blinks for a few moments, before letting out what sounds like genuinely-relieved laughter. "R-really? I'm...my transfer's approved?"

She doesn't need to take your word for it, you tell her as you hand over her stamped request form. There's the proof, right there, with the Warmaster's Approval stamp and everything.

"I..." The Vindicare's eyes go wide as she takes the form from you. "I can't believe it. A-and here I was worrying all month that it'd be denied!" Honoka tears her gaze away from the piece of paper in her hands as she looks up at you. "T-thank you, Warmaster! You don't know how much this means to me!"

It's...it's really nothing. You didn't see the point of denying the request. It's for her own growth, anyway, and whatever she learns from the Fourth, she'll be able to pass along to the other Vindicares of the Ninth.

"Yes, yes of course!" Honoka couldn't have nodded fast enough. "Um, is...is this why you sent for me, Warmaster?"

...Pretty much, yes. You just wanted to tell her personally, as well as ask her about her choice of the Fourth. Why the Fourth, specifically? And is there some other reason besides wanting to study?

"It's...it's always been an ambition of mine, Warmaster." Honoka clutches the request form to her chest. "I promised myself that it'd be the first thing I ask for after basic training, but things got too busy, and...well..." Her smile becomes slightly strained, here. "I, I wanted to go while I still could."

Ah. Well. You feel you made the right decision, here. You tell her to make full use of her year with the Fourth.

You stand up from your seat and offer her a handshake. She readily accepts, pumping your hand up and down energetically. ...Honoka's a good head taller than you, and definitely not as noodly. You very nearly wince at her holding your fingers tight enough for them to creak, and you're positive she shook your arm out of joint a couple of times, but you manage to keep a poker face throughout.

She leaves after thanking you profusely, and it's here that you call Hino Setsuna into your office.

In contrast to Honoka, Setsuna looks...well, haunted. Tired. One eye is sealed shut from scarring, her lower lip bisected by a cut that didn't seem to have the chance to heal properly. She is wearing a shrine maiden's outfit, white and red, properly crisp and pressed. Her long black hair tied into one tight braid.

"Warmaster." Her voice, soft and cultured, is completely at odds with her appearance, making you blink a couple of times in surprise. The way she bows is formal, too, overly so. She probably would've kneeled if you let her.

You wave her forward to your desk, and she bows as she comes to a stop in front of it. Her one good eye, scarlet in color, bores into yours for a few long moments, and it's here that she bows again.

"I apologize for making such an audacious request, Warmaster. I would have liked nothing more than to die for the Ninth. But I must transfer to the Seventh, for personal reasons. I hope you will consider it."

...Ah. She's one of those types.

[x] Ask her to explain the "irreconcilable differences". If necessary, point out that if her squad is causing trouble for her, you need to know for the sake of not just her, but others who might have trouble aswell.

Also offer to transfer her to another squad. If she insists on the transfer, ask if the irreconcilable differences was just an excuse and if she has just grown tired of combat or somesuch. Offer a non-combat position in that case.

If there is no way to resolve her problem, then approve of the transfer. Ultimately a depressed, bitter and angry MG forced to stay against her will would just end up causing trouble and possibly get others killed.

Setsuna's one good eye seems to narrow as she continues to stare at you in total silence, before she finally nods. "Squad Taiho is not at fault," she begins. "There are no irreconcilable differences between me and my squad."

...Then what's this written on her transfer request, then? Because it says just that.

"I was advised by my own squadmates to use that as my official reason for transfer. They assured me that it would mean an automatic approval." Setsuna shakes her head, her face still curiously clear of any emotion whatsoever. "I see now that such a belief is based only on hearsay and guesswork."

You shake your head here. At least there isn't any bad blood with her and her squad, but...there's probably something about entering false information on official paperwork. You'll have to look that up later.

For now, though. What IS her real reason for the transfer?

"Revenge," Setsuna replies, unblinkingly. "My family was killed two years ago in an avoidable accident, with the culprit remaining at large, even safe with his own family. I wish to finally put my soul to rest by enacting justice." It's here that she draws something from the inside of her sleeve and places it on the table. It's her Officio ID card. "As I realize this violates our Officio's rules and regulations regarding civilians, I wish to be transferred permanently to the Seventh, so any action that I may take will not be traced back to the Ninth."

...Ah.

Setsuna bows again. "Please do not try to dissuade me from this path. I have spent most of my waking hours trying to convince myself of the same thing, through meditation and prayer. But I cannot rest while the souls of my family rot in their graves, waiting for a justice that will never come." She looks up at you with cold conviction in her one good eye. "I must do this, Warmaster."

How do you respond?

I'm not quite satisfied with her wanting revenge for an "accident." Or I should say I'm not satisfied with her wording. An accident implies nobody was at fault. If it was intentional, that is a different story. The families of our girls are under the protection of the officio if I remember correctly. If someone were to murder one of our girls relative it becomes and officio matter. A living family makes for happier, more productive girls. We have a vested interest in keeping them alive because it keeps grief down. I would see no reason why we could not grant her permission to get her revenge.

Continue with the questioning, and ask if she knows who the guy is.

Justice is not a natural phenomenon. There is no element of justice. There are no particles of justice.

It is an illusion in the minds of humanity, and only by the involvement of humanity can it ever be realised.

You return Setsuna's unblinking stare, before taking her transfer request and handing it back to her, unstamped and unapproved.

"...I see." The young woman's shoulders droop a bit, but otherwise her expression remains unchanged. She begins to bow, until you stop here by speaking.

You're denying her request, you tell her. In fact, because she lied on her request form - you're also suspending her for...three days. Yes. That should be enough. During which she will have none of the privileges, duties and responsibilities of a member of the Ninth Officio.

It's here that Setsuna seems to react visibly. "I must protest, I--" She begins, but suddenly falls silent as you continue to stare at her. Waiting for her to realize what you've just said, to let it all sink in.

Three days should be enough, yes? To resolve everything?

"...More than enough, Warmaster." Setsuna's scarred lips twist into something approaching a smile. It's a twisted, ugly thing more resembling a sneer than anything else, but it's a smile nonetheless.

Just one question, though. Who is it?

"A politician," The Vindicare replies after a moment's hesitation. "...My apologies. I don't mean to conceal information from you, Warmaster, but I wish to keep my target to myself."

Ah. Well. At least it's not someone you know.

You take her Officio ID card and shove it in one of your desk drawers, before waving her away. Setsuna bows to you again, before backing out of the room, closing the door behind her.

Right. Okay. That's...half of the stuff done.

You get to the retirement benefit packages now. ...Well, nothing all that contentious here, just papers waiting for you to authorize the benefits of three Magical Girls. Three Magical Girls that managed to beat the odds and live long enough to enjoy retirement.

You stamp each paper without looking at their names, and dump them onto the finished pile. The less you have to look at them the better.

The lucky fucks.

Okay, no. You'll do a lot of things without blinking, sure, but reading your best friend's mail isn't one of them.

You open your laptop again, and tell Fuu to call up Kyoko to your office. Important business, top priority.

Also, for Hino Setsuna to be suspended from the roster for three days, effective immediately.

"O-of course, Warmaster--"

You shut your laptop before the pink-haired girl could even finish her sentence. Lighting a cigarette, you glare down at the gilded, elaborate envelope with Kyoko's name on it, sitting there on your desk, all innocent and quiet like that.

No, you don't know what this is about, but you're not liking it. Not one bit.

Kyoko comes barging into your office three minutes later, in form-fitting workout gear and completely covered in sweat. You blink at this, suddenly unable to tear your eyes away from her bare, glistening midriff.

"Yo, Murderface!" The red-haired Eversor grins, dabbing at her forehead with a fresh white towel. "What's up? I heard you were asking for me? Something going on or what?"

You take a drag from your cigarette, before holding up the Second's letter up with your free hand. Kyoko blinks her one good eye at it, and it's here that you see the color drain from her face.

"...Aww, it's another one of those?" She shakes her head, before wiping her face with her towel. "Man, those guys are really persistent, huh?"

What does she mean, another one? She's gotten one of these before?

"Yeah, like three of them! Just got one last month, too!"

Huh. Well, what is it about, then?

"Well, uh..." Kyoko looks at you from above her towel, before shaking her head. "Nah, just go on and open it, read it for yourself."

Really? She's okay with you doing that?

"Sure! It's mine after all, I can let ya read it, right?"

Jesus Christ. Parchment? Is this fucking parchment? The Second writes their goddamn letters on parchment? Haven't they ever heard of e-mail?

You shake your head, and unfold the papers. The print's...no, it's not even printed, it's written. With actual ink and flourishes to the letters and shit.

>Kyouko Sakura,

>After last year's Walpurgisnacht, our Officios have shared a tremendous burden and lost many women both dear to use and important in our operating structure; it is the Knights' sincere hope that this may strengthen the bonds between the Second and the Ninth even further; it is when times are at their darkest that we must be at our most vigilant, lest our eternal struggle against despair overwhelm us and turn us to heresy.

>It is with that very spirit - and with great personal joy - that I am sending you this latter. Through careful monitoring and deliberation, we have come to believe you possess the rare set of skills and rarer mindset necessary to join the foremost legion of witch-hunters in the world. It is our honor, then, to deliver a writ of invitation to the Black Templars of the Second Officio Assassinorum, effective immediately if you so choose.

>Apologies for stealing one of your Eversors, but we've been heavily reviewing replacement candidates since the Betrayer wiped out nearly our entire Templar squad last year. Out of the Ninth's operatives, only Sayaka Miki and Kyouko Sakura passed all of our preliminary testing, but we wouldn't be foolish enough to request a transfer from your Equerry. Sakura, however, would be a magnificent addition to our witch-hunting forces, and while I understand you'd be suffering a great loss, I humbly request you look carefully at the bigger picture before you approve or deny this request.

>If you want to be cynical, you could also consider this a request for reparations regarding the Betrayer's killing spree last year. I won't confirm or deny that, myself, but it's going to take some doing to placate Her Majesty if you refuse. Heretics, suffer not the witch to live, etc. etc.

Simply put, they're asking Kyouko. That means she gets input. If she doesn't want to go, she doesn't want to go. That's not on our head, and Alondight has no right to imply that we should force one of our top Eversors to change Officios when she doesn't want to. Especially given the office politics clusterfuck that would result.

So, we tell the Second that, while we do not deny their request, she does. The Second can't raise a ruckus without seeming petulant, given that we, as Warmaster, have cooperated with them--it's just that the girl in question chose not to transfer.

If it's any consolation, I don't see how we could have talked her down from that. If we approve her transfer, she kills him. If we flatly deny her transfer, she still probably kills him. If we try to throw her in the silent room she hits her despair limit break and witches out in our office.

That's only because some of the Third's Magical Girls refused the order to stand down and went rogue. This was after the big fight with Ahriman, and they were hunted down by the entirety of the Ninth's increased numbers.

And if you'll look at our current Officio corporate roster, 2 of the 3 MG's who did that are gone, and the last one has been drastically reduced in capability.

That's like saying that just because the Sarduakar at their height were equal to a Ginaz Tenth Level Swordmaster and a Bene Gesserit Adept, that they can still wipe the floor with the Fremen, when we're talking about the Sarduakar during the reign of Shaddam IV.

Found it. Thread 62.

>Each Incubator has their own method of establishing a contract, each with his own unique twist to the process.

>Some choose to approach their prospect through a dream, passing themselves off as an otherwordly being prone to fits of supreme generosity.

>Others choose to follow the media's contemporary portrayal of fictional magical girls, acting like the ridiculous chirping blobs of fur that defecate sugary treats and gemstones(these Incubators you have long since chosen to cut yourself off from, and despite their attempts to reestablish contact, you have considered them dead to you).

>A few - thankfully - choose to play up the Faustian Deal pastiche to the hilt, promising disenfranchised young women the justice - the power - that they deserve in order to take revenge on whoever they believe wronged them, in exchange for their souls. This was the approach you'd started out with, and for a while you thought it was a convenient way of going about things.

>After all, there was nothing like making it known to the prospect that everything was downhill from then on - that they would have one last chance to do something significant with their pointless, worthless lives. You offered them a beautiful, meaningful death, instead of the slow, ignoble decay that they were currently on.
>100% chance of establishing a contract, sure, and you didn't much mind that their life expectancies never went on longer than a week or so before they expired. As long as they gave the output you expected, you thought little else of them other than expendable. Walking biological wreckage.

>That all changed when you established a contract with Mami Tomoe.

>Yeah. Yeah, everyone knows that. Any Incubator makes it a point to mention it when they present the contract, and it's always in big, bold print.

Earlier in Koobee Quest it also mentioned that Vanus and Venenums had been "eliminated", which we have since learned is definitely not the case, especially with the Thirteenth.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/23/14(Thu)08:06 No.29724134

You wave the carefully-folded, carefully-illuminated parchment at Kyoko's direction.

What the hell is this? Some fancy-pants Officio from overseas trying to steal your aide AND best friend? No, no, and no. This shit does not fly in your Officio. Just because they went all-out with the presentation and the language does not mean you'll be saying yes to this kind of bullshit.

So, no, the uppity bastards can just forget it.

Kyoko seems stunned for a second, before managing a rather bashful grin.

Somehow, you have the feeling that she'll remember you saying no without asking for her opinion first.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/23/14(Thu)08:06 No.29724141

>>29724134

"W-well, ya know, Murderface, they're not just THE fancy-pants Officio, they are kind of the most hardcore? I mean, uh, it's their Black Templar division, right?" She stands up from the couch and takes the letter from you, pointing to the severe-looking heraldic cross emblem at the end of the letter. "You get to be a Knight and everything! A title, your own suit of armor, and a horse! A-and the Queen has to be there to whap you on the face with Excalibur, so it's all official! Plus, all the haggis I can eat!"

You look at Kyoko, and you could see that there's stars shining in her eyes as she's talking about it. Like how a kid gets when he's gushing about being an astronaut, or a firefighter, or one of those idiots in spandex on TV doing silly poses and advertising toys.

Well, all that does sound cool, you agree grudgingly, but...it's Britain! Or Great Britain, or United Kingdom, or whatever the hell they call it now. That's pretty fucking far away, far away from everything! What about...what about the Ninth? What about Sayaka? And what the fuck is haggis?

"I...I dunno?" Kyoko seems just as puzzled as you. "But I heard it's really tasty, and very posh! Only rich people eat it, with the pinky out and everything!"

Hnn. Something tells you that Kyoko's not telling you the whole story, here.

[]Is everything okay with you and Sayaka that I should know about? Domestic violence?

Given everything else she's worked through, I'm sure not even age difference would deter Midorin.

All seriousness now: Decu's connection is working again.

Thank you for your patience. Everything should be back to working order soon.

The estimate that Homu is 900 years old is likely lowballed quite a bit.

From thread 170:
>"...We broke at the ten thousand, nine hundred and forty-eighth attempt." Dildoes remarks here, her smirk gone, replaced by her businesslike emotionlessness. "But we kept trying, even then. Until one of us was broken enough that she did the impossible. The unthinkable."

912 years or so of looping before Homu went nuts, then kept looping for an unspecified amount of time before the ~~AI YO~~ hit the fan.

You narrow your eyes at Kyoko. Is there something you should know about that she isn't telling you?

"H-huh?" The red-haired Eversor blinks, here. "N-no, I don't...I don't know what you're talking about, Murderface! A-ahahaha!"

You shake your head here, before stepping forward and grabbing your best friend by her bared shoulders. You tell her that while you respect her relationship with Sayaka, and it's probably none of your business - but if you ever find out if there's some hardcore DV going on in their household, you'll be the first to beat some sense into Sayaka, Eversor Rank Leader or no.

"W-what?! DV?!" Kyoko's eye goes completely wide, here, before furiously shaking her head. "Get the fuck out of here, Murderface! Don't even joke about that kind of thing! Sayaka'd never do something like that!"

You glare into the Eversor's one good eye for a moment longer, before nodding and leetting your hands fall back to your sides. Well, you're just saying, is all. What other reason would she have to want to transfer to the Second, if not for Sayaka? Add to that, what else would make her stay, besides Sayaka?

"It's...it's just, you know." Kyoko scuffs the floor with a well-worn sneaker, her head down. "I kind of...want to be a hero too, you know? Like one of those Knights, charging in to save the day, on a really big horse, with my own standard and everything..."

...You can put her on permanent Search and Rescue duty if she wants. And maybe get her a goddamn horse, you can probably have Kyuubey buy her one. Whatever else she wants, you'll make it happen.

Kyoko frowns here. "Ya know it's not really the same, Murderface." Her frown softens to a thoughtful look, before it's replaced with a smile, a pink tinge on her cheeks. "B-but, it, it kinda feels good that you're trying really hard, you know?"

Now you're the one frowning. Of course you'd try your best, you don't want to lose Kyoko. It wouldn't be the same without her.

...Besides, Sayaka would've done the same thing, right?

"Yeah, probably."

'Probably'?

"Yeah, if I told her about it." It's here that Kyoko shakes her head, a rueful grin on her face. "Geh, I don't even want to know how she'll react if I tell her. Probably just chain me to the bed or something."

You mean she doesn't?

"What?"

You shake your head. Nothing. You didn't say anything.

"...Uh, alright, Murderface." Kyoko blinks. "But, um...I guess..." She glances down at the letter in her hands, then back at you. A moment later and she holds out the parchment, gesturing for you to take it. "Pretend I'm not your friend, Murderface. Just one of your Eversors, askin' for a transfer authorization. Just tell me yes or no, don't worry about me. I just...you know, if you don't want me to, then I won't. I just want to hear it from you clearly."

Being a hero isn't as easy as throwing yourself at witches.

she's doing an amazing job within our officio, not to mention keeping Sayaka sane. Being in the spotlight all the time isn't what being a hero is all about.

Well, there are two schools of thought on the matter.

One is that we won't consider what she wants, and the other is that she realises that we think that she's so important to the Officio we won't let her go.

At the very least, we need to make Kyubey get that girl a pony.

>> ☐ Anonymous 01/23/14(Thu)11:18 No.29726209

I hope decu picks something that won't harm our Kyobro relationship. I think there are more than a few good reasons why murderface would say no to the second to hand over any random girl.

Foremost in my mind is that little sarcastic quip at the end directed at us. We can be a hundred times as petty as they ever could. We can just return a note by ourselves, in horribly written drunken handwriting, saying, "If the second can not muster the manpower needed to take care of a few witches, you can always just send a few missions to the 9th. We can pick up your slack for a while." Sealed with wax repurposed from a Makers Mark bottle.

Right. If she wants you to pretend that she's not your friend, and to not think of her feelings, and just think of her as one of your best Eversors - then no. No, you're not giving up one of your best, and most reliable staff on hand to another Officio. You don't give a shit if the Second gets pissy at you because of this - they can choke on their haggis for all you care. Fuck those holy Knight dildoes.

Kyoko is silent at this, her mouth slightly agape, her one eye wide and staring - before grinning and catching you in a crushing hug. Quickly suppressing the instinct to pull out your Desert Eagle and pistol-whip her off of you, you allow the physical contact to take place, as warm and as sweaty as it is.

"Hahaha! W-well, if my Warmaster says I can't, then I can't!" She draws back to look at you, an expression of complete relief in her face. "See, that's why I voted for ya, Murderface. Mami-san didn't even need to tell me to - I knew you'd be great Warmaster material! Ahaha!"

Wait, she voted for you? FOR the Warmaster position?

"Sure! Was the first one to!" Kyoko thumps her chest proudly. "Made Sayaka write your name down on the ballot too, even though I had to do a whole lot of chores for that, hahaha!"

You're not too sure what to say to that.

But...she's okay with you saying no? She did sound like she really wanted to go.

"Well, you know, it'd be nice and all, with the armor, an' the title, and everything..." Kyoko grows pensive, here. "But that's kinda like suddenly sneaking out of the band and selling out, you know? I'd be letting Sayaka down, an' Mami-san down...and not to mention the runt I call my best friend, hahaha!" She puts you in a headlock here, grinding her knuckles playfully on your scalp. "If there's anything I learned, it's friends that're important! Just as important as family!"

So the both of you are cool, then?

"Super cool!" Kyoko cheers as she releases you from her headlock, only to give you a hearty slap on your lower back. You very nearly feel your knees give out at the loud, crisp impact. "Haha, to think I just needed to ask you, Murderface! And I was really losing sleep over this!"

Well, you're glad you can help.

"A-anyway, I gotta run, too, Sayaka-chan's meeting me for a late lunch, said she wanted to talk to me about something important!" Kyoko grins at you one last time, before making for the door. "You go and eat your lunch too, Murderface, before it gets cold!" She gestures to the wrapped lunch on your table, and you nod at this. Maybe later, yeah.

"Alright! Thanks again, Murderface! Later!"

You hear the Eversor's rapid footsteps recede as she sprints down the hall - and you shake your head before returning to your chair. That...was probably one of the most difficult decisions you had to make.

Seemed like you made the right one, in any case.

It's here, then, that your laptop beeps for attention - and you open it. Instead of the harried, pink-haired girl, who you see instead is Mami. Seems like she's in a very expensive restaurant, from the looks of it.

"Chiaki-san!" Mami beams, smiling. "How's everything? Are you holding up well with the daily Warmaster tasks I've left for you in your office?" She blinks for a moment, before squinting. "...Wait, you haven't eaten, have you? It's past lunchtime already, you know!"

...What? How'd she know that?

"I can see the packed lunch Midori-chan made you's not even open yet!" She pokes a well-manicured finger at the screen. "I want you to have lunch as soon as you can, alright?"

...Kyoko's already beaten her to the punch, there, but you'll make sure you do, yes.

Mami sighs, but regains her 1000-watt smile mere moments later. "Well, alright. Now...how is it being a real live Warmaster, Chiaki-san? Did you have fun?"

How do you respond?

[x]This job is dildoes, but manageable, I think. I still prefer jobs where shooting people is the appropriate solution, though.

When asked whether Monologue was a he or a she.
>"Could be either, though sometimes they smell of sticky sweet corruption. Girls smell of corruption right?" Risa asks rubbing her wrists.

I swear there was something about Monologue wearing pink too.

So either Azure and Decu are conspiring and Monologue/Pinky is involved in some giant crossover mess, or they're just conspiring together to fuck with us.

Yeh, I was kind of happy we could grant that one girls assassination request, one way or another.

When(if) she comes back, we need to remind her that she could have just submitted a formal assassination request. She must have forgotten who we are or something. We could have sent her in with her squad, they could have had a nice bonding moment over his dead body.

I said it in the last thread. If he is responsible for the death of a girls family, he is responsible for her despair, he is no longer a civilian. Especially if a girls family is supposed to be under officio protection. Even worse is the fact that he is sheltered by power and influence of his friends. So there is no possible way she could ever get justice. The primer is more like a guideline, as warmaster we can make acceptions.

Honestly? It's...you're not too sure how Mami is able to handle this kind of paperwork, day in and day out. It's tedious, time-consuming, and nerve-wracking. How does someone sit down and deal with this, and not immediately Witch out? It's mind-boggling.

And no, it hasn't...it hasn't been fun at all. She turned you into a dildo. A watch-wearing dildo. And you don't like it very much, thank you.

"A...a watch-wearing what?" Mami blinks here, her cheeks flushing red, before she giggles. "O-oh! That! Hee, well...I was anticipating that you'd be a bit averse to paperwork, Chiaki-san, but not quite like this." The blonde smiles at you again. "Still, I did want you to get a tiny slice of what a Warmaster goes through every day."

A...tiny slice?

Mami nods. "I gave you, um...I suppose five percent of the total daily workload of a Warmaster, Chiaki-san. And no, before you ask, it's not all transferrals - it's also stuff like item acquisition, training reports, staff requests. Stuff a Warmaster needs to acknowledge as well as sign off on."

Five percent? That's...wow. You can't even fathom just how tall the remaining 95% pile would be.
